Bigger, stronger Tigers host Satellite

BY DONNIE WILKIE

The Martin County High School Tigers take their first step toward a possible post-season playoff berth Friday night, as they host District 10 AAAA foe Satellite in the 1979 season opener at Tiger Stadium in Stuart.

Much has been made of the Tigers' first collision with the Scorpions in years, mostly because MCHS Head Coach Fred Chase came to Martin County in 1978 straight from the Satellite campus.

Chase is the first to admit the importance of Friday's game, although he stresses two reasons.

"Sure, I'd kinda like to beat them," he said Tuesday, as his team was recovering from the practice delay caused by Hurricane David.

"It might not mean a lot to them (Satellite), but it sure means a lot to me," added the coach. "I coached there for four years -- sure, I'd love to beat them."

If anything, the Tigers, who most consider the major threat to Merritt Island's eternal grasp on the district title, will be bigger and stronger than in 1978.

"We were a trickier team last year," said Chase, "but this year we're big and strong. Whether we're a better football team remains to be seen."

Many feel the reason for huge Tigers, like defensive stars Mike Vaccarella and Greg Wright is Chase's extensive off-season weight-training program, which he installed when he came to the Tigers.

David McCaughey returns to lead the Martin County offense, having passed for more than 1,200 yards in 1978, when the Tigers lost only twice.

On the other end of his zips will be tight end Brad Larsen, of Jensen Beach, and wide receivers Ricky McHardy and David Jensen. Jensen also serves as the backup quarterback.

Running the ball will be Port Salerno standout Ricky McGahee and Palm City's John Box, although Chase has many backs capable of doing the job. Tailbacks Dave Lambert and Tony Harris, as well as fullback Gene Hall can all produce yardage behind a huge offensive line that averages as much as 210 pounds per man.

Knee injuries to all-purpose back Sherman Conrad, receivers Jeff Smith and Robert Taylor have put their status for the opener as "questionable," although the Tigers were considering using Conrad for spot situations, if the progression of the game calls for his use.

"We didn't play in a jamboree, and we haven't been able to practice much since Friday," explained Chase, who did try to practice some in the rain Saturday, and had a less than pleasing outing Tuesday evening.

The Tigers did not plan to do any full scrimmaging this week, so plans for the Satellite game are fairly complete.

Meanwhile, to the north Satellite's Frank Guertin, the coach since Chase's departure, is trying to figure a way out of the first two games on the schedule. State-wide, the MCHS gridders appear to be a powerhouse, and after they travel to Tiger Stadium, the Scorpions next face Merritt Island.

Look for Dee Merrix and Jim Parry to carry the bulk of the running duties, while quarterback Tom Boyle, a senior, will try to solve Martin County's stingy pass defense, led by possible all-state candidate Eddie Davis.

Boyle was the Space Coast's ninth leading passer in 1978.

The offensive line is basically inexperienced, although all of the starters are seniors. Only three members received letters a year ago.

Boyle's prime target should be split end Scott Arnold, who rates as one of the Coast's best. Tight end Pat Hayes gives Boyle another aerial choice.

Satellite's placekicking will be done by Rick Morgan.

The Scorpions finished 5-5 in 1978, including wins over Vero Beach (21-6), Orlando Evans (24-0), and Titusville Astronaut (21-20). The Astronaut victory was one of only two losses for the War Eagles.

Even some of their losses (20-7 to undefeated Lake Worth and 18-6 to Merritt Island) rated as fine efforts, so Chase realizes it will be no easy game.

Game time is 8 p.m.

David dumps preview

Due to the presence of Hurricane David, the Mirror Football Preview scheduled for this week's edition has been shortened. Complete schedules appear on page 26, but feature stories on the area's teams could not be included.

Boating improves in Keys

Boaters in the Florida Keys will find improved facilities at the Bahia Honda State Recreation Area Marina, with $200,000 in renovations completed.

Ney Landrum, director of the Division of Recreation and Parks, Florida Department of Natural Resources, reported major improvements have been made to the marina, which is located in the southernmost state recreation area of the park system. The park is about 35 miles northeast of Key West.

Among improvements is the replacement of a causeway with a 36-foot pedestrian bridge between the southwest and northeast basins to provide better water flow. A new 100 foot concrete dock and bulkhead with four 20 foot finger piers also has been built near the park's camping area.

At the northeast basin, 235 feet of wood dock and bulkhead have been replaced with concrete facilities.

Sandpiper Men play Stableford event

Sandpiper Bay Men's Golf Association members played a best three ball of foursome Stableford event last week, with Tom Bonne, Will Ferrarea, Bob Morisey, and Sid Mavis placing first with a 125 team score.

Gross scores for the top foursome were: Bonne, 98; Ferrara, 91; Bob Morisey, 98; and Mavis, 93.

In second place, with a team score of 123, were Joe Schulte, 86; Bill Mullter, 86; Graydon Smith, 90; and Bill Hyde, 97.

Third place finishers were Jim Orum, 81; Hal Roberts, 87; and Ray Mager, 104. They played with a blind scorer who picked up 13 points for them, and they posted a team score of 115.

Bidding reopened; PSL garbage still up for grabs

After numerous, lengthy deliberations as to who shall be the recipient of the city of Port St. Lucie's garbage contract, the city council has rejected all the bids and reopened the bidding.

The city council met in a special session on Friday, August 31st to decide the issue, and by the tone of opening remarks, all with the exception of Mayor William McChesney, favored awarding the contract to the Boston based SCA.

Vice mayor Mike Reeb and members of the council had done some research on SCA, which is presently under a four year contract with the city of Ft. Pierce.

While the cities that they were able to reach recommended stringent contractual provisions, they concluded that service had been good, and advised the city to "go with SCA."

Reeb expressed his sympathy for small "mom and pop" companies, but came to the conclusion that he "cannot be sentimental about cold, hard dollars." Furthermore he revealed that he had seen nothing which would have led him to believe that he shouldn't "go along" with the low bidders.

The other councilmen appeared to feel the same, until a question was raised as to whether SCA actually was the low bidder.

When city manager Leonard Silvia drew up the bid requirements, he specified that each sanitation collection company figure the cost on a per unit basis. As only two of the companies who submitted bids (SCA being one) complied with this, Mayor McChesney questioned the clarity with which the requirement was stated.

Assistant city attorney Charles Dorfman interjected that trying to determine the low bidder with Milton and All County's figures reflecting a cost per square foot and SCA's a cost per unit, is like "comparing apples to oranges."

At this point, an enraged Mayor McChesney queried "you are saying that effectively we only have one legitimate bid?" Upon Dorfman's response that this is so, McChesney stormed "then this is ridiculous, what are we wasting our time for?"

Councilman Gerald Girard commented "we came pretty far without ascertaining what we are doing," and proceeded to "strongly suggest" that the bids be thrown out.

Although Dorfman advised that the city cannot just "throw out the bids," he explained that city will simply "not enter any contract as a result of the bids." In this way, the city is in keeping with their original bid invitation, and they are free to reopen the bidding.

Despite SCA representative Charles Longchies contentions that this new turn of events will put them at a disadvantage, the council decided to follow Girard's suggestion and reopen the bidding. Further council session to decide which company will receive the city's garbage contract will be held in two to three weeks, when the second bids are obtained.

Quarterbacks, Quarterbacks...

Every prep coach claims to have the area's best

Sports News

BY DONNIE WILKIE

In the past ten years, the bulk of publicity in football has gone to the running backs -- those graceful yard gainers who can rip through a defense with sudden and merciless speed, often reducing the opposition's coach to tears and sending him back to the blackboard for another week of plotting.

But in 1979, on the local high school level anyway, the 1979 ink has gone, is going, and will continue to go to the "master of the offense," the quarterback.

It is not surprising, especially after a quick review of the area's signal callers. Just in the Martin-St. Lucie County area, two of the finest quarterbacks are preparing to enter the field of battle. In Pete Barriner of Fort Pierce Central and David McCaughey of Martin County, the local area can brag of a pair of established and seasoned players.

Barriner probably has the strongest arm of any passer in the area. That conclusion comes after just ten minutes of watching him throw bullets at his receivers, who nevertheless seem quite able to catch them.

On the other hand, McCaughey appears to be the better leader. The Martin County team seems to respond, and it shows in their performance, when the Port Salerno product takes the field.

Both have the qualifications for stardom, having taken their lumps as "rookies" in their first high school years. Barriner had to finish the 1977 campaign when regular Eddie Hearn fell prey to an injury, while McCaughey, although not thrust upon the scene so abruptly, still took a while to develop.

But both are over their jitters, and as seniors should shine brightly in 1979. Area fans should therefore scramble to the ticket windows to devour the Fort Pierce Central-Martin County tickets, as Barriner and McCaughey do battle in Stuart October 12.

On a broader scale, every coach seems to have the "best quarterback."

Take, for example, the recent "Crying Towel Luncheon" in West Palm Beach, held so area coaches can cry on somebody's shoulder (why isn't it the Crying Shoulder Luncheon), before their troops proceed to tear their opponents to shreds.

Larry Hood (Palm Beach Gardens), famous for his pre-season crying, started this year's rhubarb by calling Kyle Underwende this QB) the "best in the county."

Quickly following with their nominations for the honor were Jack Turner of North Shore (Harry Gosier, QB), Sam Budnyk of Cardinal Newman (Tony Walker, QB), Bruce Perry of Twin Lakes (Bobby Wright, "smartest" QB), and Joe Peccia of Lake Worth-Leonard (Robert Schattie, "smartest" Q. Perry must be mistaken).

Add tiny John Carroll's all-state candidate, David Bernhardt, a senior, and Boca Raton's Tom Smith, and you have the ingredients for organized chaos!

Or is it disorganized excitement?

Oh, and by the way. No one offered me a towel for a shoulder) to cry on.

Communications problems crop up

BY BOB FRYER

Although Martin Countians survived Hurricane David well in terms of personal safety, there were apparently some communicatins problems during the storm which local officials hope can be solved before another big blow comes our way.

At one point during the hurricane, the National Weather Service was locating the eye of David about 25 miles offshore of Palm Beach when it was actually making landfall around Jupiter.

Acting Disaster Preparedness Director Steve Wells said the misinformation was apparently due to a loss of communications between Weather Service officials in Miami and the National Weather Service in Washington, D.C.

In addition to that communications failure, all telephones at the Martin County Emergency Operations Center (EOC) including the 911 emergency number, were out of order for six to eight hours, Wells said. And locally, the antenna for the Jensen Beach Fire Department's base station which is used to communicate with the department's trucks and with other fire departments blew over.

Fortunately, the loss of phone sevice to the county EOC came late Monday night, after David had passed through the county and as winds were subsiding.

Of the problem with getting information from the National Weather Service, County Commission Chairman Frank Wacha commented that from 6 a.m. to noon Mondy, as David was missing Miami and closing in on Martin County, "We got plenty of updates. We got them on the hour and half hour at times. But from noon to 6 p.m. we only got about four of them and that's the time it (David) was with us."

The commission chairman was upset about the lack of information enough that he said he plans to compile a list of all information received locally from the National Weather Service. He said he will mail that information to U.S. Senator Richard Stone and point out the lack and lapse of information after the hurricane was not longer a threat to Miami. He said the senator could "do what he wishes" with the information he sends him.

Wacha said "we had exceptionally good communications to everybody here in the county, but didn't get it from the National Weather Service." He said there were ham and CB communications set up at the EOC, and that the REACT group was there. "I was very pleased with the people operating the facilities and the manner in which they were answering calls," he commented.

One person who wasn't too pleased with at least one communication that came from the EOC was Ransom Tilton. He said there was a broadcast on channel 3 that the clubhouse at Pinelake Village was not an approved hurricane shelter and that it was unsafe. Tilton said former Red Cross official Al Palmer once asked about the possibility of using the clubhouse as a shelter and made an inspection of the facility. "He said we should have some storm shutters and other than that everything was fine. So, we got the shutters. But they put it out over the radio that it wasn't a safe shelter and it caused concern among our residents," Tilton said.

He noted that the clubhouse wasn't set up as a shelter for the general public, but that it served the park residents well in fact better than some of the official hurricane shelters. "We had a 30 kilowatt generator and had electricity, water, sewer and air conditioning. A lot of shelters didn't have that," he said.

Wacha said he felt the problem was just that Tilton and the Red Cross hadn't communicated sufficiently to get an official designation of the facility as a hurricane shelter. He also said that he had heard reports of persons being charged for food at the Jensen Lanes while it was used as a shelter, but he said this was probably because there is a new owner of the lanes and that the owner and the Red Cross probably hadn't gotten together to discuss what is involved in a building serving as an official shelter. "I don't think anyone ever got to the new owner to tell him what was expected," he said.

Wacha said he was just glad the hurricane was not stronger. He said it was a good storm to test the ability of the community to prepare for a hurricane, but said a stronger cane could have caused much heavier damage. Local disaster officials estimated countywide loses to David at around $15 million.

Will Bowman, assistant chief of the Jensen Beach Fire Department, said the department had 12 to 16 men on duty for two days straight. He said the men were on the streets during the entire storm, clearing roads, answering calls for help, removing debris and delivering food.

When asked if there were any communications problems between the department and th EOC" he responded, "Not particularly, only in the regard that sometimes there were things you'd rather say on the phone than over the radio."

Wells said when the phones, including the 911 system, went out, a system of communication was set up for persons to call the Stuart Police Department for assistance. Those messages were then broadcast by radio to the Sheriff's Department, which in turn would broadcast messages to fire and ambulance personel. "It didn't cause too much of a problem. Everybody was doing the best they could to cover the bases. It was an archaic system at times, but it worked," he said.

Wells said at all times there was at least radio communications with emergency personnel and said the phones went out around 10 or 11 pm. Monday, after the brunt of the storm had passed. The phones were down about six to eight hours, he added.

Wells said David apparently had an egg-shaped eye and that it came over land around Jupiter, moved through Martin and St. Lucie counties, then went seaward around the Indian River County line. He noted that he got reports from the WMCF-2 radio station on wind speeds and barometer reading throughout the storm. He said winds at times gusted to around 100 mph, but sustained winds ranged from 70 to 90 mph.

NEW POSTMASTER—New Jensen Beach Postmaster Al Kovar, left, greets Willie McClure, supervisor of postal operations, during Kovar's first day at the local post office. Kovar comes here from Fort Lauderdale and says he had been hoping for nearly a year to land the job as Jensen Beach Postmaster.

'Unsavory' tenants cause Chamber investigation

Complaints about "unsavory tenants living in downtown Jensen Beach surfaced at the Jensen Chamber of Commerce meeting Monday night, and there is now a possibility the landlord, Frank Wacha Jr., may be kicked out of the chamber.

Several downtown merchants complained Monday that they have been getting adverse comments from citizens about the tenants creating a bad image for the downtown section.

The tenants in question are those living above stores in an old building on the north side of Commercial Street, just east of the railroad tracks. The stores below the apartments include The Tiger Touch, Susie's Ice Cream Parlor and a paint store.

Complaints included allegations that the renters were gathering along the sidewalk in front of the stores at night and drinking beer and playing music loudly. One merchant said that for awhile the grounds in the area were frequently littered and that there were four cars in a lot next to the building which were up on blocks for repairs. He said now there is only one car under repair and that the grounds are "looking better." Other complaints were that the renters sometumes tossed a frisbee back and forth across Commercial Street, used loud profanity to passing motorists and were generally creating a bad image for the area.

A chamber official said she didn't think some of the renters were employed and another said he'd heard a mother was no longer taking her son to Boy Scout meetings at the old Jensen Beach Community Center because she was afraid of the tenants.

Additionally, a merchant said he'd heard the Jensen Beach Barber Shop and the paint store were broken into during Hurricane David. He said he had no proof that the tenants did it, but indicated he would not be surprised if they were the ones.

One of the merchants said he'd done business with some of the tenants and considered some of them friends. But, he said there were also "some unsavory characters there."

Another complaint by a local businessman, not mentioned at the meeting, is that one tenant was "flashing" motorists who drove down Commercial Street during Hurricane David. Also, one tenant is reported to have urinated on the sidewalk one afternoon.

The businessmen at the Chamber meeting complaining of the situation said the building was recently sold to Wacha, Dr. Daniel Stalker and Gilbert Ballard, and that Wacha was serving as rental agent.

"I've complained to him (Wacha) and have gotten nowhere," said one merchant. But later the same merchant said last week the grounds were cleaned up and several of the cars were removed from the lot next to the building, and the grass in the lot was mowed. "I just hope it's not just a one-shot clean-up," he said.

Another downtown businessman said he had checked on zoning laws to see if the tenants had a legal right to rent the rooms over the store. He said it's normally illegal to live above a business, but that the building is so old that there is a grandfather exemption to the zoning code.

Chamber directors discussed bringing the complaints to an attorney to see if he could find a way to get the tenants out. However, the chamber directors unanimously approved a motion to have a committee formed to talk over the problems with Wacha. Jon Chicky, Fred Meeker and Ron Teal were named to the committee.

According to chamber by-laws, when two or more merchants lodge a complaint against another chamber member, the chamber directors have the authority to form a committee to try to solve the complaint. Then, if the complaint is not solved, the board can vote to expel the member complained about from the chamber. Several directors indicated that if the committee didn't solve the problems, a vote to expel Wacha would likely be held.

Wacha could not be reached for comment Tuesday, as he was out of town.

Snook victim of hurricane

A nice, eating-sized snook was apparently stolen from the Martin County Environmental Center in Jensen Beach during Hurricane David.

He said the Center keeps a low supply of fish in its tanks during the summer months, then restocks when educational programs start up in September. All of those fish that were in the tanks before David hit survived well except for the snook.

The Center had one other hurricane related problem though. It seems some persons dragged their fallen tree limbs to the center's grounds so county workers could haul them away. "We didn't have much tree damage, but we got some from others," he said.

Al Kovar is picked as new Postmaster

After nearly a year of being without one, the Jensen Beach Post Office has a new postmaster.

Al Kovar, who has 25 years of Postal Service experience at the Fort Lauderdale sectional center, was selected from among five finalists for the post. He reported to the Jensen Beach Post Office last Friday and officially assumed duties as post master on Monday, Sept. 10.

"The job came up for bid about a year ago and I've been hoping since then that I'd get it. I got word of the appointment on Wesnesday (Sept. 5)," Kovar said.

The new postmaster is a native of Cleveland, Ohio, but has lived in Fort Lauderdale for the past 28 years. For the last 25 of those 28 years he has worked for the Postal Service. He says all of his jobs with the Postal Service have been challenging, and he expects that will be the same here. He was delivery service analyst in Fort Lauderdale, and for the last 11 years was Supervisor of Delivery there. He also worked on a retail analysis program for post offices from Homestead to Fort Pierce and worked on the capital investment program for post offices in Dade, Broward and Palm Beach counties.

Additionally, he coordinated all the new zip codes for a large portion of the Florida southeast coast in 1975.

Earlier this year the Jensen Beach Post Office made the front page of The Miami Herald due to complaints of alleged delivery problems. There also seemed to be a morale problem at the post office then, though in the early summer several postal workers commented that they felt that the problem was behind them. Kovar said since the job came up almost a year ago he has kept up with news about the local post office.

"I'm aware of the past problems and am confident that the problems that may still exist can be corrected," he said.

Kovar was at the Post Office last Friday so "they could sign everything over to me." He said he is looking for a house in the area and hopes he and his wife Ruth, will find one soon. He noted that he and his wife have a daughter living in central Florida.

Evinrude donates $75,000 for Langford Park growth

A "wish list" of County Commission Chairman Frank A. Wacha came true this week as the Ralph Evinrude Foundation donated $75,000 to proposed improvement projects at the county-operated Langford Park.

The donation also makes provision for matching funds that will add at least $45,000 more in federal grant money for construction of the log cabin Senior Citizen Center at the park.

"Mr. and Mrs. Evinrude called me over last summer at a wedding reception and told me that the Evinrude Foundation might donate some money to the park. They asked for a list of necessary capital improvements. I was astounded. In their wonderful generosity, Mr. and Mrs. Evinrude have again proved their love for our community and have given us the opportunity to make much needed improvements."

The gift, he added, "was an outright gift to the people of Jensen Beach and Martin County."

The first disbursement of the funds will be $15,000 as the local share of matching funds to gain $45,000 in federal matching funds to construct the Senior Citizen's Center at Langford Park. The county plans to reconstruct the former "log cabin" that was the high school band room, and before that, the community meeting place in Stuart.

The park was originally donated to the people of Jensen Beach by famed singer-actress Frances Langford, wife of Ralph Evinrude, chairman of the board of Outboard Marine Corporation.

Wacha said that the gift has "no restrictions, no conditions, no contingencies, no requirements to see the plans or a timetable of the capital improvements. I was astounded. In their wonderful generosity, Mr. and Mrs. Evinrude have again proved their love for our community and have given us the opportunity to make much needed improvements."

"I'd have been happy with getting the money for just one item on the list," Wacha said jubilantly. The total amount of the list was $71,800.

Sundins 50th on eve of David

A fiftieth anniversary is an important occasion, as witness the celebration held on the eve of the arrival of Hurricane David.

Gathered at the home of the celebrants, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sundin on South Street were children, friends and relatives from Long Island to Oklahoma, to honor the well-known local couple.

The Sundins were actually married on Sept. 7, 1929 in Dorchester, Mass., a week prior to the actual date, because of the long Labor Day Holiday weekend.

The sun was still shining brightly over Jensen Beach as friends poured in the house to offer their congratulations and share the big wedding cake with silver-tipped candles. Helping with greeting the guests were their three children, Barbara Swift of St. Cloud, Ruth C. Saley of Orlando, and Charles Sundin, of Pryor, Okla.

Several of the nine grandchildren were also there, including the youngest of four grandchildren, a tiny lad who was born to Eddie and Ann Saley on July 24.

The Sundins came to Jensen Beach in 1960, where the "bridegroom" worked for Southeastern Printing as a compositor. He retired four years ago.

The bridal pair lived for many years in Weymouth, Mass., coming to Florida in 1959. Mr. Sundin was a compositor for a Boston paper, and his wife, was a school bus driver in Weymouth. After coming to Florida she drove a school bus in Orlando, before coming here.

Mr. Sundin was one of eight children, among whom is Lily Lugel of South Street, Jensen Beach. A brother, Frank Sundin, lived in Stuart and Jensen Beach until moving to Rhode Island to be with his daughter.

The Sundin family emigrated into Boston from the Scandinavian peninsula, coming with his family, when he was less than a year old. He was born in Oslo, Norway, where his father was an iron worker.

Mrs. Sundin's parents were both natives of Sweden, but she was born in Saugus, Mass., after they came to the United States.

They both grew up in the Boston area. They are members of the Sons of Norway Lodge, and attend the Prince of Peace Lutheran Church.

Repair for drawspan is okayed

Martin County Commissioners held a special meeting last Friday to approve a $10,000 expenditure for repair of the east drawspan of the Jensen Beach Causeway.

The drawspan was damaged during Hurricane David and has made it difficult for some boats to pass under the bridge. However, the main concern of commissioners, noted Commissioner Maggy Hurchalla, was that someone may drive off the drawspan into the river.

The special meeting was called because the repair bill is higher than the amount allowed without a commission vote. Mrs. Hurchalla said the repair is expected to take one day. The damage was to an electrical cable.

Community education center is planned for Jensen Beach

A meeting has been called for 3 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 19, at Jensen Beach Elementary School to organize a Jensen Beach Community Education Center.

Jay Jarrett of the Martin County Environmental Center says the staff at the Environmental Center, the elementary school and anyone else who would like to participate in development of a community education center and the planning of center activities is welcome at the meeting.

He says the proposed center is to be set up to provide "any kind of service the community needs, from baby sitting to a course in square-dancing."

Classes for the community education center are planned for the elementary school and Environmental Center, with plans for rooms at the two facilities to be made available for community education year round. But, he says he hopes that eventually enough money can be raised locally to qualify for a matching state grant of funds for purchase of four portables to serve as the community education center.

Jarrett explained that the community education center is different from a regular adult education program in that it has a paid coordinator (which will be his job) and a community advisory committee to survey the area to determine the services that are needed. "My job is to find the facilities, provide service and find an agency to provide the services," he said.

Jarrett noted that to start with there will be a room available all day at the Environmental Center and that the elementary school classrooms can be used after school hours. He hopes eventually that four portables, at a cost of about $100,000, can be bought for use as the center. The state will provide half of the funds if half are generated from another source.

Any individual or organization that would like to be represented at the organizational meeting is invited to come to the meeting. For more information, call Jay Jarrett at 334-1262. Dr. Don McKenzie, assistant director of the center for community educajon at Florida Atlantic University, will be the speaker at the meeting.

Club begins new season

The Woman's Club of Stuart will start their 1979-80 season by holding a covered dish luncheon at noon and a business meeting at 1 p.m. on Wednesday, September 19th at their clubhouse.

Lt. Col. Ted R. Pope, administrator of Hacienda Girls Ranch will be the guest speaker. The Hacienda girls Ranch is in Melbourne and is sponsored by the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs. This ranch is a haven for girls who come from problem or broken homes. It is regularly supported by the Woman's Club of Stuart, and a trip to the ranch is planned in the near future. Mrs. Merci Birnn is chairman of this project.

Club member, Marjorie Gould, will present "The Art of Mixed Hobbies" in using your talents. Joan Till and committee will be in charge of the luncheon.

The International and Public Affairs department will meet September 21st at 10 a.m. at the clubhouse. The topic will be the "Technology Explosion." Edna Carter will be discussion leader and Barbara McCollough, hostess.

FIT damage set at more than $500,000

Hurricane David chewed its way through the Florida Institute of Technology's Jensen Beach Campus last week, with the most substantial damage occurring to the two dormitories, which lost their roofs in the storm causing extreme water damage.

E. E. Tealey, Executive Director of the School, said "The damage sustained by the FIT campus is estimated at well over half million dollars. Since most academic areas suffered only moderate damage we anticipate that classes will start at their regularly scheduled time beginning on September 24th."

Hurricane David's visit makes fishing weekend a mess!

The world was a mess.

The aftermath of Hurricane David left both the area's weather and fishing scene in an uproar, as fishermen found as few fish in the wet out of the water as they would have had they journeyed into the wet of the area's rivers.

Simply, there were almost no fish.

According to Tarea fishing expert Tom Stewart, "Septembers traditionally one of the slowest months in the year for fishing in Jensen Beach and Stuart. The fish should begin to bite around mid-October.

(I also can blame it on the kids going back to shcool and the hurricane forcing people to clean up their yards," Stewart continued. "Let's face it, when there's less people out there fishing, there's less fish caught."

Stewart also cited the movement of the area's fish after the hurricane.

"You never kknow where they'll go during the storm, but it's beginning to look like they all went down deep."

Offshore catches have been virtually non-existent, and The Mirror did not have a single catch reported during the week.

There was some light action inland, including the unveiling of a new type of bait - the "Tony spoon."

It's a new lure made by Tony Accetta," explained Stewart. "They were field testing it down here out of Rivera Beach, and now they are trying to sell it herein this area.

"It's been pretty popular in the Texas-Gulf Coast area this year," said Stewart, "although it's more expensive than a mirrorlure."

69 cents, while the new tony spoon will go for $1.98. Stewart said, though, that it's a good spoon."

The Tony spoon comes in either gold or silver, and with or without a backtail.

Ed Wagner and Pat Patterson reported catches of ten trout and two grouper over a two-day period. They used (you guessed it) Tony Spoons, and they were fishing in the Indian River.

Steve Steele packed up three nice trout off the Jensen bridge using live shrimp, while the brother team of Bryan (six years old) and Bradley Collier netter six channel bass in the surf at Jensen Bech. They were fishing with their father, Dillard, and were using cut shrimp.

Miles Jenkins hauled in a 16-pound barracuda and four bluefish (up to 8¼ pounds) while doing his fishing at the "crossroads," where the Indian and St. Lucie Rivers meet near the St. Lucie Inlet. Jenkins used froen baby bunkers.

Scott and Debbie Gallivan enjoyed their day of fishing, grabbing a trout as well as six mangrove snappers, near the Nuclear Power Plant on Hutchinson Island. They achieved their catch with live shrimp.

The C-23 Canal was the hideout of Virgil and Brad Stewart (no relation to Tom), as well as Wendell Halverson, as the fishing triumverate hooked four snook (up to five pounds with a teatner jig.

Jerry Green bagged 15 trout, four jacks and four ladyfish near the power plant, using live shrimp. Mike Mathias bragged of two trout (up to four pounds) he caught in the river using touts; and John Sawicki landed a snook of five pounds in the surf, using a Krocodile spoon.

Here's the high-low report for the past eight days, along with each day's rainfall.

HOW TO BUY YOURSELF A JOB

QUESTION: I am approaching the age where I figured I would retire, and yet I look at what I have accumulated and it looks like I'm going to have to keep at it. I guess I should have bought more real estate than just my house, which has increased in value from the $32,000 I paid for it up to about $85,000 today. Is there any kind of real estate I could get involved in that would give me a job? I am healthy and would like to stay active but I need a change of scene. Thanks.

ANSWER: You might consider a type of real estate investment that requires a great deal of management. Hotels, motels, and guest houses generally fall into this category. Certain types of apartment houses also require a large amount of attnetion and could also be considered.

..Because most investors shy away from properties where a significant amount of time involvement is required, these properties are generally available at attractive prices.

..Check for propeties that provide not only a return on your investment but also a "salary" for the time you spend on the job.

..A well-selected "management intensive" investment can often provide both a good return on your invested capital and an interesting job where you call the shots and where your efforts determine your rewards.

..Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 334-0747, or stop by:

...nimal hospital overflows with pets evacuated by David

...terally rained cats and dogs at ...nsen Beach Animal Hospital ... Hurricane David. Dr. Stanley ...der said he had 67 animals on his ... during the storm, including a ... of hamsters and two birds. ...nt of them were owned by people who had failed to make advance preparation for the care of their pet," he said. "Some had made reservations as early as Friday before the storm, but most of them were from the beach-side condos and trailer parks who came in to the designated shelters. The bad thing is that we had to turn away at least twice the number that we took in."

Animals were all over the place. Every nook and cranny of the veterinarian's hospital was filled - dogs in the bathroom, dogs and cats in the storage rooms, - the place was full to the rooftop.

Fortunately, the whole weekend emergency was without serious incident, except for an operation on, the eye of a dog who had been hit by a car.

"During the eye of the storm we took them out for a walk, to give them a chance to relieve themselves," he said, "and the owners came to retrieve their pets promptly after the storm was over."

The Humane Society, too, had more than its share of unexpected visitors, some under strange circumstances. According to LutherEdmondson of the society, one Sewall's Point woman, 93 years of age, refused to leave her home without her pet. They took her bodily, chair and all to the animal shelter.

"Many of the people who went to the shelters left their animals in their cars," Dr. Wampler said. "They should be warned that this is dangerous - the animal is likely to suffocate."

Holiday Outlines

BY RUTH BOWES 331-1946

Assisted by Elizabeth O'Donnell and Peg Ray

Two weeks of events

Sorry "David" kept us from writing last week. So this will be two week's of events. Your Park has been in good hands. Many screenrooms were flattend out and the trees couldn't hold up their heads in the constant wind. Electric, water and telephones were in service by early afternoon. The ocean was very kind to us by not raging to high tide.

Everyone left the island and many folks, ex-H.Outers, that have homes in Jensen, offered shelter. The All Saints Episcopal Church in Jensen took exceptionally good care of five couples. The kitchen was well equipped. If Jack McConnell wasn't such a good lawn man we might never have met Fr. Coffey, the pastor of the Church, who was a very gracious host. I want to say "thanks" to the wonderful way many H.Outers took over management of the Park Office after the departure of the manager and office employees. Many volunteered to help.

Then "David" came along. Owners to be notified. We want to also mention, special thanks for the long hours of fine safety, guard service by "Bud" Hudson and Crew. To keep down "sightseers and vandalism." Next laurels to Jerry Belmore, Grace Madden as treasurer, Ginny Belmore, Lil McConnell as secretaries, Betty Leister, Caroline Allen, and Carole Wright, rental clerks.

There was considerable damage here in the Parks but no lives were lost, thanks to the 24 hours of keeping us posted on the broadcasts, when we had to evacuate.

Eleanor & Fred Quader & friends had a delightful weekend. They first visited Busch Gardens and enjoyed the "Tampa Sandwich." Then went to the Sea Wolf Restaurant & had a delicious dinner. After a good nights sleep, they stopped at Cypress Gardens before returning home.

Mabel & Hal Theimer came up from W.Palm and told us about an article in the August Readers Digest. It seems their son was among the many that saved a young man adrift in the icy water of Lake Erie. John Theimer is engineer in charge of the Buffalo office of the Federal Communications Commission & the two rescue ships that were out looking lost contact until John picked them up on C.B. and pinpointed all their locations. The rescue ship said it was like a miracle to hear the directional information, and when he saw the blue light he knew they would make it.

Berthan Lamon called the Les Ullmanns, because she was concerned about the hurricane that night coming in to Fla. Catty assured her we all had plans and were ok so far.

Lil & Geo Bares wrote that they were delighted to have Harriet & Lee Price visit them for a few days. Lil says she hopes to be back in H.Out soon.

Jim & Corrina Norris entertained Al & Peg Ray for a spaghetti supper. Sat eve.

An odd but very interesting happening — Doug McBride, of Stuart, is the young man, who cut the head off, after Art Nagy of H.Out maneuvered his car to entrap and kill a three foot Rattler, having 4 rattles denoting an age of 4 years. Now Art has it in a glass gallon jar of formaldehyde after calling many Pharmacys to obtain it. This all happened near the approach going east on the bridge to Hutchinson Isla. Art Nagy is our big nature man of H. Out. He walks the beach in early morning to look for fallen birds.

We have lost another friend, a long time resident of H.Out, Bill Hunter. Aug 26, dear Husband of Eileen. We offer our condolences to the Hunter family. Bill will be remembered by many. He and Eileen, Bert and Nora Turner were the first to start in 68 what is now the Pavilion Church. We had no organ or piano then and attendance of only 5 to 60 regulars. Bill played the electric Hawaiian guitar, accompanied by Eileen. Bert Turner led us in prayer and song. Bill was always helping any one who needed him including dogs.

Helen & Clarence Knechtges are enjoying the summer at their home in Mich. Helen is recovering nicely from a cataract surgery on both eyes plus another emergency visit to the hospital for a severe choking session. She is now home and they are planning their Holiday Out winter. Helen and Clarence send best wishes to all here.

The big wind blew in more than the hurricane, as the Brownes arrived the day after, also Armocks came with Vern Mays, Metoers, Pearsalls, Schildhorns, and Schaerers. Wrights returned two weeks ago.

Lester Ullmann originated quite a birthday party for Catty Saturday night. Sixteen sang happy Birthday after Catty blew out the candles on a beautiful cake. Ron Bennett played a chordavok. Played many of the tunes we had in the last show; a lot of pleasant memories.

You who are leaving don't forget to bring something for our bazaar & auction which will be in Feb. nearer than we realize.

Anniversaries Congratulations— Edie & Chester Gramstorff 9-6, Marcelyn & John Evans 9-7, Billie & Bruce Magers 9-8, Thelma & Chuck Abel, Stephanie & Fred Kiefaber, Dora & Everet Porteous, Clara & Minor Myers 9-9, Edwina & arle Palmer 9-13, Rita & Elmer Dobson 9-14, Norma & Earl Boyher, Dorothy & Bill Studebaker 9-15, Erma & Gordie St Louis 9-16, Verne & Tom Clinger 9-17, Katherine & Jack Berger 9-18, Dr Glenn B & Ruth Boyd 9-11.

Happy Birthday Wishes— Andy Donnelly 9-6, Earle Palmer, Scherely Green, Linda Royal 9-7, Catty Ullmann, "Howie" Fanucci 9-8, Arletta Wehlage, Clare Myers 9-10, Gladys Kirkpatrick 9-11, Edward Sallfors 9-12, Art Nagy 9-13, Doris Berglund, Joyce Morgan 9-14, Jim Williams, Merle Steele 9-15, Ralph Taylor 9-16, Marson Maduas 9-17, Henry Bischoff, Frank Houghton 9-19.

Aftermath Elizabeth ODonnell We cal all offer prayers of thanks. There was considerable damage to some trailers in our Parks caused by twisters accompaning Hurricane David, but no serious injuries among Park residents. One incident occurred which could have been fatal. A baby girl who was visiting her grandparents wandered barefoot onto the soggy screenroom carpet. She touched a lamp cord and was frozen to the cord. Her grandfather, even though receiving shocks himself when he touched the baby, managed to throw her off the contact and she survived the shock.

Everyone was evacuated from the Parks before DAvid hit here. It is a strange feeling to be a statistic, one of 240,000 who fled the coastal areas?

We were busy all day Saturday parking valuables, removing objects outside the trailer which could fly through the air and of course, constantly monitoring weather reports. We left at 10:00 a.m. Sunday and were mighty surprised when we reached Florida Turnpike to see the volume of traffic streaming North. At Turnpike service areas vehicles were lined up on the approaches to gas pumps clear into the highway. We heard the jam-up was far worse a few hours later.

When we returned Wednesday morning there were still many fallen Australian pine trees on the ocean side of A1A. They have either been removed or shoved out of the way now.

Entering the Park we noticed the pile of debris from torn apart screen rooms heaped beside the Island Store as high as the roof. Many screen rooms were ripped down and afew trailers overturned but these trailers, we noticed, were not tied down properly or anchored at all.

When the hurricane hit here it was low tide and consequently no storm surge over the island. The Rec Hall and bathhouses did not suffer any damage although the fence enclosing the pool was demolished. So, we can say again, we were very, very lucky. We still have a Park and a beautiful one.

An especially Happy Birthday to Anna Schnase who will be 90 years young on September 17th.

Since the storm there has been an invasion of land crabs moseying around the Park. Tommy Manle's poodle Max has been nipped by them so many times Tommy says Max's voice has turned soprano!

Heard it was 44 degrees in Indiana on Sunday. Maybe many lot owners will be returning soon if that keeps up.

Public budget hearing draws no public

A public hearing on the use of Federal Revenue Sharing Funds was held Friday, September 7th during a special session of the city council. Unfortunately, no members of the public attended to either hear or contribute to the proposed usage of the funds.

The federal monies in question included $3,805 of the tenth entitlement and $73,440 of an eleventh entitlement.

Allocations of this additional revenue are subject to the council's discretion following a required public hearing at which residents may suggest potential usages.

One representative who did attend, while not a Port St. Lucie resident, did address the council in regard to the federal funds, was Alvin Henehan, director of the St. Lucie County Library Association.

Henehan had previously requested that the council allocate in their fiscal 1979-80 budget the necessary $60,000 which the Association is trying to raise in order to expand the Port St. Lucie branch library.

While Henehan has already received $60,000 from St. Lucie County funds and an additional $60,000 from the Library Association, the money cannot be used until the full $180,000 mark is reached.

The city council refused to allocate the last third of the money for the project due to a complication in the city vs. county battle over double taxation. Although the branch library directly serves the Port St. Lucie community, it is technically a part of the county library system, and the council feels it is the county's responsibility to finance the addition.

Henehan was informed at the hearing, however, that some $10,000 of the city's contingency fund have been earmarked for the library's use if they begin construction during fiscal year 1979-80.

The council has decided to channel the tenth and eleventh entitlements, totalling $77,245, into three separate funds. The bulk of the federal money, $57,022, will go towards financing recreational expenses at Sportsman Park.

These two sites have been inspected and approved by Dr. Mathews. They will provide additional habitants for marine life and hopefully better fishing in the future.

nswer- Dear Mrs L.D. This is a stion that is often asked of me by of my patients.

you have varicose veins, you uld elevate your legs several times ay to drain the swollen vessels. Thus s be done easily and conveniently lying on a slant board or by resting r feet on a chair or against a wall u may wear elastic hose between vation to keep the veins from tending excessively ny kind of walking exercise, if done a short period of time preceding vation of the legs, helps to keep the od circulating. Prolonged standing uld be avoided. However, when you stand, without the benefit of the mping action of muscular contrac , the pressure on leg veins is five es greater than when you lie down s would force a considerable ount of blood to back up through alk or defective valves in large rface veins.

MY SISTER—Maxine Vaneven's current activity as President of "Women In Management" relates her interest in women employed in established careers at management level.

"Eating is a lifelong venture" claims Sis Maxine (Vaneven) of Kaukauna, Wisconsin. Maxine has spent many years in nutritional research work to make you feel better, have more energy, look younger, be attractive, and live a longer, more enjoyable life. She does this by creating low calorie "tasty" recipes and combination beauty-exercise classes. This evolves around her position as Program Director for the Appleton, Wisconsin YMCA — also serving on the National YMCA Board. Through her efforts "Wisconsin's State Nutrition Day" was established by their Governor.

Maxine vacationed in central and southern Florida this week and she finds our Port St. Lucie resort type living ideal! "Bike riding, swimming, golf, tennis — these activities are tremendous to help maintain good physical and emotional health," states Maxine.

This Asparagus Cheese Casserole serves 8 with only 79 calories per serving. This is reprinted from Maxine's luscious book.

1 cup nonfat milk
½ t. salt
2 cups asparagus, cooked
2 eggs, hard cooked, sliced
1 pimiento, diced
½ cup grated cheddar cheese
¼ t. onion flakes
½ cup crushed cornflakes

Melt margarine, stir in flour. When smooth, slowly stir in milk. Add salt. Continue cooking & stirring until sauce thickens. In a casserole make a layer of half the asparagus, eggs, pimiento, cheese, onion flakes and white sauce. Add second layer. Sprinkle cornflakes over top. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 min. Serve bubbling hot!

Jensen to get Hardees maybe Publix

Hardee's, a fast-food char-broiled hamburger chain based in Rocky Mount, N.C., has purchased land on Commercial Street and plans to open a store there. And, Publix Supermarkets may build a store in Jensen Beach.

Fred Meeker, owner of Tara Trailers at 1409 N.E. Commercial Street said he recently reached a contractural agreement to sell the land his trailer business is located on to Hardee's. He added that closing is to take place in 30 days and that Hardee's officials are currently seeking the necessary permits to build a chain restaurant on the land. The tract extends from Commercial Street to Sunview Road and is 140 feet wide.

Meeker announced the sale to Hardee's during a Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce meeting Monday night, and Chamber President Jon Chicky followed that with a comment that he has heard Publix may open a store in Jensen Beach.

Chicky said he has heard Publix officials have inspected and approved a tract of land on Commercial Street just west of the railroad track as a feasible site for a Publix store.

"That doesn't mean they've definitely decided to build a store there. It just means they have decided that it is a suitable site. They may be looking at other sites in the area to see if they would be suitable," Chicky said.

FIT rents 110 rooms while dorms are fixed

Roof damage to the two dormitories at Florida Institute of Technology's Jensen Beach campus was so severe during Hurricane David that college officials have had to contract with Quality Inn of Stuart for 110 rooms to house students.

The fall term at the FIT campus begins on Sept. 24th, and apparently many of the rooms have been so damaged by water that they will not be usable right away.

During a Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce meeting Monday, John Greenwood of FIT noted that the college had just contracted for the rooms at Quality Inn. He said that an insurance adjustor who inspected the dormitories feels that a tornado must have blown through with the hurricane to have created the damage to the dorm roofs.

Greenwood said the roofs lost layers of tar and tarpaper and "quite a bit of cement." He also said losses to Melaleuca trees on campus were severe.

Hurricane damages

Yes, Hurricane David hit Martin County and Ocean Breeze hard. A mild panic set in here on Sunday. Both Floridians jammed into grocery stores, hardware stores and lumber yards, stocking up on canned goods, batteries, flashlights, oil lanterns and lamps.

The governor ordered evacuation of 50,000 residents, especially from mobile homes. From Ocean Breeze Community Church, The Jensen Beach Baptist Church and the Jensen Beach Elementary School. Most people remembered to bring blankets, pillows and some food. Some drove away.

Many roofs have been blown off but the owners have been notified. Many homes on the Indian River side are in a bad shape.

Don and Helena Hand flew down from New Jersey to try to get their lovely Vista Drive home on the river repaired.

Bill and Jeanette Young of Pennsylvania are expected to arrive Tuesday.

Lloyd Mikesell, Kenny Bartlett and Claud Mansfield drove down from Monticello, Indiana to attend to the repairing of their homes.

Ernie and Marian are back, but he's not ready to be a correspondent yet.

Thanks to Redinger for the clever story of the Ocean Breeze Heroine and the "starfruit" that I finally got from him.

Mabel R. Stevens, 90, of 23 S. W. 6th AVe., Ocean Breeze Park, died Monday, September 3, in Jupiter Convalescent Home, Jupiter, Florida. Cremation followed.

Our Hurricane Heroine

by
Clyde E. Redinger

On Areca Drive in Ocean Breeze, is a carembola tree. Previous to the arrival of "David" it was laden with loads of ripening fruit, so thick that fruits below one could see only golden flames of suspended stars. It was a joy to behold the yellow glow, that, like sunlight, brightened the cathedral-like interior.

A mourning dove, with more artistic taste than common sense, chose this place to build a crude platform of twigs, whereon she deposited two eggs. Sunday evening a small carembola had fallen into nest, beside her, so I removed it and at the same time discovered two baby birds just emerging from their shells — and with naked only hours away! Picking a half bushel, directly above the nest seemed the only help I could render but as we left for the safety of our own hideaway we despaired of any possible chance of their survival.

Two days later, after David's departure, we returned to find a shambles. All of the carambolas — four big garbage cans full — were on the ground, along with most of the leaves of the tree, in adjacent umbrella tree had split seven ways and three big limbs crashed into the carambola tree. A T.V. antenna had broken down to fall across them.

With all the frightful furor of blasting winds, the bombardment of hundreds of falling fruits and a dreadful hail of U.F.O.'s from outer space, the tree seemed entirely denuded. But no. There, serene and unperturbed, sat the courageous little mother, hovering her tiny brood on the few remaining twigs of the frail nesting platform. A miracle, no less!

Inlet festival, shark tourney rescheduled

The St. Lucie Inlet Festival, which was to be the biggest cleebration ever in Martin County, was washed out last week when Hurricane David struck on Labor Day.

The festival was to celebrate the iprovements which are to be made to the hazardous inlet, and planners were expecting crowds of up to 10,000 persons to flock to the Stuart Causeway.A shows,boat shows and continuous stage entertainment was planned, as was a fish fry, and a visit from Governor Bob Graham.

When local officials began planning the gigantic event, they planned it around the governor's schedule, to be sure he could attend it.

Obviously, when Hurricane David hit, the festival had to be postponed.

"We're hoping to reschedule it for some time in October, but we'll have to wait to see when the governor can come before a date is set," commented county commissioner Maggy Hurchalla. "It's been nearly a decade since we've had an official visit from a governor, so the visit by Graham is about as important as the festival itself," commented Commission Chairman Frank Wacha.

Another event which has had to be rescheduled due to David is the Fourth Annual Port Salerno Shark Tournament. The tourney was set for last week, but is now scheduled for Oct. 5, 6 and 7.

Venture Three

By Jessie Shaver—229-2714
Coordinator, Harriett Price

Venture III is back

We had intended to have some news in last week's edition, but hurricane David changed our plans.

Everyone was busy on Sunday packing and leaving to escape David. In spite of the damage done to many of the trailers and their screened porches, this area is very, very lucky. Having seen the damage of five hurricanes in Miami over the past 45 years, we know how bad it can be. We were certainly blessed that there was no strong storm surge to bring in a tidal wave, as that can be devastating.

On my return from my vacation, I had several cards and ntes giving me news, but most of it is quite late now. Thanks to Winnie and Tom Widlake of Fitchburg, Mass. for their news of Sam Tucker and themselves. They should return in Oct. Betty Pfabe wrote about their summer and their trip to Richmond, Va. to a Motorcoach Convention. They have seen the Barretts, the De Hasebs, and the Cormicans.

A nice letter from Virginia and Leonard Shinaks gave a good account of their summer in Ridgetown, Can. They make trips to Detroit on business and for Virginia to teach on Tuesdays. They send their regards to all their friends. Bud and Lou Prev got home about the same time I did. They told of their trip to Tampa, then to Hilton Head, and to the Family Motor Coach Convention in Richmond, where they ran into several Venture III friends. Then on to Conn., Mass., and Maine, eating pizzas and lobsters. They went to Newfoundland by ferry and to tour St. Johns and Gander and Grand Falls.

Harriet and Lee Price were also good about sending news of their trip. They spent time in the N.C. mountains, and up to Vermont to visit their Miami neighbors. Then across to Nova Scotia on the 10 hour ferry and it was rainy and foggy the whole 10 hours. They toured N. Scotia and were impressed with the high tides at the Bay of Fundy. Back on another ferry to St. Johns, and toured that area, and ate lots of lobsters. They went through a sardine canning factory where they saw the entire process from coming in on a boat to being sent out to stores.

Then across N.Y. state to see Lee's Mother and near Cleveland to visit Lil and George Bares of Holiday Out. They spent time with Harriet's brother in Western N.C., Stone Mt., and back to Eustis, Fla. to escape David.

A call from Bud and Yvonne Wiencke, said they hope to be bak here in a few weeks. We were very surprised to see that our beach had not eroded — in fact the day after the storm, it looked in real good shape — and that our walkway over the dunes suffered no damage. Neither did the rec. hall, pool area or the Marina. We were lucky, also, as there apparently was no seawall damage. Some landscaping was not so lucky.

Jean and Gil Van Willigen were in Albuquerque, N.M. and Colorado. There is so much that has happened, that I can not get it all in.

We are glad to report that Howard Koepka and Jack Brittain are both recovering from their sudden attacks. We all wish them a quick recovery. We will try to get back into the swing of thiNgs and report more efficiently.

Fran Tener is enjoying her stay in California and will be there the balance of the month. We will see her in Oct.

Tom and Edna Ortalani returned in time to leave, because of David.

Edith and Dick Painter went to Jax. to escape David.

Helen & Bill Pyott came down to check on their damage, which is very small. They will stay about 2 weeks.

Belated birthday greetings to Lola Bonar on Sept. 1st — and Dick Painter on Sept. 5th. Anniversary Congratulations to Elaine and George Gheesen on Sept. 13th.

gers flounder but escape with win over Satellite, 14-7

t of the second half of last ght's opening game, Fred artin County Tigers football ared to have things well ntrol.

e seemingly safe lead was points, but throughout the he Martin County defense lated well to Satellite's e-pass offense, and the of the Scorpions tying the inning it with a last-second med almost nill.

loyle, the visiting quarter- d other ideas, and nearly d just such a winning drive, ort in the waning seconds as County hung on for a 14-7 10-AAAA win.

while totally abandoning his game, let the football fly no in 45 times, producing success enough to keep the Tiger backfield off balance and ps in the game.

while, the Tigers, playing in one of their largest home in years, played "hot potato" the pigskin, fumbling away chances on five occasions, ing any offensive punch they gnuster.

ything was working in the ball," said Chase after the escape, "but we'd run 12 yards mble, 20 yards and fumble, 30 and fumble. We fumbled so times that our defense was on d for almost the entire half. uldn't move after the first half, sn't blame them. They put in e ball game out there in one nk goodness our offense picked little bit in the second half."

Martin County (1-0) broke a 7-7 tie with 4:28 remaining in the third quarter, driving 58 yards in nine plays, as John Box burst through the center of Satellite's tiring defense, going two yards for the score.

Satellite continued to pass, and with enough effectiveness to record 18 first downs on the night -13 of them through the air. But not until the Scorpions took over possession with just under three minutes left in the game did they mount another serious scoring threat.

Two passes from Boyle to blue chip wide receiver Scott Arnold accounted for 27 yards during the last-gasp march, which began at the Satellite 26. Arnold, running with the footsteps of MCHS cornerback Eddie Davis virtually on top of him all night, managed six receptions, with running back Jim Parry also grabbing six and end Pat Hayes hauling in five.

It was a toss to Hayes that placed the ball at the MCHS eight-yard line with 1:01 left, and an encroachment penalty advanced it even closer, to the four.

But Linebacker Dean Tucker split a questionable Satellite offensive line (which allowed five quarterback sackst, bringing Boyle down for a nine-yard loss at the 13. Boyle's next pass was an apparent touchdown, but the receiver, Arnold, was found guilty of offensive pass interference in the end zone.

By this time, the ball was back at the Tiger 28, and Boyle's mad scramble on the next play resulted only in getting it back to the line of scrimmage, and Satellite's chance was lost.

Dave McCaughey, Boyle's counterpart, had a fine night for Martin County, completing six of 12 aerials for 160 yards, including the game's first touchdown, a 78-yard catch and run by tight end Brad Larsen, of Jensen Beach. But McCaughey, a senior, was overshadowed by the stats flashed by Boyle, who enjoyed a 23-for-45 evening, tossing a 30 yard touchdown to running back Deddrick Merrix in the second quarter.

It was Boyle's two interceptions (Chris Cherry and Ron Parker) that undid the Scorps (0-1), rated about even with the Tigers in the state's top twenty AAAA squads before the season-opening clash.

Chase did praise his defense, saying that "except for one touchdown pass, they gave up almost nothing."

"I hope it was a case of first-game jitters," he said, although hinting that overconfidence may have played a role in the hair-raiser. "We've got two weeks now to get ready for Lake Worth, but this one tonight was important because it was a district game."

For Chase, the victory was especially sweet in that he coached for four years at Satellite before taking over the up-and-down Tiger program in 1978.

Martin Countgy's game with Lake Worth will be an away game, with this week representing a chance for several Tigers to lick their wounds and recover for the tough, nine-game, nine-week push.

TIGER SUMMIT: Head Coach Fred Chase and QB David McCaughey

Defense, last inning rally topples Offense

Due to the Extensive Coverage of Hurricane David in last week's Mirror, the report of this game could not be included.

It was supposed to be simple.

With the biggest and strongest hitters the Civic softball League could produce taking dead aim at the fences on the Vince Bocchino Field at Sanford Park, there would be no way that a defense-oriented squad (chosen only because of their defensive abilities) could possibly win in a head to head meeting.

It wasn't that simple.

The Offensive All-Stars and the Defensive standouts fought tooth and nail for nine innings, before WSTU Radio's Gary Shelt sent everyone home with a run-scoring single in the bottom of the ninth inning, as the Defense upset the Offense, 6-5.

All the proceeds from the game (over $230) were sent to the Muscular Dystrophy Association, in conjunction with the 1979 Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon, which collected over $30 million in pledges.

Shelt's dramatic, tie-breaking hit capped one of many fine individual performances in what may well become an annual event.

Steve Zelenski, the Defense's third baseman for much of the night, ripped three singles in three plate appearances, collected two runs batted in and made several fine plays at "the hot corner," from where he excelled, all season.

Other fine offensive performances were recorded by Jerry Bocchino (Defense), who slapped two singles and walked once, and Shelt, who duplicated Bocchino's statistics.

David Bocchino, the Offense's starting and losing pitcher, chalked up two hits, as well as a walk and run scored in the fourth inning.

Other All-Stars had two-for-three nights at the plate, including Offensive outfielders Bob Phillips and John Conway, Offensive infielder Charlie Schemmer, and Defensive infielder Nick Blount.

League batting champion Mike Wegler, playing for the Offense, suffered through an 0-for-two evening.

The Offense outhit the Defense, 14-11, but the Defenders made several outstanding fielding plays, living up to their billing.

However, it was a key play in the ninth inning and only that which prevented the Offense from escaping with a 5-4 win, hardly impressive but still a victory.

After Zelenski's third single of the game gave the Defense some hope of tying the score in the final inning, both Gregg Sprauer and Steve Coy flied out, leaving the game's fate in the bat of Optimist Club first baseman Bob Mousaou.

Mousaou ripped a low line drive into right field. Ironically, it was his teammate, Mike Jordon, that had the only chance to catch it, but the ball evaded his searching glove. Mousaou ended up at second base, and Zelenski scored, tying the game, 5-5.

Moments later, after Offensive Manager Frank Hughes (First Federal) had decided to pitch to Shelt (rather than intentionally walking him, setting up a force play, and bringing Shelt's teammate, Joe Quick, to the plate), the WSTU standout looped a lazy single into center field. The efforts of both Wegler and Conway to retrieve the ball in time for a play on Mousaou at home plate were futile, and the game was over.

On only one other occasion did the Defense actually lead — in the second inning when they scored twice to grab an early, 2-1 edge. After Schemmer's single scored Paul Nasser with the game's first run, Jerry Bocchino countered for the Defense, walking to open the second, then advancing to second on an error by first baseman Dave Malheiro. Blount then singled, and Bocchino scored when Jordon's throw from right field flew over the screen and out of play. Zelenski later singled to score Blount.

The Offense came back to tie the game in the fourth frame when David Bocchino walked, advanced to third on Phillips' single, and scored on Malheiro's double. The Offense, though, muffed an excellent opportunity to add more runs when Russ Hughes grounded weakly to the pitcher, leaving runners at second and third.

But the Offense took the lead anyway, scoring another run in the fifth on singles by Conway and Jordon, and a sacrifice fly by Nassar.

However, it was a battling Defense that quickly retaliated, using singles by Jerry Bocchino, Blount and Zelenski to made it 3-3.

The Offense temporarily broke loose in the seventh inning, taking advantage of an infield error and singles by David Bocchino, Phillips and Hughes to score twice. But the Defense pulled to within striking distance in the eighth when Jerry Bocchino singled, scoring Milton Reese as Wegler's throw from the outfield sailed over the screen (the second such throw by the Offense's outfield). It was that 5-4 deficit that faced the Defense as they came to bat in the ninth, but when the game was over, things had changed.

The Defense sparkled on many occasions, including twice on plays by Hamp Elliott in the outfield. In the second inning, with the game still scoreless, he scooped up Nassar's double, relaying the ball to Al Kilkan, who made a perfect throw to Coy, nailing Jordon at home plate. Later, Elliott caught up a Dave Malheiro fly ball and proceeded to turn it into a double play by throwing to Blount at second and nabbing the surprised Phillips.

Predicting is easy, but when Westwood wins...

As I was explaining to a friend [illegible] I've always enjoyed playing football prognosticator, but this year was going to be special. This time, I'd have to be really accurate, because my predictions would be published the week before the games.

You see, this is a change for me. Before, I merely waited until I found out who actually won the games, then boldly voiced my prediction.

This procedure proved successful, and I never could figure out why [illegible] The Greek or someone else famous tried it. I guess everyone has his own special system.

But with Hurricane David having left his mark on Jensen Beach and particularly Langford Park, I decided last week to harp on the area's fine prep quarterbacks, a situation that only complicates my new system.

So for one week, I'll be somewhat honest, and tell you who I would have picked to win last week's high school games, as well as how they turned out, although you should be able to figure that out yourself, merely looking at who I picked to lose!

Last week's predictions:

Atlantic by 7 over Lake Worth (there goes my perfect record for 1979 — Lake Worth prevailed 18-6); Boca Raton by 6 over Pahokee (take that back. I am still perfect — Pahokee won 14-6); Suncoast by 14 over Palm Beach Gardens (well, once in a while Suncoast 14, Gardens 6); Glades Central by 16 over Leonard (Glades won, 25-22); Newman by 1 over Cardinal Gibbons (Newman won, 20-12); FP Central by 14 over Eau Gallie (Central won, 20-0); Martin County by 10 over Satellite (MCHS/14, Satellite 7); Merritt Island by 20 over Astronaut (MI 14, Astro 0); Vero Beach by 3 over Cocoa (WOW! — Cocoa 40, Vero 14, enough said about that fine!); Okeechobee by 2 over Fort Pierce-Westwood (Oops, Westwood won, 44-0).

WHAT?!#%&/n??

Westwood won? It can't be true! The same team that lost ten straight games in 1978? You've got to be kidding me.

Now you know the real reason I did not publish my predictions last week. When Westwood wins, the world must stop!

My attitude, up until now, with Westwood was "I'll believe it when I see it." Having now seen it, let me proclaim myself as the first member of the Westwood "Jump On The Bandwagon Club."

Westwood — 10-0 in 1979!

Despite my knack for making a total idiot out of myself in certain instances (Cocoa-Vero and Westwood-Okeebee), a quick review of the list shows a better-than-even first week record of 8-4.

So with my ego boosted and another twelve prep games at hand (although Martin County, FP Central and Vero Beach are all off), I will try to improve even more.

Wilkie's Winners for this weekend:

Suncoast (1-0) at Westwood (1-0) — I regret cancelling my membership, but Suncoast by 10.

Okeechobee (0-1) at Jupiter (1-0) — Considering what I saw Jupiter do to North Shore and what I didn't see Westwood do to Okeechobee, I definitely do not want to see this game Jupiter by 19.

Forest Hill (0-0) at PB Gardens (0-1) — Playing their opener, Forest Hill is an unknown quantity. No one should know much more about them after this bo-hummer Twin Lakes by 4.

North Shore (0-1) at Glades Central (1-0) — North Shore mad after last week, Central should improve Glades Central by 10.

Lake Worth (1-0) at Leonard (0-1) — Please, don't look Lake Worth by 22.

Twin Lakes (0-0) at Boca Raton (0-1) — Boca disproved that theory about AAAA teams beating AA teams in loss to Pahokee, should do better now Boca by 7.

Clewiston (1-0) at Pahokee (1-0) — Clewiston won district early in this game last year, but not this year Pahokee by 4.

Satellite (0-1) at Merritt Island (1-0) — Tom Boyle found pasing success last week, even in Chase's Space — Tiger Stadium. But he may not do it this week against the state's top dog. MCHS is rooting hard, but Merritt Island by 14.

OTHERS — Rockledge (1-0) over Cocoa Beach (0-1) by 12; John Carroll (1-0) over Melbourne Central Catholic (0-0) by 1; Titusville (1-0) over Cocoa (1-0) by 1; Astronaut (0-1) over Melbourne High (0-0) by 13.

INJURED TIGER—Ricky McGahee, Martin County's starting fullback, is pictured taping his injured ankle. The Port Salerno product twisted the ankle during Martin County's 14-7 victory over Satellite Friday night, in the season opener for both teams. The Tigers, however, do not play this week, and McGahee said Monday that he would "be back at full strength about Thursday (tomorrow). MCHS travels to Lake Worth next week to try to avenge last year's 28-21 loss to the Trojans. Photo by Donnie Wilkie

Northport Men's golf scores

The Northport Men's Golf Association held its weekly outing Tuesday, and Bert Moore stole the show.

Moore carded a net score of 61 to win the A flight, with Roy Black's 65 taking second.

In Flight B, Bill Ewart had a 55, while Stan Kazan shot a 59, good for second place. In the C flight, Al Baker grabbed top honors with a 56, Mike Farrelly had a 62, Frank Rhein topped Flight D with a 54 net, as Cy Leap took a 58 for second.

On the third hole of play, Jim Williams' tee shot was judged to be "closest to the pin." In the same competition on the 13th hole, Bill Ewart was closest to the hole.

Warriors upset North Shore, 26-7

Chris Perkins threw two touchdown passes, kicked a 37-yard field goal, and accounted for 104 of Jupiter's 233 yards in total offense last Thursday night, as the Warriors won their 1979 season opener, 26-7 over West Palm Beach North Shore.

"We knew we had to stop their running game," remarked Bob McKinnon after recording his first victory as the Warrior coach, after assuming the duties from Jack Moody. "We had to contain their fast backs (namely AAA sprint champion Richard Ryles), and we figured they would have to go to the outside. But our linebackers did a tremendous job of shutting them off. They (North Shore) broke a couple big plays, but nothing really substantial".

Perkins directed the Jupiter attack with all the expertise of a four-year starter, although he only came out for the team midway through 1978, and did not play quarterback at all until this season.

A quick Jupiter drive to begin the game culminated when he booted his field goal, which cleared the crossbar with ease.

A North Shore fumble ate in the opening quarter led to the second Warrior score, an eight yard toss from Perkins to Carl King. Perkins' point after made it 10-0.

"We needed to establish our running game to set up everything else," said McKinnon. "It looked super tonight. The offensive line really pulled through. I really couldn't ask for more."

Indeed, the Jupiter runners made it look easy, as Perkins handed off time after time to his many talented running backs, who combined for 132 rushing yards.

For a brief time in the second quarter, Jupiter drifted away from its run run run strategy, using nothing but passes in its two possessions. Consequently, North Shore finally got going, and closed the gap with a 10 yard gallop by Ryles. But the blazing halfback would get only 37 yards on nine carries, and the Mustangs would score no more.

In the third and fourth periods, Jupiter broke open the 10-7 game, scoring on Cuva's 11 yard burst and Perkins' second scoring pitch, a 20-yarder to Ernest Brown. The Warriors also added a safety when North Shore punter Billy Kurtz was trapped in his own end zone after a bad snap.

Twice, fights broke out on the field - midway through the second period and again with only 1:12 remaining in the game. Penalties were assessed against both sides, but normal play resumed quickly afterward.

"We're a young club, and we were sticking it to them pretty good on defense," observed McKinnon, "and I think the boys just got a little bit excited. North Shore is the type of team that gets down on itself if it falls behind, and I think they just turned to other alternatives for awhile.

Jupiter kicks off its home schedule this Friday night against Okeechobee, a team Perkins beat last year, 7-6 with an extra point kick.

THIS WEEK'S DEADLINE 12 noon, September 21

Robins' netters pull giant upset, but can't do it twice

BY DONNIE WILKIE

After a relatively unimpressive performance in the pre-season jamboree, the Martin County High School volleyball team was being discounted as a possible Suncoast Conference contender, at least for 1979.

But one night's worth of enthusiasm and charged up play changed all that for Sherrie Robins' Tiger netters.

The Lady Tigers upset two-time state AA champion John Carroll last week, taking a straight games 15-6, 15-12 decision in the Tiger Den. It was a result that even boggled the mind of John Carroll Coach Jon Toler, who could only say "they outclassed us."

The tables were turned, though, when the two squads took the court in Fort Pierce Monday night, and the now fired-up Rams evened the score with their rivals from Martin County, 15-4, 13-15, 15-7.

The reigning state AA titlists played a more aggressive and mistake-free game Monday night, although the Tigers gave them all they could handle for two and a half sets, before the Rams won the final seven points in succession.

Martin County showed signs of pulling another upset when the Tiger setters came back from a 13-10 deficit in the second game, rallying for the last five points and their 15-13 win. But after falling behind in the crucial third game, only to come back again (from 1-6 to 7-8), the Rams used their experience to pull out the victory.

The Lady Tigers travel to West Palm Beach for a match against Forest Hill tonight (wednesday), before returning home for a Monday night meeting with Lake Worth Leonard. They then meet Leonard's chief rival, Lake Worth High School, at Lake Worth next Wednesday (September 19).

MORE VOLLEYBALL — Fort Pierce Westwood used a never-say-die attack to pull out a 16-14, 12-15, 15-12 victory over cross-town rival Fort Pierce Central in the opening match for both teams.

The Panthers had to go into overtime in the opening game, but managed to edge the Cobras with their aggressive style. After losing the second game 15-12, the Lady Panthers seemed to regroup and took command in the third game, winning it and the match 15-12.

CROSS COUNTRY — The Martin County High School Tiger cross-country team was scheduled to run in Fort Pierce Monday afternoon against the Central Cobras, but a combination of bad weather and the aftermath of Hurricane David forced the run to be postponed.

Tiger cross-country coach John O'Connor, of Jensen Beach, said Monday that school officials from Fort Pierce called him "about two hours" before the scheduled opening meet and told him course conditions would make it impossible to stage the meet. The Tigers are scheduled to run against Palm Beach Gardens tomorrow (Thursday), before participating in the Suncoast Conference Group One meet at Florida Atlantic University.

ENTERTAINING COACH—It's always fun to keep an eye on Indiantown Firebird Head Coach Bob Souza, who's likely to strike two or three dozen different poses during an evening. The Mirror's cameras caught him in one such position during last Saturday night's Junior Football League jamboree, as the Firebirds whipped Port St. Lucie, 7-0. The same two teams open the 1979 regular season at Indiantown this Saturday night.

Hurricane issue is sold out

Copies of last week's Jensen Beach Mirror are scarcer than hen's teeth these days.

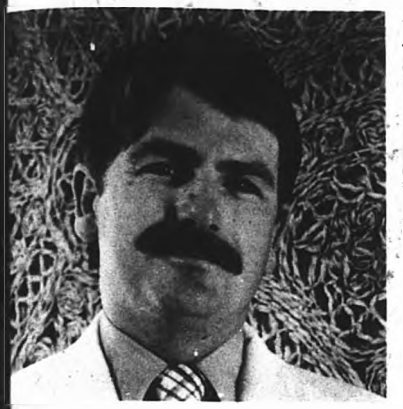
That issue contained three full pages of Hurricane David damage pictures, as well as stories and several David photos on page one.

Apparently a lot of folks bought extra copies to save as souvenirs or to send to friends and relatives out of town.

As of Tuesday morning, Sept. 11, we sold out of that issue. So, if you still have one, you may want to hold onto it. And, if you bought a copy to mail out and haven't done so, here's a tip for mailing it.

Quarterfold the paper so the upper right hand corner is still exposed, place the address in the upper right corner, above the price of the paper.

Generally, postage runs 25 to 30 cents, but it's best to check with the Post Office on that.



Yates named news director of WMCF

The management of radio station WMCF announces the appointment of Sammy Yates as news director for FM

Yates, 27, assumed duties last Monday. He is in charge of news and public affairs for the station, and will be coordinating some new programming for WMCF radio listeners.

"We are pleased to announce Sammy coming on board and are looking forward to an expansion of the news department," said general manager Fred Nettere. "We are planning other changes for the station in the near future, all designed to further service the Martin and St. Lucie communities."

Yates was co-news director and anchorman for Channel 11 news, Perry Cable, for two and a half years, and was news director for radio station WSTU for five years. He is a native of Fort Pierce, and attended local schools.

He is on the board of directors of the East Coast Chapter of the March of Dimes, and is assistant public information officer for Martin County Civil Defense.

Yates and his wife Johnnie have one son, Erik. They reside in Port St. Lucie.

MARTIN COUNTY PLAYERS are now rehearsing for their Sept. 28th opening of "The Madwoman of Chaillot." The play features a delightfully daft countess, and will run for seven performances. Ray Hilton is director.

The Madwoman of Chaillot' in mid-rehearsal

The Martin County Players are now in mid rehearsal for their September 28 opening of "The Madwoman of Chaillot."

The central character of the play is the so-called madwoman. She is in reality a delightfully daft countess, wanting only to restore the graciousness and beauty of an earlier day. The "Madwoman of Chaillot" (pronounced shy-o) won the New York drama critics circle award as the best foreign play of the season.

In the "Alice in Wonderland" atmosphere of conspiracies, mock trials and tea parties, she triumphs over some plundering scoundrels who would dig up her beloved Paris, because they believe there are oil deposits under the city's surface. The adorable old madwoman convinces the rampant charlatans that there is oil in her cellar and sends them (and symbolically, all men who would destroy the charm of life) to doom on an endless flight of steps that lead only downward!

The play is directed by Mr. Ray Hilton and will run for 7 performances only beginning September 28. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. For tickets, reservations and information, call Barn box office 287-4884.

No figure on nuke damage

A Florida Power and Light Company officials said Tuesday they still don't have an assessment of how much damage a huge crane caused in the St. Lucie II nuclear power plant site when high winds toppled it during Hurricane David last week, but one official dismissed as "bunk" a rumour that the storm caused a radiation leak.

The upper portion of the crane, which stood next to the unfinished reactor containment building, plummeted into a nearby reactor auxiliary building (RAB) which was also under construction. Apparently, the crane boom caused extensive damage to the RAB, but local FPL officials said they didn't know if the RAB would have to be town down and rebuilt. A guy wire to the boom fell across the containment building and a cable fell across one of two start-up transformers for the St. Lucie Unit I nuclear power plant. That plant has been shut down as a precautionary measure before the hurricane hit, and since the operating license requires both transformers to be operational before the plant can go on line, it was not until last Thursday that Unit I started up again.

The wife of a nuclear plant construction worker said Tuesday that her husband had gotten a rash on his arms after going to work to clean up the damage, and she said that a few days later workers were having to wear goves and special uniforms because of a possible "contamination". She said she didn't know if the "contamination" her husband spoke of was radiation, but said she didn't believe so.

"If she's insinuating radiation, that's wrong" said Harry Shindehette, St Lucie County's FPL general manager.

Shindehette said he has heard no damage estimate figures yet, but said the damage from the boom had nothing to do with the Unit I plant. "It fell on a constfuction site, just like any constructio site. It was not an active plant," he said.

When asked if the damage would delay completion of the Unit II plant, Shindehette said he didn't know, but said the tentative "on-line" target date for Unit II has been and still is May of 1983. "There's plenty of time between now and then to make up for lost time," he said.

Gene Van Curren, FPL general manager for Martin County, said Tuesday that he had just spent the last hour trying to find out information about damage to the nuclear plant facility. "So far, I can't get any information. The project general manager is in New York and the information people didn't have anyinformation and I can't locate the project supervisor," he said.

When asked if the crane caused any radiation leak he said "that's bogwash, it's (the Damage) the St. Lucie II site, not the Unit I site."

He said the RAB "is just unde construction and wasn't finished. I think a piece of boom went through a couple of concrete floots, but they hadn't gotten up to roof level) yet.

Van Curren was asked if the damage would require tearing down the RAB and rebuilding it. He said he didn't know and was still trying to get damage assessment information. Neither he nor Shindehette nor Tony Bruns of the FPL office in Miami knew of a dollar figure to attach to the damage. Bruns called the radiation or contamination rumour, "bunk".

SQUALLY—Many golfers braved the elements of rain squalls in completing the shotgun round of two-best balls tournament Sunday at Sandpiper Bay for the country club homeowners group.

An 18-under wins tourney for Sandpiper homeowners

The beautiful morning turned blustery and squally as the Sandpiper Bay Homeowners two-best-ball tournament completed the shotgun start in early afternoon Sunday.

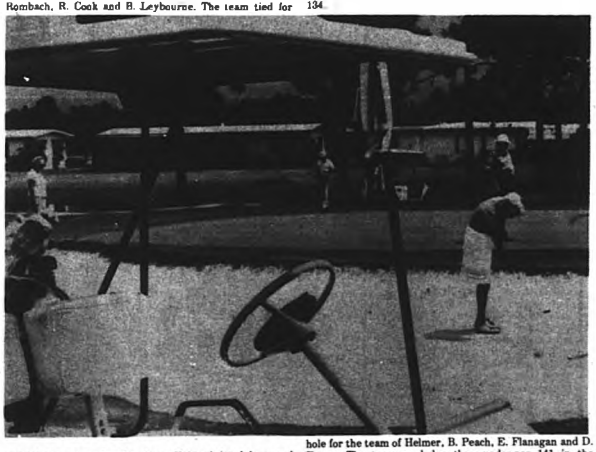
The weather didn't stop the team of F. Nestor, H. Kennedy, J. McNitt and B. John from carding an 18-under 126 to take top honors.

the score was six strokes lower than second place finishers B. Heller, G. Hickman, V. Martell and B. Nardone, with a 132.

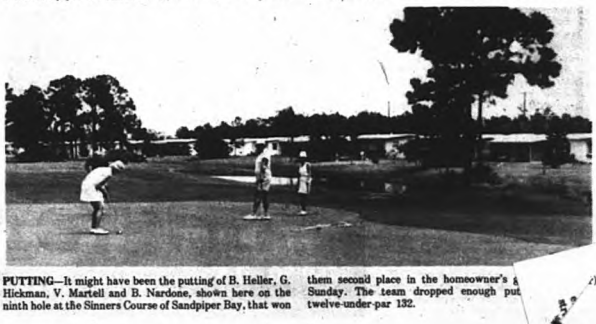
Third place went to J. Wergers, R. Mager, B. Flanagan and D. Hickman, who had 134 for ten under.

There was a tie for fourth place, with the team of H. brodle, M. Romback, R. Cook and B. Leybourne carding 134, ten under, along with the team of H. McDougall, T. Skinker, T. Gates and D. Moniz.

CHIPPER—Easing up to the eighteenth flag at Sandpiper Bay's Sinner's Course is the team of H. Brodie, M. Rombach, R. Cook and B. Leybourne. The team tied for fourth in the Sandpiper Bay Country Club Homeowners best two ball tournament Sunday, shooting a ten-under-par 134.



WEDGING—A sand wedge, Irene Helmer's head down and a little chip put the ball right up near the pin on the ninth hole for the team of Helmer, B. Peach, E. Flanagan and D. Evans. The team carded a three-under-par 141 in the Sandpiper Bay homeowner tournament last Sunday.



PUTTING—It might have been the putting of B. Heller, G. Hickman, V. Martell and B. Nardone, shown here on the ninth hole at the Sinners Course of Sandpiper Bay, that won them second place in the homeowner's Sunday. The team dropped enough put twelve-under-par 132.

GEARING UP for production of a 7,500 pound wing-box for Boeing's 767 jetliner means a new addition will have to be built at the Grumman Aerospace Corp. plant at Witham Field in Stuart. Above is an artist's conception of what the 100,000 square foot plant will look like when completed next year. Groundbreaking for the addition was conducted recently.

200 kids expected for fish tourney Saturday

About 200 children are expected to turn out Saturday for the annual Izaak Walton League "Youth Fishing Tournament" on the Jensen Beach Causeway.

The contest, popular with youngsters every year, is to be held from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday. It is open to children up through their 15th birthday, and contestants are required to bring their own bait and tackle.

Each contestant who catches a fish, as well as some who don't catch one, will receive a prize. And, there are some fine prizes to be had. They include three $25 gift certificates from local stores, one $20 certificate, two $15 gift certificates, a baseball glove and 12 balls, seven rod and reels prizes, three surf casting rods, one rod, one reel, a cast net, an ice chest, and a fish mount, and the Izaak Walton League will give out 200 lures.

Major prizes will be awarded for the most legal fish more than eight inches long, the heaviest snook, trout, weakfish, redfish, sheepshead, and mangrove snapper, the most unusual catch, the largest jack crevalle, the longest lady fish, longest ribbon fish and youngest angler. If no fish are caught in some of the above categories, a prize for the second largest fish in the above order of categories will be awarded until 12 prizes are handed out. And, there will be a drawing for eight major prizes.

The contest will be restricted to an area between the drawbridge and the west shore of the river. This includes the north and south side of the causeway, the wooden fishing pier, and the eatwalk under the west side of the bridge. No spears, nets or handlines will be allowed, and the taking of illegal sized fish is prohibited. No sea catfish are allowed either.

Contestants should bring their catches to tournament headquarters in the pavillion just west of the wooden fishing pier for weighing. There will be free Koolaid at the headquarters. Children under 10 must be accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Grumman starts work on $3.5 million Stuart plant

Ground breaking for a $3.5 million plant to house production of Boeing 767 assemblies took place recently at Grumman Aerospace Corporation's facility in Stuart.

The 100,000 square foot air-conditioned building will be the largest at the Grumman complex. It will bring the total manufacturing capability of the facility to 300,000 square feet, with another 100,000 square feet of structure for other aircraft purposes.

Ownership of the new plant — as with all structures Grumman has erected here — will transfer ultimately to Martin County as part of the company's lease to use and manage the airport, according to Edward Dalva, Grumman vice president and Stuart general manager.

The new plant will house production of components for Boeing's new 767 jet airliner.

Operations at the new facility are scheduled to start by April 1980. Grumman is building the 767's wing box, the 7,500 pound main structural member of the aircraft which joins the wings and fuselage.

The contract for 300 shipsets is one of Grumman's largest subcontracts ever and the largest Boeing has awarded on the program. A substantial part of the work will be done at Stuart and should help to stabilize employment. "This is a good job for the next 10 years," commented Frank Walton, assistant to vice president and general manager.

The 767 subcontract is Grumman's third such venture with Boeing. Since 1977, Grumman has turned out 248 shipsets of upper wing skins and over 170 shipsets of lower wing skins for the 727 aircraft. Each shipset contains 10 large wing skin units.

The Boeing 767 is a new commercial passenger airplane designed to provide efficiency in the face of rising costs, while extending modern passenger cabin comfort to routes never before served by wide-body airliners.

Production of the new twinjet began with an order for 30 medium-range 767s announced by United Airlines July 14, 1978. The order was valued at $1.2 billion. United's 767s will be powered by Pratt & Whitney JT9D-7R engines. First delivery is scheduled for August 1982.

American Airlines and Delta Air Lines ordered 30 and 20 respectively of the U.S. transcontinental nonstop 767 version on November 15, 1978, for the biggest order day in Boeing history. First deliveries for both airlines are scheduled in October 1982. General Electric CF6-80A engines will power the American and Delta 767s.

Two Canadian airlines — Pacific Western and Air Canada — have also ordered Pratt & Whitney powered 767s to bring the total announced orders to 98.

The 767 is the first new Boeing airliner to go into production since the 747 in 1966 — and is the first member of a new family of Boeing airliners for short, medium and long ranges.

The jetliner is designed to meet the requirements of airlines in the 1980s and beyond. It will be powered by two high-bypass-ratio turbo-fan engines — manufactured by General Electric, Pratt & Whitney or Rolls-Royce, at airline option.

The 767's two-aisle passenger cabin follows the tradition for spaciousness established by the 747, first of the wide-body airliners. Recently conducted studies have shown the seven-abreast seating concept to have wide public preference.

Developed in an intensive six-year program, the 767's design has been refined to give maximum fuel performance, operational flexibility, low noise levels, advanced airplane systems and growth potential.

The 767 cabin, measuring more than four feet wider than the six-abreast fuselage Boeing jetliners now in service, will seat about 200 passengers in a typical mixed-class configuration (six-abreast in first-class, seven-abreast in tourist class). Many other arrangements are also possible, with up to 252 passengers eight-abreast for charter flights.

'Unsavory tenant' problem solved; committee denies what happened

The Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce won't be kicking Frank Wacha Jr. out of the chamber, and a problem with alleged "unsavory" tenants creating a bad image for downtown Jensen Beach has apparently been solved.

That's the consensus of opinion following a meeting last week between Wacha and three chamber directors who had been appointed to a committee to discuss complaints against Wacha's tenants.

Wacha, understandably upset about a report in The Mirror last week that chamber directors may possibly kick him out of the chamber if the committee couldn't iron out the problem with him, said Monday that the problems complained about had been solved before they were even aired at a Sept. 10 chamber meeting. And, he said the Chamber committee members who spoke with him last week (Jon Chicky, Fred Meeker and Ron Teal) told him there had been no mention of expelling him from the chamber during the Sept. 10 meeting.

"I put the direct question to them. I said, 'is this what you all said; that you were considering kicking me out of the chamber? They said, No way'," Wacha commented.

Wacha said The Mirror article sounded like he was "hung before tried" and he said he resented the Chamber discussing the, tenant situation without first telling him such a discussion would be held and after the solution to the problem complained about had already been reached. "It makes the impression that the only reason I cleaned the place up is because of this (the complaints). It was cleaned up before this," he said, and added that the old building (built around 1908) would see many more improvements in the future, as funding allows. He likened the chamber meeting about the tenant problem to a "kangaroo court."

"I was born and raised here and have as much feeling for Jensen Beach as anyone. I want it to be as nice a town as it can," he said. And, he said he had spoken to Chicky before the chamber meeting was held and told him it would take him until October to solve the problems. He said there are legal restrictions on getting rid of tenants.

Though Wacha said that when he asked Chicky, Teal and Meeker if they had considered kicking him out of the chamber and that the three committee members responded "no way," The Mirror stands by its story of last week. Director Fred Meeker commented during the Sept. 10 chamber meeting, after some downtown merchants had complained against Wacha and his tenants, that the chamber directors could "enforce the by-laws." Then he went on to explain that the by-laws provided that when two members brought a complaint against another member, the chamber by-laws provided for the formation of a committee to look into the complaint. Then, if the problem was not solved, a vote could be taken by chamber directors to remove the member complained about from the chamber. There was a unanimous vote to form the committee.

Chamber members also discussed getting an attorney to help solve the problem.

Wacha complained that the lead paragraph of last week's story was sensationalizing the account of the meeting.

Chicky was asked why there was a change in stories from what Wacha was told by the committee and what was said at the chamber meeting.

"I don't think it is changing. I didn't bring it (kicking Wacha out) up. Fred (Meeker) brought it up. When he (Wacha) talked to us about getting kicked out, I took it to be that night, at that meeting, at that time, and we had no intentions of kicking him out then," Chicky said.

It was pointed out to Chicky that the story said there was a "possibility" that Wacha "may" be kicked out of the chamber, and that the story explained that such an action would take place only in the event the committee did not solve the problem and that the chamber board of directors voted for expulsion of Wacha. Chicky said the story "made it very clear" in the last part of the article, that a wrong impression could have been gotten from the first few paragraphs. It was in the first paragraph that the words "possibility" and "may" were used to describe the likelihood of expulsion.

Meeker could not be reached for comment Tuesday, but Teal said he felt the committee meeting resulted in a feeling of "accord" when it was over. He agreed that the bottom line of what was discussed at the chamber meeting last week was that Wacha could have been voted out of the chamber provided the committee did not iron out the problem.

But, he said Meeker was wrong about the bylaws of the Chamber. He said the bylaws allow for the expulsion of a member, but make no mention of a committee to investigate complaints about two or more members being able to complain about another and have a committee forced as a result of the complaints.

Shop Jensen, incorporation, Chamber purpose discussed

Will the slogan be, "Shop Jensen First," "Shop Martin County First," or will there be no slogan at all?

That's a question Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce officials found themselves pondering recently, and in the process, they pondered territorial boundaries.

The discussion began when chamber director and Jensen Beach Bank president Ron Mitchell asked, "Isn't it a negative thing (to say) 'Shop Jensen First' when some (chamber) members are not in the immediate area, like car dealers in Fort Pierce. And, we've been trying to push into Stuart for new members."

Mitchell had been appointed to look into the possibility of repeating for a third time a Christmas season shopping promotion package centered around the theme 'Shop Jensen First.' His comment came when he was asked to report on progress toward carrying out that promotion.

Robert Mayer of The Tiger Touch gift store disagreed with that thinking, saying, "the Chamber should suck up strongly for Jensen Beach" and not worry about "losing fringe members."

Several years ago the Jensen Beach Bank bought sponsorship of a Shop Jensen First promotional package and the next year some leftover promotional material was used. But now the material is gone and a sponsor for the package must be found if it is to be used again. Mitchell said he is not sure the bank will sponsor it again, and also said he would check with the Stuart-Martin County Chamber of Commerce to see what they were planning, so there would be no conflicting promotions. It's then that the idea of a 'Shop Martin County First' slogan was discussed, and it's one that Mitchell will apparently explore with members from the other Chamber.

And, the "other" chamber — the Stuart-Martin County Chamber — came in for some criticism during the Jensen Chamber meeting. Some members of the local chamber expressed resentment that the words Martin County had been added to the Stuart chambers title, and the Jensen chamber directors warned each other of the possibility that the Stuart-based chamber may just "march right up U.S. 1." Chamber president Jon Chicky said, "I get the impression sometimes that the Stuart Chamber of Commerce would like to have one chamber in the county." He said the Jensen chamber might consider changing its name to the Jensen Beach-North County Area Chamber.

Director Mary Killer said, "I think that's a good idea. When people think Jensen Beach, they think for some reason, just this one block in Jensen Beach."

Then Chicky said he felt "anything north of the Roosevelt Bridge is ours."

Regardless of which chamber claims what territory, there seems to be some disagreement about just what a chamber is to do. When Dr. Stanley Wampler reported on plans for a membership drive, he and Chicky differed in opinion about what the about what the chamber's role is.

Wampler told fellow directors that he was not planning another steak and beans dinner in conjunction with a membership drive. Rather, he said he would get key members in each area of the chamber's territory to solicit new memberships from businesses in their vicinity. "I just don't see how you can get enthusiasm for it (a steak and beans dinner) every year," he said. He went on to say, "We have a large number of businesses who don't realize success depends on our area's success. They are not area conscious."

He added, "We're at fault, operating this (chamber) two hours a month and we're dead the rest of the month — as far as actively participating with our businesses. We're going to have a hard time maintaining our members, much less getting new members."

Chicky then said, "We'll never get a lot of things done until we've incorporated (as a city). If somebody wants to join the chamber to get customers to come in their door, it's a mistake."

Wampler said, "I think it's wrong to say that. We need to convince businesses their viability is based on the community's viability."

Before the discussion concluded, Chicky got in the last comment, saying, "We need good government and we don't have government here. Now, the chamber is business and government."

THE LONG ARM OF THE LAW reached out and picked up five-year-old Aaron Steffensen of Jensen Beach recently, but the youngster got off with a donut instead of a ticket. Seems Aaron playfully plucked a sea oat at the beach in the presence of these Florida Marine Patrol officers. Instead of arresting Aaron for a crime he didn't know he was committing, officer Ed Traylor placed him on his lap and explained the important role sea oats play in stopping beach erosion.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

We would like to thank publicly the management and staff of Pinelake Village Mobile Park for the outstanding job they did during Hurricane David.

The Rec. hall was made available with its emergency power plant to all residents who wished to stay there during the storm. Over one hundred people of the park chose to go to the hall and wait out the storm together.

For those with special medical needs a separate room was made available where these folks could be comfortable and receive special attention.

To the Editor:

It looks as though Martin County will be sued again and for a mistake that should not have been.

Mr. George Anderson, owner of Able Carpeting was handcuffed right in his place of business in front of his employes and a business friend, and hauled off to jail by county deputies, the charge being in possession of over 100 pounds of marijuana.

Mr. Anderson, whose place of business is in Jensen Beach, told the officers that he was not the person on the warrant, further that he did not own a drapery shop, and that he did not live at the location the deputies said he did. Right here an investigation should have taken place by calling other officers to back up Mr. George Anderson's statements, and to clear this matter up.

For 100 pounds of marijuana, Mr. Anderson was not going to leave his business operation which does well. Sheriff Holt said in the article printed by the Miami Herald "that Mr. Anderson was only being detained, and that the Deputy was acting in good faith, and that 95% of the time, they get their guy."

I disagree, and I think Sheriff Holt should take a refresher course on arrests. Mr. Anderson's rights were also read to him, and if you detain someone, you don't read his rights. They went beyond detaining.

I know Mr. George Anderson, and he is indeed a credit to our business community. It took four deputies to handle this arrest, and if I were the Sheriff, the arresting officer would be "in a heap of trouble."

To the Editor:

The staff and I wish to express our sincerest thanks to the following people who gave so unstintingly of their time, energy and talents during Hurricane David.

It is estimated that some 2500 calls an hour were answered at the Emergency Operations Center until the telephones went out. Many of these people manned the phones for 24 to 36 hours straight. It was a prodigious job well done.

Volunteers — Virginia Read, Pansy Janol, Helen Dunkleberger, David Green.

Off Duty Dispatchers — Cliff Appe, Richard Davis, Donna Cosgrove, Sandra Dyster, Bruce Caldwell

Feeding some 50 to 60 people for a period of three days was quite a job and deserves a "Well Done."

Volunteers — Pearl Wyse, Jo Bell

Our "Ham" radio and CB radio were manned by two gentlemen who put in long hours keeping the Emergency Operations Center in communications with the Shelters and the outside world.

Volunteers — Bill Jochison, Radio Amateur Communications Emergency Service; Jerry Martin, Citizens Band (REACT)

To keep messages flowing between communications and operations is a monumental task. Our grateful thanks to:

Volunteers — Jim and Ev Fagan, Message Controllers and Sparky Fagan, Randy Read, Dean Isaac, Messengers

All of the information you received from Civil Defense over W.S.T.U., M.M.C.F. and the newspapers were handled through Adrienne Moore, Public Information Officer. Also, Charlie Neeld, W.S.T.U., our Emergency Broadcast System, as well as Sammy Yates, W.M.C.F. did outstanding jobs in relaying information. Both Sammy Yates and Charlie Neeld remained at their posts from Sunday through Tuesday. A tough job well done.

Ken Ringe, Planning & Zoning Department, was our Log Plotter and in addition assisted Pete Otovic, the Red Cross Disaster Chairman. They worked long and hard throughout the whole period.

In addition to those listed above, many people called Civil Defense to offer their help. Grocery stores helped supply the Civil Defense with food. The Sheriff's Department was great, also, in helping with emergency errands.

Our grateful thanks to all the Volunteer Fire Departments and Ambulance Services that remained on duty throughout the whole period of time to provide their services when needed. Volunteers, we are proud of you!

One fire department volunteer brought hot baked chicken to the Civil Defense office at 11:00 p.m. on Monday night after the storm let up. What a feast!

We can't begin to thank everyone, but God bless those people who thought of others and offered help.

Stephen J. Wells
Acting Director

Food was brought in and the coffee pot was on at all times. Also a member of the park staff was in attendance at all times.

A great big "Thank you" goes to the Tilton family for their concern for the park residents at this time.

It makes us proud to be members of the Pinelake Village family.

Ernie's back from travels

BY ERNIE CURWEN
Tel.334-0756

While visiting Senior Centers in Georgia, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, North Carolina and Alabama on a tour last summer to find out what other Seniors were doing to solve or cope with their problems, it was found that they too like best of all "TALK". So, from time to time I'll tell about their methods of "coping" and what they were most interested in talking about. But, after a 4 month absence, we better find out what is going around Martin County.

First and foremost, it was hurricane David. The greeting was not, "How are you", it was "Did you have much damage?" It was a thankful bunch of seniors that could, in most cases, report only minor damage.

Waiting for the insurance adjuster was most irritating, along with trying to dry out rugs and clothing with day after day of drenching rain. So, seniors cheerfully did what they must to get back to normal, some smarting on the need of the rain, as they remembered, only last April, some areas were warned, they would have to cut down on the use of water or start pumping sand.

The 3000 Russian troops in Cuba was the subject of some conversation, still never seemed to be a "hot" item. Whereas, a remark on TV recently by a retired auto worker, saying they should not be expected to try to live on a $850.00 per month pension, really had many seniors "Teed-off".

Some couples actually making-it (painfully, they will admit) on $300.00 had no sympathy at all for that "poor mistreated retired auto worker". Union officials would do well to keep such folks away from net-work commentators.

When conversation lags, generally it turns to double digit inflation that is now blamed on energy price increases. After a sigh of relief that the oil companies have finally achieved their goal of $1.00 per gal. gasoline and $0.80 fuel oil, they often chew about how most of this could have been avoided, if Congress had acted in 1973.

They say, remember all those letters we sent to "Folks-in-High-Places", back in those days, asking them above all, to set up an agency that would give them facts and figures on the whole oil and energy situation; saying that if they did not do so at once, inflation would get out of control and the Arab nations would control our domestic policy as well as our foreign.

Here it is almost 7 years later and still government agencies have to plead with the oil companies to give them some facts and figures. Some seniors say let us try again, write your Congressmen, tell them the elderly do know what they are talking about, as sorrifully, everything they predicted has come to pass. Seniors really are not a dumb bunch, let us tell our elected officials.

Treasure Coast Congregate Meals has recovered from hurricane David, as first "hot" since the hurricane was served Thursday, September 13. However, the members were supplied with survival bags during the period of no water and electricity.

Site Manager, Dorris Walker (334-2570), says she has a waiting list, but advises those 60 and over needing a good hot meal to get on the list, as she is always in the need of fill-ins, when regular members are away or ill. Dorris, asks all those who can't attend when scheduled to please let her know at least 24 hours in advance, don't be a "No-Show".

HCC (Health Cost Containment Committee), according to Dr. Charles Bush will be back in full swing at next meeting: Tues. Oct. 1, 10:15 at the Library. During the summer a retired "pollster" has offered to help with health surveys and a retired lawyer has agreed to help with incorporation. All interested in this problem are urged to attend next meeting.

Defensive Driving to improve your driving safety and get you a 10 percent insurance discount. Colleen Watts, Adult Education, Coordinator, says next class will be, Sat. Oct. 13, and 20, 9:30-2:30 at the Environmental Center. $2 for reg and $2 for manual. Pre-registration is required as class must be 15 min. and 30 max. Call Colleen, 287-6400 x-131.

Health Clinic for blood pressure checks and nutrition counselling has continued all summer with attendance of 30 to 50. The Martin County Health Dept. Nurses will be on hand every third Friday, 9 a.m. at Langford Field.

55 Alive Mature Driving Classes have been running all summer with about 100, over 55 seniors successfully completing the 2 day course, given by AARP instructor Leon LaRoche (also president SAC).

This is something new being put on by Federal Department Transportation (Fla. is a pilot State). It is designed to teach those over 55 how to cope with present driving conditions. Next class, starts Mon. Oct. 1 and continues on Tues. Oct. 2, 9:00 to 12:30 at the Environmental Center. Pre-registration required, call Leon 334-0416.

MCCA (Martin County Council on Aging). Leta Williams, pres., reports that doctors now hope that Russ Conser, Exec. Dir. can resume light duties in 3 months, in the meantime, Leta is filling-in. She says, 3 courtesy buses are going strong and they are serving 90 meals-on-wheels 5 days a week (They do need drivers, call 283-2243).

Also, Leta says the Log Cabin project is moving along OK in spite of "David" and still may be ready by Jan 1980.

Social Security Office, still get requests for this information. They hold forth in Stuart, Mon. and Wed. at the United Methodist Church Educational Bldg., 9 to 2 p.m. If you can't make that, call them at 287-5700. It is a pleasure contacting them, they are courteous and helpful.

CHAPTER EVENTS

The regular monthly Board and ExCom meeting was held, Thursday, Sept. 13, at 1:30 p.m. in the Stuart Inn. Routine committee reports and then according to Al Tucker, Bulletin Business Manager, the Board OKed spot advertisements at $5.00 and $10.00 per insertion.

Then, Al Tucker as membership chairman reported that president "Chic" MacIntyre will be back from teaching swimming in Glenwood Springs, Colo. on the first of October. Also, an interesting item, County Commission Chairman, Frank Wachs is now a full paid up member of the local Chapter, so no wonder he is much interested in Congregate meals and Senior Centers.

The chapter monthly picnic was held on the causeway Sept. 6 in spite of Hurricane David sweeping by just 3 days before. However, the attendance fell off to just Al Tucker and Helen Lauchley. They waited and they waited for more to show up, but finally by 12:15, appetites dictated it was sandwich time, so the two staunch chapter members had their own picnic. It was reported they had a very enjoyable time watching the cars go by, in ideal weather and it was a good time to reminisce, about chapter doings of 1978. Al tells of the card party, every Tues. in the Harry Hoke Room. Started off 4 or 5 tables of players, each month a few less, until one Tues. Al came in paid his $1.00 and waited, and waited and no one showed, so he declared himself winner by default and collect $1.00 prize money. Who says seniors don't have a good sense of humor?

Carl Wahlquist, Colonial Penn Consultant for AARP, will hold a session once a month here in Stuart, to give advice, answer questions and explain new (or old) policies. It will be on the 4th Friday of each month at the First National Bank, 2110 SE Ocean Blvd. Stuart. Thank you Branch manager S.T. McGraw for making this space available. Now, all you folks who have questions too profound for chapter insurance chairman, Al Cammisa, plan to see Carl on Friday, September 28, at the bank.

The Golden Eagle Bulletin goes to press Oct. 1 for an Oct. 4 mailing, so all chairmen and members who have items for the October issue, be sure they are in Editor Boyd Smith's hands by Monday, September 24.

Sue Johnston wins clean store award

While some folks are still cleaning up from the mess Hurricane David made, Sue Johnston, manager of the Lil General in Jensen Beach, has done such a good job of cleaning that her store tied for a Lil General "Mr. Clean" award.

Each month all stores in Division 86, from Vero Beach to Jupiter, are inspected. In spite of heavy damage to some businesses in downtown Jensen Beach, Sue's store was spared. And, she apparently managed to keep her floors and shelves spic and span after David, even though business was brisk and weather was sloppy. So, when division manager Stan Norman came around to inspect during the week of David, he liked what he saw. As a result, Sue's store tied with one at U.S. 1 and SR 707 for the monthly award. For the honor, the store managers are sharing a $100 prize that goes with winning the monthly award.

Venture Three

By Jessie Shaver—229-2714
Coordinator, Harriett Price

Cleanup was slowed

Cleanup was slowed down this past week by frequent downpours. The rains are good for the grass, but, bad for those trying to get everything back to normal.

When we see and hear of the destruction wrecked on the gulf coast towns of North Florida, Alabama, and Louisiana, we should again give thanks that we did not have any more damage than we did, when hurricane David passed by.

Venture Three residents are returning early. Dorothy and Joe Huston, Jan and Bob Dedaker, Marge and Bob Owens, Ruth and Bill Hennessey, are the ones I heard of. Welcome back to all.

A call from Fran Tener, who is still in Calif. says she is getting homesick and anxious to get back. She should be here soon after Oct. 1st.

Lee Price, Jr. stopped by to visit Mom and Dad, on his way to Miami.

Bill and Yvonne Wiencke plan to be back very soon, so they can go to the first play of the new season, at the Burt Reynolds Dinner Theatre, on the 27th of Sept.

Nomi and Dan Morton have a new daughter-in-law, named Hope. She and their son Rod were married in Delaware on July 21.

Their other son and daughter-in-law have a beautiful new baby, named Rebecca, so now Dan & Nomi have three grandchildren. While Dan works 3 days a week, Nomi dances, plays poker and baby sits.

Please turn in news of your vacations and events!!!

Park regains beauty

BY RUTH BOWES

The Park is slowly returning to beauty. It has been a large endeavor by those in the Park, ably assisted by Jack McConnell, Pres. of the Board and so many others. Thanks! Fallen trees and debris from screen rooms and trailers everywhere. Many phone calls from concerned Owners asking about damage. Many flew or drove down to take care of their problems. Some came from as far as Canada. Bill and Eva Starr from N. York have their new screen room up and have returned home already. They will return per usual, in Nov.

Vern May drove Millie and Chuck Armock down from Michigan for a week. No damage at their places so they graciously dried out Earl Palmer's rug while they were here. Good neighbor policies are very prevalent these days.

The Frank Gilberts have their lawn back in good shape, which took nearly a wk.

Good news Ruth Arbo & Wes were seen riding their bikes Friday nite. Ruth is snapping back to good health quickly, we all are happy for her.

Jean & Ralph Taylor arrived with some interesting stories about the wonderful fishing area in Canada, where they spent a good deal of the summer.

Bea & Oscar Lupke were saddened by the loss of their rare tree in the rear of the trailer. They were thankful that damage wasn't worse. Bea's back is improving, but she should be mighty careful.

Jean & Harold Messier asked us to save the sea grape tree that "David" wasn't very kind to. We are giving it love and kindness now. Right now it's at its worse, but maybe the rains and sunshine will save it.

Corrine Norris flew up to Boston for a week. On her return she and Jimmie will take a few trips while he is on vacation. Jimmie's favorite dish is baked lima beans, so the Rays prepared his dinner to ease his loneliness until Corrine returns.

The J. C. Freemans write that fishing has been great in S. Carolina. They will return in Nov. looking forward to good fishing on our beach.

Beryle & Cecil Roy write that they were bar-be-cueing a pig for the big annual picnic they have in Yale, Mich. Sounds like a nice way to finish the summer.

Vicki & Mac McKeever will be returning this week. Mac said he wished he could wear his old sneakers when he put on the Tux for their son's wedding (could it have been sore feet Mac?)

Al & Peg Ray claim the Burt Reynolds Theatre gets better each show. They enjoyed the "Man from La Manchu" as well as the good food. Did you ever try stewed plums, sausage and pineapple together? Sounds exotic and it was.

Carrie and Charlie Ullmann are raving about their trip from N.York to H.Out this week. They drove their car to Reseldon, Penn. and the car was put on a piggy back truck to be delivered in Vero Beach. They arrived by bus two days later. Carrie thinks it's very relaxing and Charlie enjoyed the sing-a-longs while riding. They stayed over night in a motel and all reservations were scheduled for them.

Gerhard & Kate Immich are back to stay on lot 153. They both retired from positions in Washington, D.C., and came here to their new home. They were almost afraid to come back, not knowing what damage they would find. They were lucky, no damage. Welcome back, happy days await you.

Recent arrivals are, Bilodeau 364, Finch 5, Crawford 164, Carroll 505, Herman Gramstoff 330, A. Hill 134, Mann 189.

Anniversaries Congratulations for—Vergual & Harry Smith, Dorthea & Wes Parker 9-20, Joyce & Pat O'terl, Louise & Harry Nystrom 9-21, Gertruke & James Simpson 9-23, Pinney & Zoe Bennett, Albina & Les Collette 9-25, Sue & Robert Allen 9-26.

Happy Birthday iabes— Carl Eury, Joan Palumbo, Mel Neumann 9-20, Jim Sykora 9-21, Dorothy Schaerer 9-23, Peg Turner, arl Niman 9-24, Betty Leister, Al Ray 9-25, Lillian Salfors 9-26.

Peg Turner wrote that with the gas shortage in Delaware and the odd and even rationing system, they had taken only two short trips during the summer. They journeyed to Highstown, N.J. to visit old friends and went to Doylestown, Pa. to visit Peg's cousin and his wife.

In August, they attended a dinner party in Kennett Square, Pa.; a reunion of duPont people who were in Japan during the two years Peg and Reg were there. The U.S. State Department, Vice Counsel in Japan while the Turners were there was represented at the reunion by his wife who came from Washington for the event and was a housegruest of the Turners for the week preceding the party. They had a lovely time of reminiscences.

Turner's daughter, Widget, is planning to fly home from Berkeley, Cal. to visit them the second week in October. October 19th and 20th Peg and Reg plan to be at V.P.I. in Blacksburg, Va. to join Reg's other classmates of 1929, for their 50th reunion.

It will probably be the second week in November by the time they reach Holiday Out., ready for a rest no doubt.

We were sorry to learn that Pete Grassi has had to undergo surgery but hope he will have a speedy recovery and be able to return to the Park soon.

Security patrol working

Ernie is back in town and by the demonstration (David) just before he arrived, seems he will have a wild and wooley season at Ocean Breeze Park. Now that he is back he will try to report the doings of OBP the same as for the past few years; so here we go. But first a great big thank you, Lets, for handling this column during the torrid summer months, it was greatly appreciated, thank you.

First thing that greeted Ernie was, "Have you signed up for the Ocean Breeze Park Security Patrol". He had not, but soon did, as an investigation showed it was very effective, but was in dire need of patrol men and women.

This patrol started about three weeks ago with Floyd Meahl, Chief of Patrol, and his wife Charlotte and Joe Jensen his able assistants. Floyd, who was at one time in charge of a Naval Security Patrol Unit, keeps the records of each patrol period, sets up patrol schedules; to pretty well cover the clock to dawn per period seven nights a week. There are too many involved to list all the names at this time, but to give you an idea of what goes on, this is how Jim and Ellen Nixon handle their "beat".

Starting off on the 11 p.m. to 1 a.m. patrol, they both had on their most comfortable shoes and each had huge flashlights, and while Ellen carried an umbrella (just-in-case), Jim carried the walkie-talkie. First, they report in to Base No. 1 on CB channel 14, that they are on duty, and all is well. Then, off they go up and down each and every street observing all suspicious shadows, cars and persons.

They don't apprehend or even confront anybody, just report to base no 1 what they see. Base no 1 immediately contacts the sheriff's dept. On the few occasions that needed investigation, a deputy responded within 5 min. The patrol is effective, as since the first week, there have been no suspicious actions to report, so all the OBPers owe this dedicated group a great big "Thank you, folks".

David did more than brush by, (as was heard on TV reports by the Curweens up there in northern Alabama) it was evident when they got here two days later and saw every TV antenna a sad buckled mess; Florida rooms blown away completely, awnings curled up in weird shapes and the like. However, although there was plenty of mince(?) damage there was no catastrophic distruction. So, let David be a warning, Martin County is subject to hurricanes, therefore it is wise to have mobile homes and accessories as secure as possible, as it might be a "Frederick" the next time.

Just a quick word. Some folks asked, "When will the Blood Pressure checks start at Langford". Well, here is the answer. They never stopped; still, 9 a.m. 3rd. Friday of each month. (It was reported that there was 30 to 50 attending all summer).

PARK EVENTS

Now that Ernie is back on the job again, he better explain to the new folks how this column is run. Anything of interest to OBPers (that is fit to print?) will be written up. Submitted items, generally get a preference, but if anyone has an item, just stop me as I go by. Now, that is the good news, but of course there is some bad to go with it. At times there are more items than there is room for, that week; so if your item doesn't appear as expected, it will be a little later, if still pertinent. So, to make this, your column, good an interesting, please submit all the items you can.

Bingo, there is in September, you know. Park management needs this month to get the Clubhouse ready for another season on exciting events, from classes of all types to all kinds of dances.

Shuffling is in the doledrums at this time of the year, with just the ol' reliables; Claude Burks; Bill Jones; Elston Lehning and Clyde Redinger battling it out every morning and at night, 3 or 4 courts are busy.

But, OBPers are active in Hendersonville, N.C. according to reports. Fran Runyan and Ella Lee came in 3rd. Consolation at Tom's park and Pete Muller as 3rd in a Main event. Also, Guy Fusco has the "Bean-Bag" game going great guns.

Hospital: Myrtle Dusseau, of 20 Bay Dr. is back home after spending 9 days in Martin Memorial Hospital. Her daughter and son-in-law, William and Polly Riddle of Madison, Tenn. were here to assist as needed, but can now return home, as Myrtle is coming along very well.

Harold Woodbury of Areca St. recently had heart surgery and is now recovering at 3141 Kistler, Battlecreek, MI 49017.

Bud Klear of Areca St. had heart surgery at Kettering Medical Center and can be contacted, care of: George Gunn, 3602 Tait Road, Kettering, Ohio 45439.

CARD WINNERS. Although Clement Hall is still boarded up, (AC is even more effective) the pinochle players go on and on, as follows:

Sept. 15: Ed Sheleski; C. Wiederman; Irene Burgess.

Sept. 8: Nan Campbell; Bobbie Tacker.

Aug. 30: Nan Campbell; Gladys Baier.

Aug. 25: Gladys Baier; Nina Ziegelhofer.

Aug. 23: Gladys Baier; C. Wiedeoman.

Aug. 20: C. Wiedman; Nina Ziegelhofer.

RAMBLING AROUND. Margret Weeks, 25 NW Cocoa St. is back from Greenfield, Mass after taking a little side trip to Peru. The tour was a wonderful adventure she reports. Watched riots from Hotel window until military took over. Then there were hair raising rides up the Andes to visit pre-Inca ruins. Had an Archaeology Professor with their group of 4, so they learned a lot about those early folks, up there at 10,000 to 12,000 feet with some at 14,000. The altitude didn't bother much as long as they took it easy, but there was a lot of huffin' and puffin'. But, the spectacular scenery of snow covered peeks of 22,000 feet were worth all the effort. Also, they "did" the deserts and jungles of Peru. It was wonderful, says Margret.

The Mertz of Miracle Dr, send word through their daughter Barbara Cresager that their grandson Robin and his father Keith Cresager have finally rounded the tip of South America in their 32-foot sail boat "The Rebel". (See Mirror of Feb. 15 for story of their departure). They had a very rough passage through the infamous Strait of Magellan, hurricanes, lost engine power, then lost mainsail. But, they did make it and Robbie and Kieth have now pulled into Valparaiso, Chile for repairs, restocking and a lot of "R&R". The storms were so bad, they are quite a bit behind schedule, so instead of making San Francisco in Sept. it won't be until mid Nov. that Barbara will join them, maybe to continue on to Plymouth, England for a Sept. 1980 arrival, 400 years to a day of Sir Francis Drakes arrival from a similar around the world cruise. Anyway, after these experiences, the Rebel crew can take anything old man ocean can throw at them (they hope) and the crossing of the Pacific should be down hill all the way. So, all their friends wish them better sailing and a very successful finish to this amazing and hazardous cruise.

Dick and Doris Read, 9 Lil'bit Ln. (way out there on the point) took Hurricane David in stride. However, they did pack all irreplaceables in their car and take off for Perry Georgia for a few days. Expecting to find their home demolished, they were agreeably dumbfounded to find everything intact, awning, shed and all. Some inside water damage, where force of wind had stripped rubber gaskets from the roof vents. They were sure a couple of thankful people.

Dick and Julia Aumiller, 1 Indian River Drive came back to no Florida room at all, only 3 rubbish cans of broken glass, that had been picked up by some neighbors. Also, they sit around a bucket in their living room, as the rains come down day after day. Then, to top that off, Julia had the misfortune to stumble on the way down and break her arm. Good luck, Dick, in getting cleaned up, don't get down hearted for you have a lot of company.

Barney and Nat Chase took another cruise this summer with Lee and Betty Brunt and Elston and Doris Lehning. This time they visited Porto Plata; St. Thomas; San Juan.

Couple returns for visit after 36 years

Just as a mother does not notice her child's growth as clearly as a distant relative who comes to visit, longtime residents of Port St. Lucie and Jensen Beach may perceive their hometown's development as a gradual transition from past to present.

To Dorothy and John Seabrooke however, the remarkable growth of this area, which they last saw some 36 years ago, came as quite a surprise.

John Seabrooke peered curiously through the windows of the Mirror office, as if trying to remember the structure as it looked in 1943 when the front office used to be his living room.

"Excuse me," he began, "but didn't this newspaper office used to be a . . ."

"Yes," came the response, "would you like a tour."

The interesting conversation which ensued soon turned from a discussion of where the kitchen and bedrooms in the Mirror office used to be, to a description of Jensen Beach-Port St. Lucie, circa 1943, and in doing so became story material.

"I can't believe it," marveled Seabrooke, "high rises on the beach, shopping centers all over the place; I remember when there was nothing between this house and Route 1."

Despite the intense development of this area which the Seabrookes regretted to see replacing their remembrance of Jensen Beach as an isolated tropical paradise, they were relieved to find that the area had "civilized" somewhat.

"There used to be so many black snakes all over the road at night that you couldn't avoid running over them," explained Seabrooke.

Seabrooke mentioned that the beaches as he remembers them were tar-free and virtually no sunbathers could be seen for miles.

What is now A1A was just jungle," says Seabrooke. He remembers that there were no places to park and the beaches could not be reached without hiking through untrodden paths in the woods to find them.

"The Jensen Bach Causeway was just a shaky wooden bridge," commented Seabrooke, "and only one car could pass at a time without hitting the fisherman."

On the first night they came to Jensen, the Seabrooks rented a room from an elderly couple who had their own story to tell of their immigration to Jensen Beach.

"They brought all their belongings by barge," related Seabrooke, who was told that the couples swam their horses ashore since there were no docks on the beach at that time.

The only commercial buildings the Seabrookes remember were a "community meeting house" on Indian River Drive and Quinn's General Store/Post Office, which was located where the Bait Box now stands.

Seabrooke was stationed at Camp Murphy, which is now the site of Jonathon "Dickinson" State Park, during the time he and his wife lived in Jensen Beach. When he left the service, the Seabrookes moved to Camp David, North Carolina, where they lived until John retired two years ago.

Upon retiring in Sanibel, Florida, the Seabrookes became increasingly curious to see what had become of Jensen Beach and the house that is now the Mirror office.

"There were no houses along here then," said Seabrooke, "and Port St. Lucie was completely undeveloped."

Although the pilgrammage to their short-term home town resulted in mixed emotions for the Seabrookes, they still say they are "very glad" they came back.

"It was a beautiful spot," remember the Seabrookes. And now, 36 years later, they are glad they returned to find it still is.

Library displays island artifacts

The collection of Dick and Tiva Sievinen is from Rotuma which is the only Polynesian Island in the group of Fiji Islands whose peoples are Melanesian. Tiva's relatives made several of the Rotuma items on exhibit. The Tahitian shell necklace and head band were given to her

HOW TO AVOID TAXES

QUESTION: Every once in a while I run into an old classmate who claims he has paid very little if any taxes over the last few years because of the shelter he gets from his real estate investments. He also claims that the properties he owns are increasing in value and that from time to time he pulls cash out by refinancing or exchanging for a larger property both without paying any taxes. Is he apt to go to jail?

ANSWER: No – he is not apt to go to jail! Your old classmate has most likely been enjoying the tax advantages inherent in real estate investments.

His depreciation deductions have allowed him to shelter the income from his investments and other sources. In the meantime, his real estate investments are appreciating in value.

As his property increases in value, his equity is increasing and he is able to refinance. Because there is no sale involved in refinancing, there is no tax on the money he puts in his pocket from that refinancing.

In addition, as his equity builds, he is able to look for a more significant property and to arrange for a tax-deferred exchange of his property for the larger one. Our tax laws provide that if the exchange is properly structured, the tax on such an exchange will be deferred.

All of this activity is commonly called tax AVOIDANCE, which is perfectly legal. It's a tax EVASION that "puts 'em in jail." We are all entitled to handle our affairs in order to minimize the taxes we pay.

Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 334-0747, or stop by:

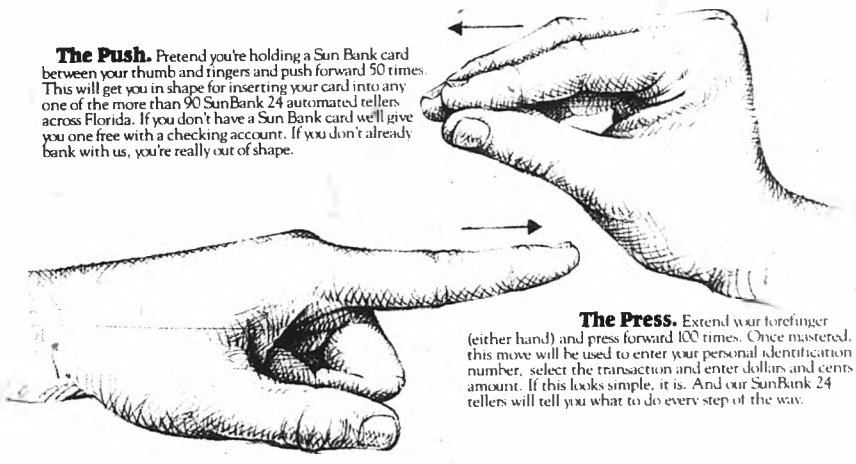
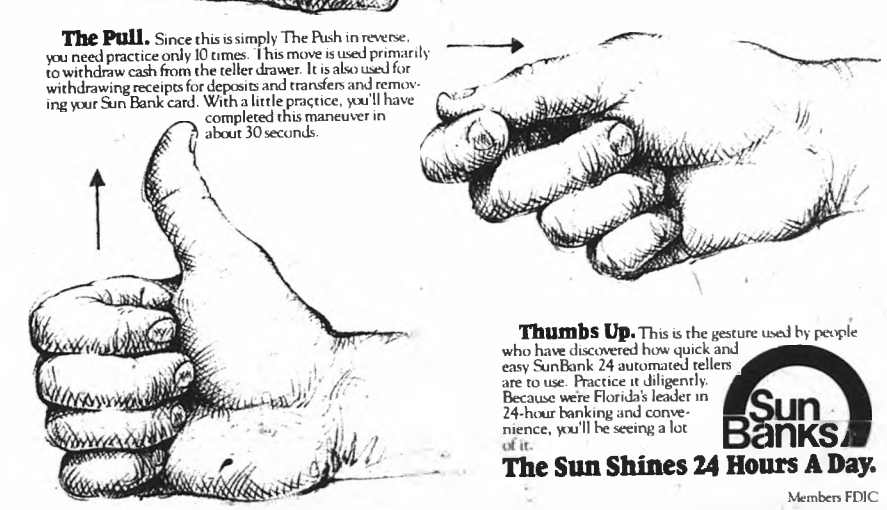
A Guide On Getting In Shape To Use Our 24-Hour Tellers.

The Push. Pretend you're holding a Sun Bank card between your thumb and fingers and push forward 50 times. This will get you in shape for inserting your card into any one of the more than 90 SunBank 24 automated tellers across Florida. If you don't have a Sun Bank card we'll give you one free with a checking account. If you don't already bank with us, you're really out of shape.



The Press. Extend your forefinger (either hand) and press forward 100 times. Once mastered, this move will be used to enter your personal identification number, select the transaction and enter dollars and cents amount. If this looks simple, it is. And our SunBank 24 tellers will tell you what to do every step of the way.

The Pull. Since this is simply The Push in reverse, you need practice only 10 times. This move is used primarily to withdraw cash from the teller drawer. It is also used for withdrawing receipts for deposits and transfers and removing your Sun Bank card. With a little practice, you'll have completed this maneuver in about 30 seconds.



Thumbs Up. This is the gesture used by people who have discovered how quick and easy SunBank 24 automated tellers are to use. Practice it diligently. Because we're Florida's leader in 24-hour banking and convenience, you'll be seeing a lot of it.

NAOMI HEDEEN

"I love cooking" says Naomi Hedeen, 1967 SE Milbrook Terrace, Port St. Lucie. "A favorite recipe with just the right flavoring is my Chicken Fricassee with Dumplings. Naomi makes light work to meal planning by serving this marvelous Orange Cranberry Salad with hot rolls and butter for a savory company meal.

Florida is great and Port St. Lucie is terrific are comments from Naomi Hedeen and husband Gene. "We've made some wonderful friends here and enjoy the activities in the Elks and Masons," states Naomi. She also enjoys playing cards while Gene prefers golf and biking. Gene recently devoted some time to volunteer work at the Jensen Beach Community Church and Port St. Lucie Community Center. Hailing from the Pittsburg area, Gene was in the electrical contracting business for 35 years and Naomi kept active in the real estate profession.

Naomi and Gene have a son living in Pittsburgh and a son in Pompano Beach. Four grandchildren liven up their home during vacation time.

BEWARE! the "RUST MONSTER"

He works 24 hours a day

QUESTION

If rust can start anywhere, including inside parts, then how can a body repairman detect all the rusted areas?

ANSWER

He can't! He doesn't have X-Ray vision, so it's impossible for him to detect rust that has started in hidden places. A body shop operator can not be held responsible for a rust condition which was undetectable at the time of a repair. Because of this, rust may appear at any time, even within days of when a vehicle was refinished.

Sunshine brightens Handicapped Picnic

Being handicapped doesn't mean you can't have fun.

At least if you have the gumption and spirit of ten members of a new club formed last March by Joe Elko and his mother Harriet.

All of its members have been stricken with some form of permanently disabling affliction — some from birth and others from crippling accident.

But the joy in the eyes and the smiles on the faces of several of them Sunday, at a picnic held in the patio of the Ray Hade home in Port St. Lucie belied the young people's physical difficulties. There were hamburgs, hot dogs and delightful conversation for the handicapped and their families who turned out some 30 strong.

And the weatherman cooperated beautifully. After nearly a solid 10 days of rain and thundershowers, the sun and soft breezes set the stage for the get-together.

The members of the club, whose afflictions range from cerebral palsy to permanent impairment by accident, come from all over the area — Port Salerno, Port St. Lucie, Hutchinson Island, Nettles Island and Jensen Beach.

Among them are Joe Shelly Birckelbaw, Deanna Davis, Mike Laird, Corey Volvo, alice Acello, Jane Dash, and picnic host Ray Hade.

The Hade home on Blockton Avenue was the perfect spot for such a picnic, with patio, pool and big back yard for the guests to enjoy. The piece de resistance was a huge watermelon, carved in basket shape by Fred Emery, a member of the Jensen Beach Community Church where the club meets once a month. Fred, dedicated to helping the handicapped, is always on hand at the meetings, according to Mrs. Elko, to help with the wheel chairs, serving the coffee, and anything else he can do to make each session a success.

Also very much present at the picnic was the Rev. Norman Kehrli, of Community Church, who has co-sponsored the club since its beginning.

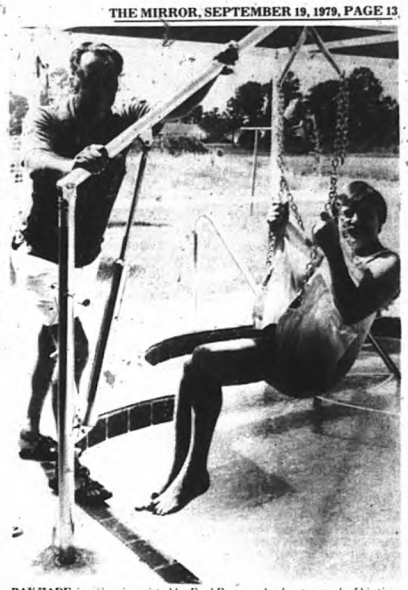
The Handicapped Club, which meets the first Sunday of each month at 2 p.m. at Community Church, is purely a recreational and social affair, giving the young people a chance for good conversation and refreshments. Assisting Joe as its chairman is Mary Ellen Bender, who is not handicapped but who shares an interest in working with them, and trying to help bring out the best in each.

The club is open to all handicapped people in the area between the ages of 15 and 40.

Story and photos by Sally Latham

AMONG THE GUESTS at the Sunday picnic for the area handicapped was Corey Valvo, seen with party co-planner Mrs. Hariett Elko. Corey was disabled in a car train wreck, and is confined to wheelchair. The picnic was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hade on Blockton Avenue in Port St. Lucie.

HANDICAPPED CLUB SPONSORS—Joe Elko, though a victim of cerebral palsy, sparkplugged the club which meets each first Sunday at Jensen Beach Methodist Church. He shakes hands with his sponsor, the Rev. Norman Kehrli of the host church.

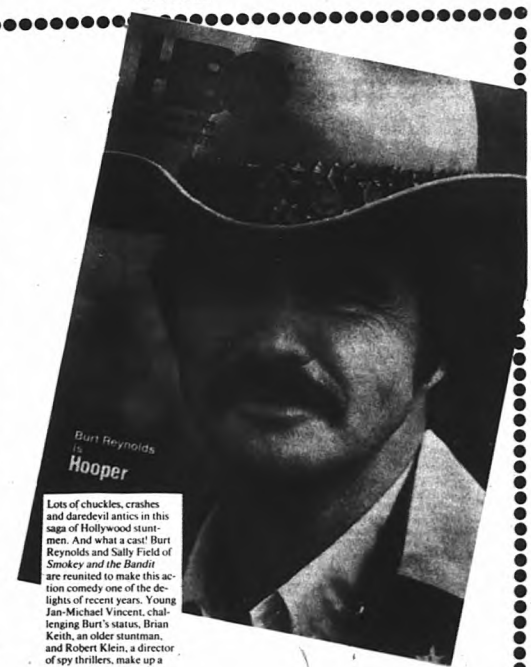


RAY HADE, in swing, is assisted by Fred Emery, who devotes much of his time working with the handicapped. Hade, a multiple sclerosis victim, uses his pool as part of his therapy.

LATECOMERS—Among the last to arrive, but not too late to join the fun at the Sunday party for the handicapped, are Russ and Bobbe Laird with their handicapped son Michael. The picnic was held at the home of the Ray Hades in Port St. Lucie.

SHARING THE FUN in true picnic fashion are, from left, Alice Acello, host Ray Hade, Joe Elko, Florence Hase and the Rev. Norman Kehrli. The picnic was attended by handicapped young people throughout the St. Lucie and Martin County areas.

BLOOD DONOR Deanna Allison, right, of the St. Lucie Junior Woman's Club, won a mirror from Stuart Paint and Supply company last week. The mirror was donated by the firm to be given to a donor to the Stuart chapter of the Palm Beach Blood Bank, and she was picked as the lucky donor. Shown with her are Sara Timon, center, who is head of the local blood bank, and Mary Sue Hawken, a new R.N. at the blood bank. (Photo by Bob Fryer)



Lots of chuckles, crashes and daredevil antics in this saga of Hollywood stuntmen. And what a cast! Burt Reynolds and Sally Field of Smokey and the Bandit are reunited to make this action comedy one of the delights of recent years. Young Jan-Michael Vincent, challenging Burt's status, Brian Keith, an older stuntman, and Robert Klein, a director of spy thrillers, make up a fine supporting cast. Junior football opens Saturday

BY DONNIE WILKIE

The 1979 Martin County junior football league season kicks off Saturday night in three towns with six games, and the Jensen Beach entries promise to provide as much excitement as any of the other ten squads around the area.

The season for Jensen Beach begins this Saturday night (8 p.m.) as they face the Palm City Dolphins in both Lower and Upper Division games.

For the Port St. Lucie Saints (changed from the Vikings) the current campaign kicks off with games at Indiantown Saturday night at 8 p.m.

The start of the season was delayed by the damage caused by Hurricane David, especially at Langford Park in Jensen Beach and Palm City Field.

The Jensen Beach Razorbacks will be led by quarterback Larry Baker, while Chris Fitzpatrick and Richard Cady provide adequate running out of the backfield. The Barracudas will be solid, too, having only to outlast Palm City and Port Salerno in the weaker National Conference of the Lower Division.

Game times Saturday are 6:30 p.m. for the Lower Division games and 8 p.m. for the Upper contests.

LAST MINUTE PREPARATIONS — Herb Reed, the Head Coach of the Jensen Beach Razorbacks junior football team, lectures his boys in preparation for this week's opening game at Palm City. Seals forecast a good season and promise to be improved. Game time this week is 8 p.m. for the Upper Division game and 6:30 p.m. for the Lower Division tilt.

Bond hopes for Atlanta rebound

BY BOB FRYER

After a dismal showing earlier this month at Road America in Elkhart Lake, Wisconsin, Jensen Beach race driver Rusty Bond is hoping for a much better showing this Sunday at Road Atlanta.

The race Sunday is a 75 mile event and is the next to last race Bond plans to enter this year. He is hopeful that a good finish Sunday and at the final race at Daytona in November will keep him in the top 10 in the International Motor Sports Association points standings for his class of racing.

Bond and Tilton race in the small engine (GTU) class of IMSA competition. Over the years they've been at it, they've built a strong reputation for consistently good finishes — though rarely do they actually win an event.

That reputation was tarnished a bit a few weeks ago at Elkhart Lake, Wis., when the clutch went out on their Porsche 911 and they had to drop out of the race after completing only 44 of the 125 laps in the 500 kilometer race. It was the first time this season they didn't finish a race they started. And, it was a severe setback to Bond's hope of improving his seventh-place position in the World Challenge of Endurance competition — a competition separate from the IMSA driver point standings which is rich in prize money for those in the top 10 at the end of the racing season.

Now, with no remaining World Challenge races close enough for Bond to enter, he's concentrating on improving his ranking in the IMSA GTU driver standings. Currently, he's tied for ninth place among GTU competitors, while his Jensen Beach driving partner, Ben Tilton, is tied for sixth place.

Since the Road Atlanta race is only 75 miles long and it's Bond's turn to compete in a short race, he'll be at the wheel of their Porsche while Tilton will work in the pit.

At Atlanta, Bond will be out not only to improve his ninth place GTU ranking, but to prove their Porsche is in better shape now than it was before a week in July. That happened at the Mid-Ohio race track when the brakes failed in a practice session. Tilton was at the wheel, coming off a straightaway, when he found he had no brakes as he approached a curve. The car plowed into a sand mound, damaging the front end, but only giving Tilton a set of sore shoulders.

Since then the car has had extensive work. Before the clutch went out at Elkhart Lake, the Jensen racers report it was handling well and running in sixth place.

In previous years Bond has finished the IMSA season ranked in fifth, fourth, third and seventh place in GTU competition, while Tilton has generally raced fewer races and finished lower in the top 10. This year they began the season with a third in class finish at the 24 Hours of Daytona and followed that with a first-in-class victory at the 12 Hours of Sebring. However, the rest of the IMSA races on the circuit are much shorter, and in those shorter races, the Mazda RX 7 and Datsun ZX cars have been too fast for the Porsche 911s.

Non-week leaves me at 14-8

For eleven Friday nights a year in Martin and St. Lucie Counties, at least a third, maybe even as many as 50 percent of the area's football fanatics drop everything and run to the closest high school game.

This theory carries a bit "more weight after last week's non week, where it seemed no team had a game. Martin County, Fort Pierce Central and Vero Beach all had scheduled open weeks, and as a result, will grace a football field for the next nine weeks without another rest period.

But back here in good ole Jensen Beach, I once again tried to pick the area's football winners. I racked up an 8-4 record, making it 14-8 for the season.

In any event, with the local teams back on the field this week, here are my predictions:

Martin County (1-0) at Lake Worth (2-0) — It's the rematch of last year's best two area teams, only this time, the result is different. Martin County by 9.

Atlantic (1-1) at PB Gardens (1-0) — Gardens won last week in an upset, but Atlantic will be too much. Atlantic by 20.

Boca Raton (1-1) at FP Central (1-0) — Farinella's forces return to the gridiron to a surprise — a fired up Bocan team. Here's my near upset of the week. FP Central by 1.

Glades Central (2-0) at Jupiter (2-0) — Jupiter has impressed in two games, but they beat Okeechobee 44-0 losers to Westwood) and North Shore (72-0 losers to Glades Central). No, it's their turn. Glades Central by 21.

John Carroll (2-0) at Florida Air — Carroll has been fortunate in its first two games, but should now improve since the team is beginning to believe. John Carroll by 10.

Pahokee (2-0) at Immokalee — who ever heard of Immokalee?

Kissimmee at Okeechobee (0-2) — I've heard of Kissimmee! Kissimmee by 5.

North Shore (0-2) at Forest Hill (0-1) — Poor North Shore. After an upset loss to Jupiter, they got really mad and rebounded with a 72-0 loss to Glades Central. Now that's regrouping! Forest Hill by 10.

Newman at Twin Lakes (0-1) — Too close to pick, but I think I will try anyway. Look for an overtime game here. Twin Lakes by 6.

Leonard (0-2) at Suncoast (2-0) — If the FP Central game isn't an upset, this one will be. Or at least that's what most people will think. But Leonard has not been lucky against two of the most powerful teams in the state, while Suncoast will meet their match. Leonard by 10.

Others: Astronaut over Palm Bay by 1; Cocoa over Cocoa Beach by 4; eau Gallie over Daytona Mainland by 6; Merritt Island over Sarasota Riverview by 16; Satellite over Orlando Evans by 4; Titusville over West Orange by 10; Vero Beach over Sarasota by 3.

SBA loan office getting 'steady flow'

Approximately 100 individuals and small businessmen have applied for government loans to help make repairs on the damage done by Hurricane David, according to Albert Wittman, Disaster Loan Specialist.

Wittman opened up the Jensen office, which was established to serve all of Martin County, a week ago. Since its opening, the government official said, there's been "a steady flow, but no standing in line" of applicants for the low-interest loans. Martin County became eligible for the low-cost money when it was declared a disaster area following the devastating storm.

The office is located in the American Legion Hall, at 126 Savanna Road, with daily hours from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The official emphasized the advantage of getting loans through the Small Businesses Administration.

"It is very low in cost," he said, "only three percent interest for homeowners, and five or seven and three-eighths for small businesses, depending on the criteria."

Wittman said he doesn't know just how long the office will be open here, but all applications must be in by Nov. 13.

Haunted House vols. needed at school

Volunteers, especially men who can do some heavy, physical work, are needed to work on a haunted house for the Jensen Beach Elementary School halloween celebration.

The event is planned for Saturday, Oct. 27, and persons interested in volunteering should contact the school.

THEY MAY HAVE halls of Ivy at colleges up North, but down here we have stately Royal Palms. These palms line the entrance to the Jensen Beach campus of Florida Institute of Technology. Classes for the Fall term began Monday, and the school opened with minor problems, in spite of damage from Hurricane David that has made both of the school's dorms temporarily unliveable.

FIT opens on schedule in spite of Hurricane David

BY BOB FRYER

Although Hurricane David made for a host of last-minute problems, school officials managed to open the Jensen Beach campus of Florida Institute of Technology on time Monday for the Fall school term.

A tornado within the hurricane is blamed for extensive damage to the school's two dormitories. Large portions of the roofs of both dorms were blown off, and as a result virtually every room in the buildings was damaged. In the south dorm a heavy coating of mildew is growing on the walls and ceilings of many rooms, and quite a few are missing portions of their ceilings, due to water intrusion. In fact, water is still standing in some rooms, curling up floor tiles.

Dean Ernest Tealey said the hurricane damage resulted in a scramble to locate housing for the nearly 400 students who were planning to occupy the dorms. "We have housed about 375 of them, either at the Quality Inn in Stuart or at the Dolphin Motel in Jensen," Dean Tealey said.

The school is providing a bus shuttle service to the motels, and has had to house three students per room. "But the parents and students have been, on the whole, extremely cooperative and understanding. And, since the rooms are larger than the dorm rooms, it's not too bad," commented Registrar Jeri Butler. Dean Tealey noted only four students decided against attending FIT due to the three to a room situation.

The dean said he had originally hoped to have one dorm ready for occupation by the end of October and the other ready in mid-November. "But all the rain we've had lately has delayed the work, and I'd say we're not about a week behind schedule," he said.

In addition to the estimated $250,000 in damage to the dorms, there was about $150,000 in damage to the rest of the campus. However, much of this was in the form of downed melaleuca trees. "We had very little damage to the academic facilities, and that's why we decided we could still open on schedule," Tealey commented. He noted that the library, with large panes of glass along its walls, did not have any damage from falling trees and had no water leaks. And, the glass-walled cafeteria, located between the two dorms, was also hardly touched.

Students are still coming in this week, and a final count won't be ready until next week, but Dean Tealey said he expects the school will have about 850 students this year. That figure is roughly the same as last year's attendance figure.

There is one change in the demography of students this year which should be good news to the men at school. Registrar Butler commented, "It seems we're getting more women in the freshman class then we've had before. That should make the men happy." She added that in the past the man to woman ratio was about five men for each woman student, but she said this year the ratio may not be so high.

And, because of two new scholarship grant programs that make from $750 to $1,200 available to qualifying Florida students, Dean Tealey said enrollment of students from Florida is up this year.

But some come from far away. The dean noted there are 25 to 30 students at the school from 11 foreign countries and that one student comes from Hong Kong.

As for the faculty, there are seven new instructors this year, bringing campus totals to 42 full-time instructors and 10 part-time. And in administration there is one new face, Dr. Dennis King, who is serving as dean of students.

School officials report there is need for rental units for upperclassmen who don't have to live on campus. However, Dean Tealey said this year's housing need for those students is not as severe as it was a few years back. He said this is because the students have earned a reputation as responsible persons and are finally shaking the bad image the community seemed to have of students back when the FIT campus was St. Joseph's College. "I get people calling to offer units for rent and calling asking for students to work for them because they know they're good, reliable people," he said.

Most school officials agreed that in spite of the damage David caused, things could have been much worse. Dean Tealey waid "We were lucky because the summer students had graduation on the Friday before the Monday that David hit, so we only had about four students in the dorms."

Once the dorms are repaired, there are several other work projects that should make for improvements to the campus. For instance, tennis courts and a soccer field will be built behind the dorm parking lots, and the long dock into the Indian River should be ready fairly soon for a home base for the school's fleet of boats. Those boats are now at Fort Pierce.

When two new students were asked their first impression of the Jensen FIT campus, they both responded favorably. "It seems to be a good school, and has a good record of job placement," commented Ken Anthony an Ocean Technology major from New Jersey. "So far they have made us feel pretty comfortable and it's been easy to adjust. It's a nice atmosphere," he said, then slipped in one common complaint of college students when he quipped, "The food's not so hot though."

John Sullivan, an Ocean Tech. major from Massachussetts, said he came here because "they have the best courses in what I'm after...They give you practical experience as well as theory."

Anthony added that a list of starting salaries for last year's graduates averaged about $17,000 and that was a major factor in his decision to come

Extensive storm damage closes Sheraton for months

The Sheraton Motel and Motor Inn, one of the most area's critical victims of Hurricane David, remains closed for repairs, and will probably not be ready to re-open for at least two, and perhaps three months, according to manager and co-owner Ed Villadonga.

The luxury resort inn's roofs, both on the dining room area and over the guest room wing, were torn off by the high winds. Villadonga said the extensive damage was done by a tornado during the last half of the storm's passing.

The overall damage will probably add up to $500,000, Villadonga said. The roof repairs have been slow in progress because of the almost-daily rains, resulting in a great deal of damage to the interior.

Rumors that the Sheraton was going into bankruptcy are untrue, Villadonga stated.

"I'm no fly-by-night," he told The Mirror. "I have other investments–I came here to stay."

He is anticipating that the inn will be open again in time for the height of the tourist season.

The other major beach motel in the Jensen area fared much better. The Holiday Inn Oceanside experienced some minor damage, but not enough to cause any great inconvenience.

"The hurricane was on Monday," manager James McManemon said, "And we were open again on Wednesday."

Savanna getting drainage

Residents of Legion Heights and other subdivisions along Savanna Road, who have been wading through junior-sized lakes since the September downpours began, found relief in sight Monday when county crews moved in with diggers and storm drainage pipe.

The work crews were ordered to the spot Monday morning by County Commission chairman Frank Wacha, after the persistent flooding in the area from South Street and White Pine Drive was called to his attention.

The large pools of water, which refused to go away and which in some cases crept into the homes along the route, were caused by a clogged drainage ditch, Wacha said.

"There's always been a drainage ditch there," he commented, "But there's a hump in the road between South Street and White Pine, and it apparently filled up with debris."

The storm drainage pipe, when complete, will extend from South of Commercial Street to the north side of Jensen Beach Elementary School, with the outfall in Taylor Creek, Wacha explained.

The pipe is being installed down the east side of Savanna Road. Meanwhile, a few of the residential lawns on the west side of the street are still filled with water.

SOME WAG, embittered by the constant high waters in street, lawns, and some cases in houses along Savanna Road, informs the public that there's "no swiming" (sic) because no lifeguard is on duty. Near the large pit caused by the high water, edges of the macadam road are chewed up by erosion.

J.B. Optimist soccer sign-up

The Optimist Club of Jensen Beach announces soccer registration on Saturday, September 29 from 10:00 a.m. until 1:00 p.m. at the Langford Park field house.

Boys and girls, ages 7 through 16 are eligible. This year, separate boys' and girls' leagues will be formed.

The registration fee is $12.00 per child with a maximum of $30.00 for an immediate family.

Navitsky to talk on bond issue cash

Martin County Superintendent of schools V. James Navitsky will attend a meeting at Jensen Beach Elementary School at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 27, to discuss what will be done with funds approved by voters last year in a bond issue.

Members of the public are welcome at the meeting.

IZAAK WALTON LEAGUE official Don Dietz, wearing white cap, calls out the names of the prime winners at the conclusion of the fishing tournament sponsored by the League last Saturday at the Jensen Beach Causeway. The event proved to be fun for the kids and adults.

Fire sub-station delay by Savanna project

The promised Savanna Road building which was to have gotten underway earlier this year, to provide a combined fire station and recreation hall for that growing area, still remains an empty plot of ground.

Fire Chief Joe Luciano, despairing of ever getting it started, said this week that he had no idea now when it might materialize. The money for the structure was written into this year's budget, but no action has been taken by the county commission to get it underway.

County Commissioner Frank Wacha, however, said Monday that it was merely awaiting the needed fill to bring the ground up to the street level.

"Part of the fill is coming from the Savanna Road project," Wacha said. "I thought they would have completed the project by now, but they are still in the beginning stages."

The much-needed fire station has been sought as a priority by the Fire Chief for a number of years. Chief Luciano is mostly concerned that a fire might break out west of the railroad tracks while one of the marathon trains could be blocking the crossing.

"A whole house could burn down while we're waiting for the train to pass," he said some time ago.

The main — and only — Jensen Beach fire station is on Palmetto, east of the tracks. The situation could also prevent the volunteer firemen from getting to the station to report for duty on time. Luciano, also president of the Fire Chief's Association, has been pressing for speed in providing a west-side substation for these reasons.

The site for the future sub-station and recreation hall is located on the west side of Savanna Road, across from the Catholic Church.

But nothing will be done to begin it until the land can be adequately filled and graded. The fill is coming from the widening of the intersection of Savanna Road and Commercial Street. Only one of the four "legs" being widened and repaved has been completed to date. Wacha could give no timetable on the projects completion or the beginning of construction on the fire-hall building.

Enrollment up at J.B. Elementary

Though school capacity is supposed to be 765 students, the Jensen Beach Elementary School enrollment figure was recently recorded at 817 children and is expected to climb even higher during the school year.

The current school population is up 60 from the 757 enrollment recorded in September, 1978. And, with six sub-divisions now in progress along Savanna Road, growth in the population seems inevitable, noted Peggy Lyons at a recent PTA meeting. As a result, she circulated a petition to call the growth of the school enrollment to the attention of school board members. The petition asks for the board members to begin planning for ways to relieve the overcrowding. A number of persons in the community have expressed the opinion that it won't be long before a new elementary school in the area is needed.

Since school started last month, two new teachers have been added to the school, and there is hope at least some portables can be added before the pupil crunch gets too unbearable.

Work is expected to begin in January on bond issue improvements, which include a larger library and two new classrooms. Completion of that work is expected in July, 1980.

A piece of History

Pardon me if I seem somewhat bemused. I am wallowing in a welter of history that would bring back to life a large hunk of existence for every member of the World War I veterans of the area and many more whose lives were touched by that great crisis, "The War to end all Wars."

My source of bemusement comes to me from Ocean Breeze resident William "Bus" Young, in the form of a fishing box full of Pathfinders, a long defunct magazine which began publication in the 1890s in Washington, D.C., and which faithfully published a week-by-week account of the Great War, blow by blow, from its beginning in 1914 through 1918, when the Armistice was finally signed.

I have to be very careful in my reading of these newspapers. They are brown from age, and most of them so frayed they fall apart at the touch.

Bus, a Pennsylvanian until his retirement and move to Florida in the '60s, found the box containing the precious collection in the trunk of a used car he had purchased.

He brought it with him when he moved to Jensen Beach in 1975. Not being of literary bent, he has simply hung onto them, not knowing what to do with them.

Actually, the stack of Pathfinders (some of which are in remarkably good condition) should be preserved by some Veterans' group or library. Each one is filled with articles and ads showing the temper and trend of the times.

Take, for instance, the copies of Oct. 7 and Oct. 14, 1916. The first bore a full-page picture of Charles Evans Hughes, late to become Supreme Court Justice, as the Republican candidate for the presidency. Giving equal time and space, the Oct. 14 issue has a similar full page photo of the incumbent, Woodrow Wilson, as the Democratic candidate.

The Pathfinder editor makes no bones over the candidate he favored. And it seems that the big issue was the tariff.

"The Pathfinder," he writes, "has always maintained and still declares that this country could thrive under a free trade or a protective policy, but that it can never thrive as it should under a policy which is neither one nor the other, and which is constantly being changed in principle."

In the "Progress of the War" report as of the same date, starts out with the battle of the Somme:

"Just when the Germans had issued statements that the Allies' push on the Somme had come to an end and had exhausted itself by beating against the German wall, the French and British made another advance, the most important since the drive was begun July 1."

The lengthy article, as are all the stories about the doings in Europe, is written from the viewpoint of the "neutral observer," since the United States was not yet actively involved. But the conflict tinged the news and reportings from all over the country.

Sometimes with humor.

Kansas City Star: The study of European geography this fall is largely a matter of opinion.

And in the comments "From other lands:" one states that "Henry Ford has not abandoned his plans for bringing about the end of the war. He has recently established at Berne, Switzerland, Copenhagen, Denmark, and The Hague, Holland, financial agencies for his peace movement."

With each issue, the temper of the reporting became hotter and hotter, and a year later, in the Oct. 13 issue, we had officially been declared and Uncle Sam was on the march.

At the top of the page, above the logo, it states: "When you finish reading this magazine, place a one-cent stamp on this notice, hand same to any postal employe, and it will be placed in the hands of our soldiers or sailors on the front."

It was a request from A. S. Burleson, postmaster-general.

The progress of the War report begins on a grim note: "Slow to anger are the American people. For a long time we would not believe the horrible things that were charged against the Germans, but every week now adds to the evidence by which Germany has convicted herself as an outlaw before the world.

"Col. Roosevelt, speaking at Johnstown, Pa., declared, 'Until the German career is cut out of the world body, this great war for peace of justice must go on.'

The importance of women to the nation's economy began to reach full bloom, during those war years, as witness the following article in that same issue:

"The capacity and efficiency of women in manufacturing establishments have been demonstrated beyond question in the munitions factories. Indeed, in some cases, they have shown themselves superior to men workers, a number of them after only a few weeks' training, earning considerably more in bonuses than men workers who have been engaged at similar work with the same tools."

It would take a couple of volumes to recount all this "You were there" material, and to do justice to its contents. But we thank Bus Young for sharing it. We only hope he can find it a proper home where it will be appreciated.

Chamber direction

everal things happened
r the past few weeks to icate that a reappraisal of Jensen Beach Chamber of mmerce objectives might be rder by Chamber directors.
t a meeting a month ago,
d Nettere, head of WMCF-
, suggested that the Chamlook at itself, decide what a proper role in the mmunity, and set new ndards of service to the mmunity.
was an excellent sugges-
n.

he Chamber directors have en their role of a quasi-gov-mental body seriously. With formal city government, nsen Beach residents have county commissioner to present them. The Chamber taken the responsibility to rise the commissioner and k information for the idents.

ut, where is the business of the Chamber?

An effort to begin a retail erchant's division failed ck of interest was cited.

At the recent meeting of the ard of directors, there was a scussion of whether or not e Jensen Beach Chamber of mmerce should promote nsen Beach as a shopping ea, with one director asking hether it might be more roper to promote Martin
ounty instead.

There is even some thought whether the Jensen Beach hamber of Commerce should xist or not. Some merchants ave presented the idea that ll businesses should belong to ist one Chamber, based in tuart.

With the discussion moving all directions, it might just e time, as Nettere said, to ake stock and look at what the hamber is and should be oing.

The Chamber of Commerce
s a resource center of local nformation. The resort and ishing guide is a popular booklet, producing 35,000 copes that reflect what Jensen Beach is, some history, and highlights of the community. It s a good book, comparable to hose produced by Chambers of Commerce many times
arger than Jensen Beach.

The Chamber-produced map of the area is excellent, and is a service that helps people locate streets and find directions from one place to another.

The Chamber building is an information center, where people can call for answers, and motorists can seek directions. The number of calls and visitors reach into the thousands in a year. The building also offers brochures on other areas, state attractions and sporting events.

The Chamber helps to coordinate activities in the community. It raises funds for the fireworks, provides workers for causeway celebrations, and coordinates reservations for the causeway park. The annual turtle watches are an excellent example of a tourist activity.

Add to that work it does for the tourist housing industry, with inquiry lists being mailed to local motels, cottages and mobile home parks, and information being sent to those from out of town who request it.

On just the above, the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce is doing an excellent job. Just doing the above makes it worth while.

The preoccupation of the Chamber with governmental affairs seems to have created a forum where politic-minded directors can debate county matters over which the Chamber has little control. That debate can range on and on into each meeting night, without resolution to the problems besetting Jensen Beach.

If there is to be a Jensen Beach, there should be a Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce. That Chamber should primarily be interested in Jensen Beach.

It should, of course, work closely with other Chambers, such as the Stuart and Ft. Pierce Chambers, so that the unity of the business communities is assured. But, primary responsibility for activities in the business community of Jensen Beach should be the Jensen Chamber's.

There are many members of the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce from outside the commercial area of the community. From Stuart and Ft. Pierce, those businesses belong because they want Jensen Beach business.

The Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce has a job to do in promoting the business of Jensen Beach. It should get in with that job as soon as the reevaluation of goals is complete. In doing that, it should not try to compete with the larger and more affluent Stuart or Ft. Pierce group. It cannot compete and shouldn't compete.

If the people realize just how big Jensen Beach is, and how much commercial activity there is here, they would realize that the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce has enough to say prayers over without worrying about other areas.

Jensen Beach is growing, and the Chamber should assist in that growth.

Priorities are needed, and the first priority should be business.

The last of wood floors

There is something about wood floors that turns me on. Rich, dark oak, in thin strips, offering richness and warmth to The Mirror offices.

We carpeted the main floor and the advertising office last week. The wood is gone. We are carpeting the editorial office soon. It will be the last wood floor to be covered.

It's a shame, but it had to be done.

Back when we started the conversion of the building to offices, I searched for wood-floor people to replace some of the strips that had been damaged by rot or termities. I had to go all the way to Palm Beach to find someone who had the tools and the materials.

The men came to work. They were old carpenters. They remarked how beautiful the floors were, however scratched up and dented. They loved their work.

One wrough- a few pieces of the tongue-in-groove oak with them, pointing out that they were the last, and had been taken from a job in Palm Beach where an old house had been razed to make room for a condominium.

The carpenters praised me for wanting to restore the wood floors, rather than trying to cover them.

They went to work, replacing the bad wood with good. Then they took the grinder and sanded down the floors to bright light color. Then they took a vacuum and cleaned the floor of the shavings and sawdust.

The dark oak stain brought out the beauty of the floors. On the lower level, and on the second floor, the color was warm and rich.

I just love wood floors.

I did make the sacrifice of letting them carpet the staircase and my office. The brown and orange carpet also was warm. And, that was a year ago.

This week they finally came in and carpeted the beautiful wood floors throughout.

We took it for a year. A pin dropping sounded like an atomic explosion. Persons talking in the main room could be heard up in my office and in the editorial room.

The old house was not built as an office building. Built in 1921, it was a showplace, where people walked softly. The construction was sound enough, but not soundproof.

When a person installing the air-conditioning tried to cut through the wall for an air return, it took four sawblades and three hours to make the hole. The white pine was like steel, and the four inches of stucco and wire on each side of the two-by-fours (and that was when a two-by-four was two inches by four inches) made each wall a fortress.

We replaced the ball and tube wiring with wiring in conduit in rewiring the house, but we didn't think about acoustics.

Bob Fryer is a very firm typist. When he sits at the manual typewriter and pounds away, the floor beneath reverberates with each stroke. Down below, in the darkroom, Rick hears the pounding echoing through from above.

Donnie Wilkie is a foot thumper. As he types, his foot goes up and down about ten strokes to each stroke of the typewriter. That causes shock waves through the ceiling.

I finally decided to carpet it all when the plaster ceiling fell down into the darkroom. Luckily, we had dropped the ceiling for uniform lighting, and the plaster hit the plastic panels and only broke two of them.

The concussion of typing was just too much for the ceiling. Acoustics won out.

Now it is a new ball game. Peg Meissner says that we are entering a dangerous period, in which the area is so quiet there will be people running into each other. Before, we could hear anyone walking. Their hoof-sounds would echo through the building.

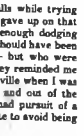
Out in the layout room, there is Spanish tile that is just beautiful. We have a ball rug stretched across the beautiful tile. The people complained that their legs and feet were so tired after a Tuesday night of making up the newspaper they needed a carpet to cushion the steps.

South Florida always reminded me of terrazzo. Everyone has a terrazzo floor. There is no little wood. In 1958, when we bought the present building, I swore that it would one day be our office of the newspaper plant. I also swore that I would keep the wood floors as a sign of both the warmth and luxury of wood.

Sorry about that. In this time of sound softness, a wood floor sounds like a teenage rock band.

I hope that I am able to keep one of the panels of carpet loose so that I can lift it up occasionally and look at my beautiful wood floor. I'm going to miss it.

Bob Fryer



Skating rink traumas

The last time I'd been to a roller skating rink was in my early teens in Jacksonville.

I remember the Jacksonville rink had a wooden floor, and the skates and floor were both well worn.

I can't remember for sure, but it seems there was music at the rink in Jacksonville. It wasn't disco though — that much I am sure of.

I used to go to the roller rink in Jacksonville with a group of kids from my church. The outings were great fun, even though they were heavily chaperoned by adults.

It was about the time I was discovering girls weren't so boring afterall, and I remember two — Anita Fowler and Cathy Tisdale — who were downright exciting.

They were also terrifying. Holding Anita or Cathy's hand while skating slowly around the rink was far more frightening than the games of tag us guys used to play at breakneck speed, all the while dodging the rink's "cops" who were there to keep order.

I learned to skate backwards with a moderate degree of talent while trying to show off for Anita and Cathy.

They weren't impressed.

Neither was my date a couple of weeks ago when we went to Super Skate in Port Salerno and found I'd lost a good measure of that skill.

Had it not been for a couple of freebie tickets, we probably wouldn't have gone. And, judging from the age of the skaters at the rink, it's not the sort of place folks my age normally go to.

I doubt if there was anyone, besides myself, my date and the rink officials who were over 21. At 32, I was probably double the age of most of the skaters there.

Unlike the rink in Jacksonville, where admission was granted on arrival, the rink in Salerno only opens its doors at intervals.

We arrived about half an hour before the "late skate" session was to begin, and already there was a large crowd of kids milling around the door.

As we waited in line, a girl about 12 years old came walking out of the rink with a washcloth held to her head. When she removed the cloth, packed with ice, I spotted a large bump below her eye. It was huge, and you could tell right away she'd have a beauty of a black eye by the next morning.

We considered leaving right then, but decided to keep waiting in line.

That was about as amusing as the skating itself. While in line we heard young teenage girls gossiping about young teenage boys. And vice versa.

One loud-talking, frumpily dressed blonde apparently wanted the crowd to know she didn't normally go to Super Skate. She and her date were several years older than the other kids in line, and she apparently felt she needed a tougher, more mature image than that of a regular skating patron.

And we saw another awkward attempt at "maturity" as a boy in an Opel GT came through the parking lot, scratching off and revving his engine.

When the doors finally opened, the large crowd around the door funnelled in. Just as my date and I approached the door, a girl no more than 16 came pushing her way through the crowd, puling a boy behind. She & her date stepped right ahead of us, explaining that she was afraid they wouldn't have her shoe size if she waited her turn at the back of the line.

I probably should have made a scene and explained that those she was cutting ahead of had earned their right to a correct shoe size by waiting in line. But I was already feeling too much like the old fogeys of the crowd to issue any fatherly-advice type lectures.

I held my peace, we shuffled on in, and I even got a pair of skates before they ran out of my size.

My date and I were both shaky at first, but eventually some of the skating skills we'd learned in childhood came back; at least enough to avoid being conspicuously awkward. And, though I don't like disco, there were times when we flowed well with the music.

After a few near falls while trying to skate backwards, I gave up on that pursuit. It was hard enough dodging the little twerps who should have been in bed an hour ago — but who were very much awake. They reminded me of the days in Jacksonville when I was the twerp darting in and out of the crowds — either in mad pursuit of a buddy to tag or in haste to avoid being tagged.

The young couples also reminded me of my Jacksonville days, when Cathy and Anita introduced an element of excitement and terror to the skating rink.

The kids at Super Skate seemed to be less innocent, and more "tough" than we were in Jacksonville, but I'm sure that's a non-objective opinion.

The night at Super Skate was an opportunity to invade the world of young teenagers, and the actual skating was enjoyable. But I'm sure glad I don't have to live through those traumatic teenage days again. After all, I'm getting old enough now to look forward to the next traumas of life — the middle-age crisis.

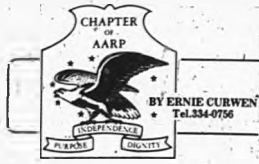
eniors talk about Russians



BY ERNIE CURWEN

week the seniors, more or less. So what?", to the $365 gold, ercent interest rate and the wild market, but those 3000 Russian vers") that held no interest last get a good chewing over. It went hing like this:

senior commented, I don't see ongress didn't know about the ussians before or are they just it as excuse to hold up on SALT other senior replies, how could now what is going on when they have done everything possible to make the CIA ineffective.

Then, that opened up a whole new bag of gripes with a very irrate senior saying, "It seems as though every darn thing Congress does, plays right into the hands of the Russians," and counting on his fingers, he goes on, "they have made the cia ineffective so we can't tell what goes on in IRAN, CUBA, NICARAGUA; they've let the president hold up on our best weapons, Cruise Missile, MX Missile System, B1 Bomber, Nuclear Carriers, Registration for Draft, it's about time they got on the ball".

That caused one crusty eighty year old to practically explode with, "Did you hear about that bunch trying to sneak themselves a $4500 raise, I think that's ridiculous; first they should try to earn what they are getting. If more seniors feel that way, they better take pen in hand and write at once, or they'll find the raise slipped through when they weren't looking".

Now, all that really doesn't have too much to do with Senior activities, but anything Congress can do to strengthen USA now, will sure give their grandchildren a better life to look forward to.

Here's some pleasant fun items:

All of us would like to know how long we are going to live, or would we? Well, in any case here's a way to find out, per "Dollar Sense" magazine, Fall 1979 issue. It's a quick 8 step calculation, as follows:

Start with the figure 72. If male subtract 3, if female add 4.

For living in urban area subtract 2, but if in small town add 2; if you've had a desk job, you lose 3 and if you worked at hard labor add 3; if you exercise vigorously five times a week for 1½hours you can add 2; and if you live with your spouse or friend, add 5, but if living alone, you will have to subtract 1 for every 10 years you lived alone.

If you sleep over 10 hrs. each night subtract 4, if you are agressive and easily angered, subtract 3, but if you are relaxed and easy going you can add 3; also if you are happy add 1 and if you are unhappy subtract 2; here is a novel one, if you had a speeding ticket last year, subtract 1.

Not many of us have to worry about this one, but if you earn over $50,000.00 per year you will have to subtract 2; If a college graduate add 1, if you have a professional degree add 2 more; if you are over 65, and still working add another 3. If a grandparent lived over 85, add 2; if either parents died of a heart attack or stroke before age 50, subtract 4; if parent, brother or sister under 50, has (or had) cancer, heart condition or diabetes since childhood, subtract 3.

If you smoke 2 packs a day subtract 8, one to two, subtract 6 and ½ to one, subtract 3; if you drink equivalent to a¼ bottle of liquor a day subtract 1; if 50 poun s overweight subtract 8, 30-50 pounds subtract 4, and 10 to 30 over, subtract 2. Men if you have an annual checkup add 2, and women if you see a gynecologist once a year also add 2. A final age adjustment, if you are now between 30 and 40, add 2, between 40-50, add 3, 50-70, add 4 and over 70, add 5.

There is a lot of interesting facts as you read it through, it will behoove us to keep away from those subtract 4, 6 and 8 items and follow those add 3, 4 and 5 items. It isn't difficult to figure out, give it a try. Could make an interesting game at some club meeting. Anyway, Ernie figured his out as follows: 72-3 equals 69, plus 2 equals 71, plus 5 equals 76, plus 1 equals 77, plus 1 equals 78, plus 3 equals 81, plus 5 equals 86. So, here's hoping.

Health and Fitness in Retirement from same magazine, had some information that hits us right where it helps. But, first these small dismal facts, folks over 65 or 10percent of the population account for more than 25 percent of the $140 billion USA yearly health bill, and Medicare as a rule only covers 38 percent of these costs. But, there is something we can do about it.

Doctors Breslow and Belloc at UCLA have determined that by following 7 basic rules you can add years to your lives; women can add seven and the men a great big eleven. These are the basic rules: 1-Eat 3 meals a day and avoid snacks. 2- Eat breakfast everyday. 3- Take moderate exercise at least 2 or 3 times a week 4- Get adequate sleep (7 or 8 hrs. each night). 5- Don't smoke. 6- Control your weight. 7- Drink moderately. This is all the same things that we have been told time and time again, maybe this time we will heed it. And, here is a chance for the men to nibble away at that big five expectancy differential the women have over them.

CHAPTER EVENTS

Recently, there have been a lot of inquiries about coverage of Homeowners insurance. Also, some folks have had to change auto insurance because of death of spouse and there have been some cases of health insurance coverage not being as expected. All these folks can get the correct answers, right from Colonial Penn consultants from 9 to 12 a.m. next Friday, Sept. 28, at the 1st National Bank, 2110 SE Ocean Blvd. But, if you can't get to the bank, call Al Camissa, Chapter Ins. While discussing the above Insurance Forum that was a result of our Senior Information Centers of a couple of years ago, many have wanted to know what happened to the centers, as they seemed to be very useful and successful. They were held with Rody Smith, Ada Baum and Betty Taylor on duty and Ernie C filling in as needed. Who wants to start it going again? Let us know.

Vandals dump wire in pool

Vandals must have their kind of play — over the weekend it was putting 5 rolls of wire fencing, weighing 400 pounds each in the pool. The poles were placed in the ground, ready for the wire fencing when the rains came Friday, causing delay till Monday. The original fence was another casualty of "David" Recovery was made by Jack McConnell and Jerry Belmore, who were the divers who secured the rolls. Mission completed successfully and on Monday it will be erected. Thanks to all who participated.

A few volunteers will paint the Recreation Hall starting Monday under the supervision of Jack McConnell and Jerry Belmore. The Park is slowly recovering, there was so much to do, we should all be very grateful to have our Park beautiful again.

Ann Schultz also wrote her thanks to everyone in the Park that is working so hard.

Harold and Jean Meissier wrote that "David" dropped quite a bit of rain in Conn. Also a 50 mile wind, that was plenty for them. They were very thankful to all the workers here in the Park that are making it possible for them to return in October to the beautiful place they left last May.

Earle Palmer has to go through another surgery, but feels sure he will in H.Out by the end of October.

Cecil & Beryle Roy have started to pack up there in Mich. and plan to be here by mid Oct.

Corrine Norris returned Tuesday from Boston. Enjoyed a nice visit with friends but, most of all, Sheilla, their daughter came from Detroit for a few days. Jim's vacation was this week and he spent it right here in H.Out. He couldn't think of any better place, he did miss the pool being shut down but will make up for it next week. "David" had also filled the pool with sand necessitating the close of the pool.

Kay & Bob Wylie left with their trailer to meet the piggyback tour thru Mexico, Oct 4th. Hope they send some interesting news.

Peg & Al Ray enjoyed a real Italian spaghetti dinner at the Prices, then Saturday night a delicious beef stew at the Norris'. How lucky can one get!

Lisbee & Artie arrived for a few days and worked real hard getting their shrubbery and yard in shape. Returned to Virginia for the rest of the football season. Will return to H.Out in Nov. I had a lovely visit with Lisbee while here.

Lena and Bob Black will be returning to H.Out early Oct. Lena is our Rec. Director.

Bertha Lamon wrote its getting cold so their thoughts are at H.Out and will be returning soon. Her tomatoes are getting fewer so there is no use staying up in N.Y.

Welcome back to-- N. Brinks, E.Frosts, J.Carsons, hope your new season will be more pleasant.

Anniversaries Congratulations, Lillian and Irving Ringer 9-27, Bertha and Roy Lanfon, Pauline and Russell Wells, Emilie and Frank Fanucci 9-28, Callie and Robert Trimble 9-29, Christina and Laurence Bjork 10-3, Phyllis and Donald Bodkin 10-4.

Happy Birthday Wishes--Elmer Ambrogne 9-27, Catherine May, Irene Faucett, Gee Leonard 9-30, Lorene Stankos 10-1, Bob Hendricks 10-2, Elaine Gavigan, Catherine Koepha, Earl Boyher 10-3, Kay Johnson, Pete Grauel, Minor Myers, Laurence Bjork, Dorothy Smith 10-4.

Bill Blair is on an extended tour of the western states with long-time friends. He wrote that it was red hot in the Dakotas and Wyoming, beautiful in Yellowstone and there was not a drop of water in the Yosemite Falls. When Bill wrote on September 12th he was visiting relatives of Dot's in San Jose, California. San Francisco and Los Angeles were other localities they visited in California. Las Vegas, Denver, St. Louis were next on their itinerary and their return to Delaware scheduled for October 1st.

Bill thinks it will take him about a month to close his home but he hopes to be in Holiday Out the 8th or 9th of November.

Park manager, Bob, has been a very busy person, and thanks to him, our park is looking better each day. We'd like to express our appreciation. Insurance adjusters have been all over the place and repairs and the rebuilding of wrecked porches and carports is starting.

Amy and Joe Freitag tried out their new Pontiac by taking a trip to North Georgia to the German celebration of Octoberfest. Will get the details for a later issue.

Betty Drinkard called and told of their cruise on the Mississippi Queen. They had some interference by Hurricane Frederic, but only a one day extension to avoid meeting his winds in New Orleans. Betty said, "Bingo players, eat your heart out". On the trip, Paul won one pot of $45.00, but she lucked out and won the cover — all for $520.00. Maybe with that kind of luck, we should not let her try to continue it when our bingo play begins free. They will be here around Oct. 15th.

Louise Sheppard came in somewhat earlier this year to check on her home, but she had very little damage.

Lucille Dunphy and her youngest son came down to check on her trailer, and do a few little jobs, and get her van. They were here about a week, but hope to be back this winter.

Hear that the Glazes were here for a short stay, but didn't see them.

Mabel and Thornton Cook arrived and found out that they had suffered extensive damage — their porch was completely demolished. Hope it will soon be replaced.

Have had very little response to our call for news for this column — no news means a very small column. We need reporters in each section of V.III.

Lou Prev is back home, after minor surgery and a few days in the hospital.

Yvonne and Rud Wiencke should be here by the time you read this. Welcome home!!!!!

Betty and Al Jones are back home after a week's stay at Al's brother's place in Melbourne. They were taking care of house and dogs, while Pete and wife were getting acquainted with a new grand-child in Tenn.

NUDE SUNBATHER—Yound Omar Farouk of Egypt found the beach in south St. Lucie County the perfect place to get an all-over tan on Sunday. The toddler paraded around the beach in his birthday suit and found a bit of comfort in the arms of his great uncle, Maged Matwally, before doing a bit of skinnydipping in the ocean. Tanning in the buff seems to be on the upswing along some of the less populated stretches of beach in Martin and St. Lucie counties. It's illegal, but we're sure most lawmen would find Omar more cute than criminal.

Charlene Waxler gets bank honor

CHARLENE WAXLER

Mrs. Charlene K. Waxler, Vice-President of Stuart National Bank, has been singled out for special honors by the Bank Administration Institute (BAI).

Both research problems undertaken by Mrs. Waxler during BAI's annual School for Bank Administration held at the University of Wisconsin were selected for honors. She was one of only 32 of the some 1,500 bankers throughout the nation attending the seminar whose work was given special recognition.

The annual seminars are a part of BAI's three-year programs of continuing education in bank auditing, controllership, bank operations, trust operations and community bank management.

A resident of Martin County since childhood, Mrs. Waxler attended Columbia Graduate School and began her banking career at Stuart National Bank 12 years ago. She has now completed two of the required three years in the Community Bank Management School. She plans to attend next year's seminar where she will complete the program.

BAI, the banking industry's research and educational organization, is located near Chicago. The association is administered by a professional staff in conjunction with volunteer bankers throughout the nation.

Welcome newcomers

Ocean Breeze

BY ERNIE CLOWEN
334-8756

We had a splendid spell o'mighty fine weather last Wednesday, or was it on Thursday, anyway these drenching down pours will assure us of an adequate supply of the best drinking water around. Our little jaunt around the Southeast last summer brought this to mind drastically, as day after day we drank iodine coffee and tea with even the ice cubes smelling to high heaven of chlorine. Often one of us would say, when holding our nose while gulping a beverage, "Oh, for some good ol' Jensen Beach water."

It was sure nice to be back, in spite of the "unusual" weather, as at every turn of the road, there was a joyous greeting, "Glad you're back, did "David" hurt you much, did you have a good summer?" That is what makes Ocean Breeze Park such a nice place to come back to.

While on this subject, let's have a great big "Welcome" newcomers. We hope you will like us and have lots of fun here. But, just a word of caution; some of you may be living in a Mobile Park for the first time and don't realize that "Go Slow" while driving around is very essential for some of us old timers. We don't hear or see as well as we did fifty years ago and above all we can't so quickly jump out of the way of fast moving vehicles. So, newcomers and old timers too, drive slowly through the park.

Again there were questions about the Blood Pressure Clinic at Langford Field, and again some folks missed it. Here is what was bothering them. Some had heard that the regular monthly Martin County Health Dept. Clinic for Blood Pressure checks and Nutrition Counselling had been suspended during the summer, others had heard that it had been superseded by Blood Pressure day & Congregate meals. That is not the case at all as the 30 or so who did attend last Friday can testify; so let it be stated again, there will be a Blood Pressure Clinic on the third Friday of each month 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at Langford Field, and the next will be Friday, Oct. 19.

The OBP Security Patrol is very effective from all reports, even the late roaming skunks are holding their fire. In other words, intruders have learned OBP is well protected. However, patrol chief says that he could use a few more patrol persons and he wants to thank the regulars, saying, "They are doing a great job, giving up many hours of good sleeping time for the protection of OBPers." So, all OBPers add their thanks for such a good job being done so well.

PARK EVENTS

BINGO will be a bit delayed this year because of "David." However, Ralph Kamer, reports that all these piles of debris were cleaned up by Monday, two weeks to the day, from when the hurricane struck. Ralph also wants to report that if the maintenance crew hadn't dug-in with a lot of vim and vigor, Bingo would have been further delayed, as the Clubhouse still has to be dressed-up for the coming season. All the Bingo players (most of OBPers) thank the maintenance men for all that extra effort.

SHUFFLE courts were a wet and dreary sight Saturday morning without even the regular foursome in sight. However, as courts get dried off at night there are many returnees "at it" sharpening up for the 79/80 season. Also, it was noted, there is a sheet for folks to sign up for Bean-Bag games. It didn't take hold here last Spring, but went great guns in Hendersonville last summer.

CAMERA CLUB. President Nina Zegelhofer reminds OBPers that the first of November isn't far away and would like to have all those who have slides to show, get in touch with her. Those new to "showing" are very welcome and if they don't have enough for 45 min. exhibit, they can go part time with others. Nina says something can be worked out for everybody and as a final thought, she says, "All you folks who have not yet left the north lands, don't forget to bring your slides, remember last year, some did forget."

HOSPITAL

Peggy Drier, 7 Almond went into hospital last week for tests, and was back home on Sunday.

Joe Wisser, Banyan Dr., is back home from St. Mary's of West Palm and was out strolling with his wife Ida the other day.

Minnie Brenner of Fifth Ave. has gone into the hospital at Muncie, Ind. for treatment. Mary Adrean will keep us informed.

CARD WINNERS

Pinochle, Sept. 17: Bobby Beauclerk; Mildred Epler; Gladyse Baier.

Pinochle, Sept. 20: Mildred Epler; Bobby Beauclerk; C. Wiedenman.

Pinochle, Sept. 22: Irene Burgess; Nina Ziegelhofer; Trudie Chihasz; Ed Skeleski.

RAMBLING AROUND

Raymond and Lillian Ried of 6 Areca sent word to Clyde Redinger that on Sept. 25, they celebrated their 77th wedding anniversary. Raymond is 97 and Lillian 96. There were over 100 to help them celebrate their 75th two years ago. Send cards to Apt. 2007, Cedar Towers, Cedar Rapids, Iowa 52401.

Eva Eckstrom of Vista Dr. had a slight delay in celebrating her 90th Birthday, as hurricane David prevented her two nieces of Canada from coming down on anniversary date. But, they did get here last week and Eva enjoyed a delayed party, after all.

Myrt Huntington is back to find "David" left a tree leaning on her cabana. Tree is off, but there is still a bucket brigade when it rains. Myrt is "chipper" again after quite a siege of illness. Remember, last June Myrt took off with her sister Vivian Blade and Vivian's daughter, Ruth MacLellan for Bridgeport, Conn. where they spent the summer, with some side trips to visit son in Willimantic.

Now that they are back home, Myrt wants to get back to her square dancing (she is only 93, you know) and Vivian wants to get back with the Congregate meal group, which is just like your own family, with its friendly cards, signed by all and sent to those who are ill by that very thoughtful site director, Dorris Walker. When asked about going home to Maine next year, Myrt said she rather go to Albuquerque to visit another niece and Vivian said how about Spain to his other daughter. So, who knows where they will be off to next year.

Orv and Esme Smalley, 1D West End Dr. are not too well known, even though they have been in park since 1976, as Esra hasn't retired yet (1½ years to go), so they can only get down here a few weeks at a time. But, Orv does take advantage of those few days, by surf fishing for Blues and getting them too. Then, when back home in Toledo, where he has a 24 and a 33 foot boat, he fishes lake Erie at every chance, as he did retire three years ago.

Walter and Elsa Lindell, 4 Cirlce Drive are back after spending most of the summer at Turners Fall, Mass., that is right on the Mohawk Trail in the foothills of the Berkshires. They made all sorts of side trips to New Hampshire, Connecticut and Cape Cod, some with one of their two sons. They scooted down early from The Cape to see if "David" had done much damage and found very little. They had no gas problems at all, except growling about the cost.

Lee and Julia Gahler, corner 7th and Broad are back after spending four months at Rehoboth Beach, Del., where they have an apartment just a half-mile from the ocean. They said that not many folks in OBP come from Delaware and just then a car with Del plates went by, which Julia proudly says is the first State of the Union. If there are any other folks from Del. let us know.

Nancy Roulier, 19 Almond St. had a Birthday in August (39th probably) and was delighted to receive greetings from President Carter. When asked how she celebrated it, she said, eating out with Mary Adrean. While getting these notes, Mary remarked that she had just heard from Nettie Christie, who is fine and will be back about Oct. 1st. Also, a card from Georgina McDonagh of Fifth Ave. who has been visiting in Canada, but plans to be back here in the first part of October.

Sorry to have to start alibing so soon, but this week with so many returnees, there were more items than space (those omitted will be used later). Thanks for your patience and keep the items a-coming.

LETTERS FROM OBPers

determine which 10 applicants for each academy are the most likely to make a success of an academy education.

And, it's not just a question of grades. The committee looks at each applicant's extracurricular activities, athletic ability, work experience and anything else which goes into making a high school senior the man or woman he or she has become.

After the interviews, the screening committee narrows the field to the best 10 applicants for each vacancy. All 10 names are then sent to the academies, where the final decision is made.

This may sound like a somewhat complicated and roundabout method of choosing who gets to go to the military academies. But it is designed to insure that the appointments go to the best qualified.

After all, we aren't just talking about an excellent education at no cost to the student, we are talking about the future leadership of our armed forces.

And this means only the top applicants should be rewarded.

Although each Member of Congress is normally allowed only one appointment to each academy each year, don't let those odds discourage you.

Each year, after the initial selections are made, the academies go over the list of those who narrowly missed selection and name several to be "qualified alternates." And these applicants win appointments left vacant in those areas where the Congressman, Senator or other official did not make full use of his vacancies.

Since the 10th District has traditionally turned out such fine young men and women, one or two more are selected for such appointments every year.

So, if you're willing to give your country at least five years of active service in return for a superior education, give serious consideration to competing for an academy appointment.

But, remember, you have less than three months to get your file in order. So, let me know as soon as possible.

IRP adds specialist to staff

Carla Nehls has been appointed to the newly created position of conference services manager at Indian River Plantation, it was announced by Brian Webb, director of group sales for the Hutchinson Island resort.

CARLA NEHLS

Ms. Nehls, a native of Maryland who moved to Stuart in 1970, joins the Indian River Plantation staff after serving for two years as conference coordinator at Sandpiper Bay in Port St. Lucie. Prior to that she was employed at the Outrigger in Jensen Beach.

In her new post Ms. Nehls will be responsible for all arrangements required by companies, associations and other organizations scheduling group business meetings and social functions at Indian River Plantation's conference facilities, according to Webb.

The steady growth of group business and social functions in our conference rooms combined with reservations for additional activity this fall and winter made it necessary to create this new position and fill it with someone of Carla Nehls' professional stature," explained Webb.

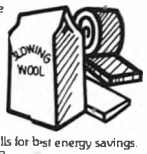
EMPHASIS

PLAYING "CATCHUP"
When someone is "out of step" with his surroundings, a nice way of pointing this out is to remark, "someone never gets the word." Or "didn't you do your homework?"

There's a self-appointed group in our state which has called for "lifeline" rates for all residential customers. They simply "never got he word." FPL already has a form of "lifeline" rates. Our "inverted rate" structure fixes the price of the first 750 kwh below the price of all kwhs beyond 750. Customers using more electricity pay higher rates, thus subsidizing those who use 750 kwh or less.

A WATT-WISE™ QUESTION
We've been asked: "What does the 'R-value' on insulation mean?"

It indicates how well a material resists heat flow. The higher the R-value, the greate the resistance. R-values vary with different types of materials. So how well insulation performs is more accurately measured by its R-value than by how many inches thick it is.



Incidentally, FPL recommends R-19 insulation in the attic and R-5 insulation in walls for best energy savings.

Clarice Feldman, General Counsel— Americans For Energy Independence, believes that the American electorate must get involved if we are to restore balance in our national policies.

balance between unlimitel exploitation of our resources and that which unduly inhibits our social and economic progress.

balance is possible, only if he climate of hospiality to obstructionism changes. Consumers hit by dwindling energy supplies with ever-higher price tags must recognize that a large part of the problem lies with those to whom we have given our proxy. We must now begin to reclaim our share of the public interest."

REGULATIONS COST US A BUNDLE
The federal Office of Management and Budget estimates that government regulations cost each man, woman and child in America about $600 a year.

The combined budget for federal regulatory agencies in fiscal 1979 amounted to $4.8 billion. All these regulations add about $666 to the price of the average new car, more than 8 cents a pound to ground beef and nearly $11 to a day's stay in a hospital.

Cancer dinner-dance at Rick Carroll home

A gala dinner dance at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rick Carroll is planned as a fund raising event for the American Cancer Society on Saturday, November 10.

For four consecutive years Martin Cosmiano have sponsored a Cancer Society fund-raiser, and the dinner-dance promises to be a major social event. It is to be the culmination of months of campaigning for the cancer cause, and this year's co-chairmen for the event are Mrs. Terence P. McCarthy and Mrs. John Fenniman. The Carroll home is located at 78 N. Sewall's Point Road. A $125 donation is requested.

Culinary cuisine by chef Erik of La Pavillon and moonlight dancing to the music of Rose O'Grady's Band will be featured.

Joan DeSantis, Angie Werle, Joy Allison, Susie Fox and Doris Sheridan recently met to plan final details for the dinner-dance, and urged all area residents to work and give to aid cancer research.

Ticket reservations for the dinner dance can be made by calling Nancy Lowry at 287-5897.

Mirror picnic defies prediction of rain

The Annual Mirror Picnic, held traditionally at the Outrigger Marina's "Orgy Island", spectacularly defied the weatherman's prediction of a 70 percent chance of rain on Saturday, and left Mirror picnicers to enjoy the warm Florida day without a drop of precipitation.

"It never rains on my picnics," assured Mirror publisher Dick Campbell.

Half debating whether or not to postpone the annual outing, staffers, under the direction of city editor-social director Bob Fryer, decided to call it on, rain or shine, and proceeded to order the hundreds of pounds of chicken, potato salad and cole slaw deemed necessary for such an event.

While Campbell brought his boat, the Salli, around to the picnic site, Fryer industriously prepared the course for his frisbee tournament.

The 23 par course included a dog-leg shot around tangles of trees with the idea being to hit a well-hidden dumpster. Another of the social director's great ideas was a long distance shot running parellel to the Marina. Needless to say, many of the contestants took a penalty when their frisbees neglected to follow the parallel path and landed in the Marina.

Winner of this event was social director Bob Fryer, who, it is worthy of mention, also doubled as score-keeper. Runners-up included first-time frisbee throwers, Dick Campbell and Mirror Account Executive, Mary Meissner, who were tied for second.

The muddied and beleagured staff members then broke for lunch, which consisted of a Spanish Paella (saffron rice, chicken, shrimp and clams), artfully prepared by Mike Naspinski.

MORE ON THE TAX-FREE EXCHANGE

QUESTION: I have been thinking about exchanging a piece of land I own for a small apartment building. Someone told me last week, however, that I could not do this because the land and the apartment building are not "like kind property." My question is this: In order to save taxes by using a tax-deferred exchange, must I exchange my land for other land, or does "like kind property" mean something else?

ANSWER.. The tax-deferred exchange is important to you and others like you since it offers an opportunity to change from one investment position to another without incurring any current tax liability.

Our tax laws state, in effect, that property held for investment, for the production of income, or for use in trade or business may be exchanged for "like kind property" of equal or greater value. If you execute the exchange properly you will not be required to report any gain or loss.

The question of like kind property is often confusing to investors. Many investors believe that "like kind" means the type of property. However, "like kind" refers to the reason for which property is owned, not its physical nature.

The law allows you to exchange any property held for investment, for the production of income, or for use in trade or business, for any other property held for these reasons. This means that you may exchange your land for an apartment building, for a shopping center or office building, for for a property not leased to a single tenant. Similarly, the owner of a warehouse, for example, may exchange his property for land, for an apartment building, or for another warehouse.

The important message is that the tax-deferred exchange, as provided for in Article 1031 of the Tax Code, provides us with great flexibility in arranging our real estate investment holdings so that we are able to change from one property to another one more suited to our current investment needs without incurring any current tax liability.

Fishing improving, especially in surf

BY DONNIE WILKIE

It seems as if the area is totally recovered from the effects of Hurricane David, at least on the fishing scene, where the fish have begun to move, especially in the often-fished surf at or near the Jensen Beach.

Of the outstanding catches reported last week, nine were achieved in the surf, and most area fishing experts confirmed the trend with their statements throughout the week.

The list of surf catches last week goes on and on, but here are a few names:

Tom Hargrave picked up two blues, two whiting and four pompano, using cut shrimp; Cliff Morey matched six blues, using crocodile spoon; Bob and Evelyn Chant caught 20 whiting and two pompano, using cut shrimp.

Claude Kieba grabbed 12 whiting, using cut shrimp; Eugene Roberts nailed down five blues and two snook with a 77m mirrolure; Jeff Ebert hauled in three blues with ribbon-fish; Joe Insieri landed 15 blues, using ribbon-fish; and Elgha Thomas brought up 28 blues, using ribbon fish.

Meanwhile, trout showed up in the river, but the hottest items there are channel bass and blues.

Ed Wagner boated three snook, two channel bass and a trout, fishing in the Indian River. He was using a gold Tooyspoon (The Mirror, September 12).

Bill Ditzel lined three trout in the river, using live shrimp.

Steve Steele bragged of five trout after fishing on the Jensen bridge with live shrimp; John Snowden grounded eight mangrove snapper, using live shrimp in the Indian River; Miles Jenkins caught three blues (up to seven pounds) and a barracuda (19½ pounds) at the Crossroads, near the St. Lucie Inlet, using frozen finger mullet.

Finally, Ron Ellis and Scott Gallivan zapped six snook (up to 15 pounds), fishing on the jensen bridge. They were using live shrimp.

Weather-wise, last week was alternately wet and dry. It seemed that just when the rains, which have bothered our area for three to four weeks now, would leave us, there they would be again, back for another visit.

Well, no matter, the weather goes on, and here's a look at this week's highs and lows, as well as the daily rainfall and the tides for the coming week at the St. Lucie and Fort Pierce Inlets:

A GROUPER weighing in at two pounds was large enough to earn Scott Dotson, 12, Stuart, a major prize in the Walton League's children's fishing tournament last Saturday. Prizes included rods and reels and gift certificates valued at up to $25.

TOADFISH—George Mayer, 8, Palm City, displays a tiny toadfish he caught during the children's fishing tournament at the Jensen Beach Causeway last Saturday. Though some of the fish caught, like this one, weren't edible, the kids still seemed to enjoy catching them.

PAT MURRAY won this rod and reel for a grouper he caught in the Walton League fishing tournament at the Jensen Beach Causeway.

TOO SHY TO FISH—Gregory Johnston, a three-year-old Jensen Beach resident, finds comfort in the lap of his grandmother, Mrs. Lucille Johnston, during the kids fishing tournament. Gregory seemed to enjoy the tourney, but definitely didn't like a camera being aimed at him.

Izaak Walton group seeks protection for South Fork

The Martin County Chapter of the Izaak Walton League recently won county commission endorsement of a request by the chapter for federal designation of the south fork of the St. Lucie River as a "wild and scenic river."

Hugh Furman of the chapter says it may take five years to do it, but he is hopeful the group can get "wild and scenic" designation and protection for the south fork.

Though the fork is only several miles long, Furman says it is undeveloped and therefore may qualify for federal designation. If so, he says the land along the river would be purchased and most likely would become a park area, served by a park ranger. The designation would serve to preserve the river for future generations.

The chapter mailed in an application to the Atlanta office of the U.S. Department of Interior with a postmark of Aug. 16, the final deadline for wild and scenic river applications. But the application was apparently lost in the mail and a new one is being sent in. Furman says he is confident the Department will honor the application as valid, and he said he expects U.S. Rep. L.A. "Skip" Bafalis to support the application.

The Martin County Conservation Alliance is also working on support of the application, and Fujrman said other groups will likely get involved in the future.

He said the chapter originally wanted to include the north fork in the application, but learned it had man-made changes to it and also said the north fork has some development along it. Furthermore, he said the St. Lucie County Commission opposed the idea.

Though the number of rivers to be accepted by the federal government as wild and scenic rivers is expected to be small, Furman said he is hopeful the south fork will make the list.

Zoning map, north county plan at Chamber

If you've been wondering what the zoning is for a particular tract of land in the Jensen Beach area, or are interested in what's proposed for the North County land use plan, you can see the map and plan at the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce office.

Copies of both were recently obtained and are available for viewing during business hours at the chamber office on Commercial Street in downtown Jensen Beach. The Chamber also offers free notary service.

ACTION was hot for some anglers, while others found it better just to recline on the seawall for a snooze. The kids fishing tournament attracted about 130 entrants and organizers say more would have come if the weather had been clearer.

SLOWLY GETTING THERE—County equipment is currently concentrating its work of widening the Commercial Street intersection, on the west side of Savanna Road. County Commission Chairman Frank Wacha had expected the whole project to be winding up by this time, but they still have three more legs to go after this one's completed. thought he was just a drunk, but I walked over for a closer look. I lood around his ear and mouth," n said, adding that he also saw a across the man's back, and that watching to see if the man was ing, he ran for a phone. His call 911 emergency center came in 2 a.m. and within minutes ls deputies and Florida High- Patrol troopers were on the When it was determined the was a hit-and-run accident, Trooper Steele Ritter assumed charge of the investigation.

According to a FHP spokesman, a fleck of paint found at the scene has been identified as matching a damaged car found parked beside a house on Evergreen Street in Golden Gate. The spokesman said a positive identification has been made to link the paint fleck with the car, but he said officers still "haven't figured out yet who was driving it."

Fingerprints of the victim have been taken and have gone to the FBI and Florida Department of Law Enforcement, but as yet, he has not been identified. One lawman said no identification papers were on the man, and that he was apparently a transient. Larch noted that the man was not wearing shoes and had large holes in his socks.

MICHELLE GARNER, a nine-year-old Port St. Lucie resident picks out a gift certificate she won at the fishing tourney on Saturday. Local merchants provided the certificates, and Michelle is one of the lucky youngsters who didn't win a prize for catching a fish, but won one just for participating in the event.

Skies clear in time for kids fishing tournament

BY BOB FRYER

Although the threat of rain was blamed for keeping some kids away, the smiles on the faces of those who did turn out for the Seventh Annual Izaak Walton League Children's Fishing Tournament were proof of a successful event.

The Martin County Chapter of the Walton League sponsored the tourney at the Jensen Beach Causeway, and it had been predicted that as many as 200 kids would compete for prizes. But a heavy rain fell early Saturday, and the sky was still ominously gray as 9 a.m. approached.

League spokesman Don Dietz said tourney organizers debated whether or not to call off the event, and finally decided to go ahead with it.

They didn't regret that decision, the sky continued to clear throughout the tourney and it got downright sunny and hot for a while.

The 130 kids who participated in the tourney got into some pretty hot competition too. Several young anglers brought in catches their parents would be hard pressed to match, with Joseph Ciechanowski of Stuart walking away with top honors for landing a total of 15 fish during the three-hour tourney.

Ciechanowski said he fished on the catwalk under the drawbridge using clams and shrimp for bait. He landed an assortment of red and mangrove snapper, sailor's choice, and send perch. Though only nine years old, he said it was his third Walton League tourney and that he'd won a prize in one of the earlier events.

Robert Irons, 14, of Jensen Beach, took honors for the largest redfish, while Charles Pine, 13, Jensen Beach, landed the largest sheepehead. In fact, he caught 11 of them.

Jeff Covell, 8, Indiantown, caught an eel to take the most unusual catch award, while Seth Griffin, a 10-year-old who just moved here from Tampa, won the top prize in the jack crevalle division with a three pounder.

Two-year-old Erik Yates won the youngest angler prize, while Chad Baker, 12, and Robie West, 13, both of Jensen Beach, tied in the drum category with seven pound, four ounce catches.

Scott Dotson, 12, Stuart, and Pat Murray, 8, each won prizes in the grouper category, while Mark Merrilees, 12, Port St. Lucie, won the snapper competition.

No entries were recorded in the snook, ladyfish, ribbonfish trout and weakfish categories.

Those winning major draw prizes include: Richard Wrenn, Ed Gethersall, Steve Zorr, George Mayer, Jason Cissna, Bill Young, David Snyder, Kelly Sherman, Denise Garner, Paul Phoenix, Mark Meleika, Kevin Love, Wesley Diller, Rusty Cowell, Brent Teal and Tim Lynch.

PORT ST. LUCIE was represented in the Izaak Walton League kids fishing tourney last Saturday by a number of competitors, including these above. Mark Merrilees, 12, of PSL, holds a rod and reel while his dad, John, and three year old sister, Trisha, look on.

BIG WINNER—Nine-year-old Joseph Ciechanowski of Stuart was the big winner of the kids fishing tournament Saturday when he walked off with a rod and reel for catching the most fish. He landed 15 fish in the three-hour event.

A DRUM weighing in at seven and a quarter pounds was landed by Chad Baker, 12, Jensen Beach, during the kids fishing tournament at the Jensen Beach Causeway last Saturday. The fish was large enough to qualify Chad for a nice prize.

BRIAN SCHULTZ, a five-year-old angler from Port St. Lucie, displays a croaker he caught in the Izaak Walton League's fishing tournament last Saturday. Shown behind Brian is Jeff Covell, 8, of Indiantown, who also caught a croaker.

PEGGY MIHALY, a seven-year-old Jensen Beach resident, shows off her catch in the fishing tournament. Though the crab didn't put up much of a fight, it was enough of a scary creature to give a fright to some of the young anglers.

Powerful Tiger netters rip Boca Raton

HOT SERVE—Jessica Nye found a hot hand Monday night during Martin County's volleyball match with Boca Raton at the Tiger Den in Stuart. The Lady Tiger starter served on eight winning points for her team, including an ace in the second game, as Martin County zapped Boca, 15-5, 15-0. Head Coach Sherrie Robins expressed her pleasure with the Tigers' brilliant performance.

BY DONNIE WILKIE

Susan Werner served four aces and ran off the last seven points in a row in the final game Monday night, as the Martin County Tiger volleyball team annihilated Boca Raton, 15-5, 15-0 to preserve their undefeated Suncoast Conference Eastern Division record.

With the demolition of the Bobcats, the Lady Tigers improved their division mark to 4-0, as did Fort Pierce Central Monday night. The Cobras clubbed Twin Lakes, 15-4, 15-7, and stand at 4-2 overall.

The Tigers, coached by Sherrie Robins, are 5-1, losing only to AA state champion John Carroll, a squad they also defeated.

"We really played well. I didn't expect this," said Robins. "The girls played much better tonight than they have been in practice."

"Our practices lately have not been that good. That's why I was apprehensive. They didn't seem to have the cohesiveness and enthusiasm, but tonight they all worked together. No one made any mistakes."

The match Monday night could almost have been compared to recent Martin County-Boca Raton basketball games. The Tigers knew what they had to do, and they wasted no time in accomplishing it.

After Boca jumped to a 4-2 lead in the first game, the Lady Tigers strung three points together, taking a 5-4 advantage. They never again trailed.

"We forced them (Boca) to play a defensive game," noted Robins. "I really expected them to spike the ball, but we seemed to force them out of that strategy.

"I really expected this match to go three games."

The tigers and Cobras now appear headed for a showdown, as the teams are scheduled to meet on October.

The Tigers and Cobras will square off in a showdown for the Eastern Division lead Monday night in Fort Pierce, and no one seems the least bit sure who will win.

"I don't have any idea what Central will do against us," said Robins. "It will be a psychological match as well as a physical one, because my girls want to win it so bad. Last year they just blew us away. It was no contest."

Ah, but last year the Lady Tigers were 4-11, and seemed headed for a similar verdict this year, at least in the minds of most prep volleyball observers. The Tigers showed no strength whatsoever in a pre-season jamboree, but in their first game, turned the state volleyball scene on its ear with an amazing, straight-games conquest of John Carroll rematch, they have been unbeatable.

"We still have some things to work on," added Robins. "We're trying to set up a clinic later this week. Our spikers need some work practice on putting the ball in the center of the court a little more. They often hit at the corners, and the shots don't always land in."

But Robins still claims that all along she thought the Tigers would win, and win big.

"Yes, I did. I really did."

Despite their sparkling conference record, the Lady Tigers will be facing a new ballgame when they enter the post-season playoffs. The new district brackets place them to the north, where they and Central will have to fact Eau Gallie, Merritt Island, Vero Beach and Satellite.

"I've talked to several officials, and they seem to believe that the teams we're playing now (District 11-AAAA) I hope so," Robins claimed.

Martin County faces Twin Lakes tonight (Wednesday) before travelling to Fort Pierce Monday to meet Central.

New Tri-County Tennis League ready to start

Sporting a new name, three new divisions of play and an expanded roster of member clubs, the Tri-County Tennis League opens its six-month 1979-80 season the first week in October.

Opening day for the league, which takes its name from the fact it now has member clubs in Martin, St. Lucie and Indian River counties, is Oct. 2 when all eight teams in the Ladies' Division II doubles section swing into action. They will be followed Oct. 4 by Ladies Division I doubles team matches and, on Oct. 13, by the Men's Doubles players. The three new divisions in the league, Mixed Doubles, Boys' Junior Singles and Girls' Junior Singles, will open their seasons Oct. 14, 13 and 14, respectively.

The new league, which replaces last year's Treasure Coast Tennis League, is sponsored by the newly formed Tri-County Tennis Club Association and consists of teams from Indian River Plantation Tennis Club, the North River Shores Tennis Club, Crane Creek Racquet Club and Mariner Sands Tennis Club in Stuart, Sandalwood Tennis Club in Fort Pierce and the John's Island Tennis Club, West Side Racquet Club and Twin Oaks Tennis Club, all in Vero Beach.

Officers of the association, as well as the league, are: Allen Quay of Sandalwood, president, Heiko Vogel of North River Shores, vice president, Tom Falkenburg of Indian River Plantation, secretary and Roger Schwartz of Twin Oaks, treasurer.

In addition to sponsoring league play in the six divisions, the new tennis association will form a Tri-County Tennis Patrons Association, according to Falkenburg. "This is something Allen Quay and I have wanted for a long time," said the Plantation pro, "because it is the only feasible way to raise funds to stage tournaments, clinics and other events that will encourage more youngsters to play tennis. The two divisions for junior players is a good start, but the real key to sustained programs for them is a tennis patrons association."

Falkenburg said schedules for all six divisions of Tri County League play will continue through next April, with both the Ladies' Division I and II teams playing twice monthly on Thursdays and Tuesdays, respectively. Men's Doubles and Boys' Junior Singles scheduled monthly on Saturdays and Mixed Doubles and Girls' Junior Singles monthly on Sundays. Full schedules are available at any of the member clubs, Falkenburg said.

U.S. Tennis Association (USTA) rules will govern all league play, Falkenburg added, and special regulations have been drawn up to cover local aspects of competition.

"All clubs will be required to have 16-player rosters for teams in the doubles divisions and eight for singles," Falkenburg explained. "The Clubs are signing up and selecting their players now and players interested in competing should contact their club pros now. We're looking forward to holly contested and well managed competition in all six divisions this year."

azorbacks regroup after 6-0 Palm City disappointment

BY DONNIE WILKIE

thing was certain after last Martin County Junior Football opening game in Palm City for Jensen Beach Razorbacks sure didn't look as good as we on the jamboree," said a pointed Herb Seal, the Head of the Upper Division squad.

was quite obvious as Saturday upset at Palm City Field pped. The Dolphins, embarrass- 6-0 loss in the county jamboree eeks earlier (although the score ot accurately show it), played red football throughout the , recovering from early-game to effectively shut down the eedily powerful Razorbacks.

Seal had a point. "One game n't mean that much," he ained. "We'll just have to sit down week and regroup and come out g against Port Salerno next kickoff and obviously contributed to the early rash of miscues.

The first half continued at its slow pace, with the exception of one particularly entertaining play, when Gerald Perla connected on a 27-yard pass play to Todd Anderson at the Jensen Beach 21-yard line. But the drive was soon turned back by a stingy Razorback defensive unit.

After the halftime intermission, the Dolphins woke up the crowd with a lightning-quick strike on the first play from scrimage in the third period, as Anderson pitched a 45-yard touchdown pass to Brian Bubba. It proved to be the game's only score, although both teams moved the pigskin much better offensively in the second half.

As the fourth period unfolded, it became obvious that the potent Jensen Beach offense was beginning to roll. A Razorback drive was halted at the Palm City eight-yard line with four minutes remaining in the game, but the defense braced itself and stopped Palm City, regaining possession at the Dolphin 28 with about two minutes left.

With running backs Dwayne Straushaugh (overweight) and Chris Fitzpatrick (injured) lost to Seal's Razorbacks at this point, the coach's only option was to run his other halfback, Richard Cady, on end sweeps almost every play.

It seemed to work, as Cady picked up six yards to the 20 on the first play, but an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty against the Jensenites forced the ball back to the 35.

Still, Cady gained ten yards on the next two plays, and when pass interference against the Dolphins placed the ball at the ten-yard line, it seemed the game could be saved. But after Cady gained three yards on another sweep, the Razorbacks hurt themselves again, losing the ball after a busted play and a fumble, which Kenny Strauss recovered for the Dolphins at the Palm City 13.

"There were negative things about the game, but there were some positive ones, too," pointed out Seal. "We moved inside their 20-yard line five times, and even though we couldn't score, our guys never quit."

"We're not going to hang it up just because we lost one game. There are six games left to play, and we'll get them again (the Dolphins and Razorbacks meet in Jensen Beach on October 20)."

But it could well be the Razorbacks-Panthers game in Port Salerno this Saturday that either sinks or saves Seal's squad. Game time is 8 pm, or immediately following the Lower Division game.

Same play zaps Barracudas, 6-0

Frank Fitzpatrick was pleased with the performance turned in by his Jensen Beach Barracudas Saturday night in Palm City, but heck, it was the SAME PLAY that whipped his team this time as the Dolphins zapped the localers, 6-0.

"It was exactly the same play," moaned Fitzpatrick after the contest, which served as the opening game of the regular season for both clubs.

"Exactly the same play," was a reverse on which Ricky Lamoree springed 22 yards for the game's only touchdown, in what in all other ways should have been a tie game.

It was Lamoree who scored the only touchdown in the pre-season jamboree against the Barracudas, beating the localers, 6-0 on that occasion. His reverse that night was run for five yards.

"We spent an entire night of practice trying to defense that play," said Fitzpatrick. "Other than that one play, we did a pretty good job."

"But that's not how they measure football games."

Lamoree's run came early in the first quarter, after the Dolphins recovered the football on Jensen Beach's 15-yard line, taking advantage of a mixup between center and punter as the Barracudas attempted to kick the ball out of danger.

"It was basically that one play," said the Jensen Beach coach. "They (Palm City) just took advantage of it."

Jensen Beach failed to mount any serious scoring drives, although they came within one miracle of tying or winning the game on the last play of the evening, when quarterback, William Massey nearly found receiver Billy Pecci on what could have been a 34-yard touchdown pass, but the connection was not made.

"I think we made some mistakes, especially early in the game," reflected Fitzpatrick. "We turned the ball over a couple of times. But in the second half, we began to move much better offensively, and we checked them pretty well on defense. It was just that one play."

Nevertheless, the Dolphins stand 1-0 in the American Conference standings, while Jensen Beach is 0-1.

"We just basically have to regroup," added the coach. "We didn't have anybody who quit. I didn't think they had anything to be embarrassed about. We just have to work on improving our technique."

"As far as changing our whole defense — no, we won't do anything like that. We'll have a few new wrinkles for the Port Salerno game, but nothing drastic."

Despite the Barracudas' early deficit in the standings, Fitzpatrick is not about to concede anything.

"I wouldn't count Jensen Beach out," he added. "We definitely have a long way to go, but we have the capabilities. I really believe we have a good football team."

"We've got some good athletes out there—we just need to get everyone moving at full steam and then . . . then we might have something."

1	onion, finely chopped
1	garlic clove finely chopped fresh thyme, marjoram and either rosemary or savory
½ cup	tomato juice or water
	salt and pepper

Cut the meat into serving-size pieces or not, as you wish. Pound the flour into the meat until the meat will hold no more flour. Render the suet or beef fat in a heavy pan. Add the meat and brown it slowly on both sides (allowing about 30 minutes in all). Remove the meat from the pan, discard the fat, and add to the pan the onion, garlic and a sprinkling of herbs to taste. Add the tomato juice or water and stir to deglaze the pan, seasoning with salt and pepper. Season the meat and return it to the pan. Cover the pan and cook very slowly for about 1¼ to 1¾ hours, or until the meat is tender.

19 FIT students pass EMT

BY DICK CAMPBELL

Nineteen of twenty-one students passed the National Registry testing for emergency medical technician at Florida Institute of Technology in the first phase of what might become full state accreditation for the Jensen Beach college.

The two students who failed the test were listed as "marginal failures" by FIT diving officer Jim Woodberry, who said the two "will easily pass on retaking the test."

Dave Schottke, assistant administrator for Florida Emergency Medical Services, acted as coordinator of the testing, which makes the students passing immediately eligible for the state EMT examination.

The FIT underwater EMT program is much more intensive than the regular EMT course, but had not received state recognition to qualify the students for EMT testing. A recent Mirror series on the problems of getting local volunteers for ambulance service revealed that the state had not given recognition to the college even though FIT was approved by the Underwater Medical Society in Washington, D.C.

Schottke is new on the job, heading the EMS office in Tallahassee. The FIT request for certification of its course was found after the Mirror series revealed the problem.

"I'm really pleased. The students can now take the next state exam that is available, and I'm sure they will pass with flying colors," Woodberry said.

He added that he hoped full certification of FIT and an EMT training center would come "within three to six months." A committee of the state EMS must be selected to review the FIT application and program.

The national registry examination is not recognized by Florida, though it is the criteria for many other states in EMT examination. Florida also does not have reciprocity with other state EMT programs, so a qualified EMT would have to retake the course and test to be qualified in Florida.

Once the students pass the state EMT test they will be able to volunteer for the ambulance service.

VIKINGS ARE COMING—Celebration of the discovery of American by Leif Erikson nearly 1000 years ago will take place at the Jensen Beach Causeway on Sunday, Oct. 7. Sons of Norway lodges from throughout the state, as well as many non-Norwegians, are expected to gather for the festivities, which will include a pageant depicting the landing of Erikson in America. A Viking boat more than 100 years old and similar to the one above will be used in the pageant.

Leif Erikson Day on tap for Sunday

Norwegians from throughout the state, as well as a healthy crowd of non-Norwegians, will gather at the Jensen Beach Causeway this Sunday to celebrate Leif Erikson Day.

A parade, a queen contest, sailboat races, and a "Landing of the Vikings" pageant are all included in the list of activities the Sons of Norway are planning to commemorate the discovery of America by Erikson about 1,000 years ago.

Just as folks of non-Irish origin turn Irish for a day on St. Patrick's Day, persons of all origins from throughout the region are expected to go Norwegian by joining the festivities on the causeway.

Since the first Leif Erikson Day celebration was held in Jensen Beach more than a decade ago, the event has grown into one of the major annual celebrations in the area.

Mrs. Phil Lee of the host Gulfstream Lodge of the Sons of Norway says 11 lodges from throughout the state will be represented, and that there are already 242 reservations for a Sons of Norway banquet at the Holiday Inn Oceanside on Saturday night.

Though the votes will be counted Saturday night, the announcement of who "Miss Viking" is won't come until festivities begin at the Causeway on Sunday.

At noon a parade will begin at the Post Office on Ricou Terrace, then wind around Palmetto to Commercial, down Commercial to Indian River Drive, and down that road to the causeway. The parade will end on the east side of the draw bridge.

State Representative Chuck Nergard, who is of Norwegian heritage, will be emcee; other most activities, while Bud Bjorgen of Fort Lauderdale will narrate the parade and pageant.

Trophies will be awarded for the parade entrants, then about 2 p.m. there will be Sunfish sailboat races. Five Sunfish boats will be used for preliminary races, runoffs, and a final heat to determine which lodge has the best crew of sailors. These races will take the place of the Viking boat races held in previous years, as some of the Viking boats are getting too old for use.

Though some lodges may bring Viking boats for the parade, the only one expected to be in the water will be an Octering, a Viking boat more than 100 years old which is owned by the local, Gulfstream, lodge. It was built for eight oars, and will be used in the pageant depicting the first landing of Vikings in America. Norse legend has it that Leif Erikson sailed from Greenland to Vinland (North America) about 1,000 years ago.

The pageant, beginning around 3 p.m. or 3:30 p.m., includes a skirmish with hostile indians who will be played by local Boy Scouts.

Members of the Sons of Norway lodges are asked to wear their "bunad" traditional Norwegian garb to the causeway Sunday.

Plants, hot dogs, Lapskaus (Norwegian stew), crafts, and baked goods are among the many items to be sold at booths on the causeway.

Pick-up truck is latest unwanted

BY BOB FRYER

Chuck Shepherd just can't keep his marina slips cleaned out at the Bait Box Tackle Shop in Jensen Beach.

On Labor Day Hurricane David slammed into Jensen and destroyed four of five boats that were tied up at the small marina.

In the weeks since then, much work has been devoted to clearing the sunken remains of boats from the marina slips.

Recently, one man whose boat was destroyed in the hurricane parked his stationwagon on the hill rising up from the marina slips. While he gathered personal possesions which had been scattered by the hurrigane, the emergency brake on the stationwagon failed and the car rolled into the marina.

Shepherd said the stationwagon stayed in the marina for a week before a wrecker hauled it out in exchange for ownership of the vehicle.

Shepherd, a part owner of the Bait Box, said he had just gotten the hull of a sunken boat out of a slip and was finally getting the slips cleared. But on Monday he came to work and found a red pick-up truck had plunged into the marina.

The truck, identified as a 1967 Ford owned by Henry Seneca of Fort Pierce, still had its back wheels on land, but its front wheels were on the bottom of the marina slip and the engine was underwater.

Shepherd said a man living on a boat next to the truck heard it go in about 3:20 a.m. Monday, but when he checked on it he could find no one around.

Kip Newbold reported the partially submerged truck to Sheriff's Deputy Ken Wright a short time after it went into the marina.

A check was made to determine if it was stolen, and Shepherd said the check indicated it was not.

The truck remained in the marina all day Monday and finally on Monday night Shepherd called the Sheriff's Department to ask when the truck would be removed. Deputy Rick Rufo responded and reportedly told Shepherd that since the truck was on private property, the Sheriff's Department could not move it. Rufo did give Shepherd the name of the owner of the truck though.

On Tuesday morning Shepherd said he hadn't yet been able to contact the owner, but said if he didn't connect with him soon, he planned to have someone remove the truck from the marina.

"Seems like everytime I get a slip cleaned out, it's clogged up again," he said.

The Sheriff's Department did not have a report available by Tuesday morning as to how the truck got into the marina, who the driver was, whether or not there was an injury, or whether or not the owner had been contacted.

Fire insurance rates to drop in Jensen Beach and Rio

County Commission Chairman Frank Wacha this week has good news for owners of homes in the Jensen-Rio area. The fire departments have been upgraded, by one notch, by the state, which will mean a premium savings on fire insurance for most people in the district.

Wacha said a review of the fire departments in the area was suggested a year ago by Norman Wilson, partner in the firm of Hartman, Tilton and Wilson, insurors for the county. Wilson told Wacha that such a review was long overdue, and that it might prove beneficial to area residents.

Wacha took the initiative to seek the review from the Insurance Services Office of Florida to check out his district.

"I told the board what I was doing, and they decided to do it for the whole county," Wacha said.

The review team came in and checked for deficiencies in such areas as water supply, communications, safety control, and the departments themselves. The result was a change of the Jensen department from 9AA to 8, basing their findings on a point system determinted by the number of deficiencies found.

The Rio Department was raised from a 10 rating to Class 9.

The changes, according to letters from William E. Elsberry, assistant supervisor of public protection, will affect structures according to what they are used for.

He wrote, concerning the Jensen department: "The change from Class 9AA to Class 8 will affect rates for some properties in various degrees, depending on the use of the building, the type of building construction, the hazard of occupancy, and other rating factors.

"The overall effect for commercial properties including habitational other than dwelling is approximately minus 22 percent for all types of building constructions. Residential properties insured under Homeowners type policies will realize an approximate premium reduction of 33 percent for those of wood frame construction, and 11 percent for those of masonry construction. Residential properties insured under dwelling type policies will experience an approximate premium decrease of 48 percent for those of wood frame construction, and 20 percent for those of masonry construction."

The estimates, he cautioned, apply only for insurance companies which use the ISO advisory rates. The resultant effect may differ for holders of other policies.

SUPERINTENDENT of Martin County Schools V. James Navitsky met with the PTA Council of Presidents last week and outlined how $12.5 million in bond issue money will be spent on local schools. He also explained his position on pay raises for teachers. (Photo by Bob Fryer)

Navitsky blames state for low teacher salaries

After hearing several PTA presidents comment that they felt Martin County teachers ought to get paid better wages, school Superintendent V. James Navitsky explained his position on the issue, saying, basically, he favors better pay, but there isn't enough money for it.

"I'm put in the position of not being for (higher) salaries. That's not the case, but we're on the opposite side of the bargaining table, so it appears that way," he said during the president's council meeting at Jensen Elementary last week.

Navitsky said one main problem with teacher salaries here is because "we're in a low salary state." He said most all counties in the state pay about the same salaries to teachers, but he said the state's funding per pupil is about half of what it is in some of the Northern states which pay teachers a better salary. Until the state pays more to local school systems, teacher salaries will remain low, he said.

"Certainly it's rough to live on one job with $12,000, which is about what the average salary for teachers is here, but teachers have contracts for only 193 days out of the year. You can't pay a full year's wage when you don't get the work for a full year," he said.

Navitsky said that while there may be some counties which pay better salaries in Florida, he said teachers here have some things some other counties don't have, such as a 23 to 1 pupil-teacher ratio (excluding PE classes), and when teacher aides are counted, a 20 to 1 pupil-adult ratio.

"But it has not been shown to us that teacher salaries are a priority item," commented PTA council vice president Shi Silver.

Navitsky said teacher salaries could go up, but only at the expense of other things which the school board feels are important. He said the school bus schedule could be revised to cut out some services and that the Environmental Center in Jensen Beach could be eliminated. "But I would not want to do that," he quickly added.

"The state of Florida is a lousy funding state," he complained, then listed several school system budget items that have gone up with inflation, including a 1067 per cent increase in the lighting and air conditioning bill since 1967.

"It's not a matter of want or don't want, or of philosophy or not; it's a matter of dollars," he said.

Navitsky said for the last three years the largest lobby at the state legislature was for schools, but he said the lobbyists had no significant impact. However, he said "the business community gets what legislation they want, so we need to get them to lobby for us." Then he suggested getting local businessmen and developers to help organize support for more school funding.

One PTA president at the meeting, who is also a teacher, said that the school system pays teachers over a 12-month period, so it collects interest that should be paid to the teachers. She also said the school board carried over more money from last year to the new fiscal year than the teachers are asking for, implying that this money should go to salaries.

A recent Mirror series on the problems of getting local volunteers for ambulance service revealed that the state had not given recognition to the college even though FIT was approved by the Underwater Medical Society in Washington, D.C.

Schottke is new on the job, heading the EMS office in Tallahassee. The FIT request for certification of its course was found after the Mirror series revealed the problem.

"I'm really pleased. The students can now take the next state exam that is available, and I'm sure they will pass with flying colors," Woodberry said.

He added that he hoped full certification of FIT and an EMT training center would come "within three to six months." A committee of the state EMS must be selected to review the FIT application and program.

The national registry examination is not recognized by Florida, though it is the criteria for many other states in EMT examination. Florida also does not have reciprocity with other state EMT programs, so a qualified EMT would have to retake the course and test to be qualified in Florida.

Once the students pass the state EMT test they will be able to volunteer for the ambulance service

VIKINGS ARE COMING—Celebration of the discovery of American by Leif Erikson nearly 1000 years ago will take place at the Jensen Beach Causeway on Sunday, Oct. 7. Sons of Norway lodges from throughout the state, as well as many non-Norwegians, are expected to gather for the festivities, which will include a pageant depicting the landing of Erikson in America. A Viking boat more than 100 years old and similar to the one above will be used in the pageant.

Leif Erikson Day on tap for Sunday

Norwegians from throughout the state, as well as a healthy crowd of non-Norwegians, will gather at the Jensen Beach Causeway this Sunday to celebrate Leif Erikson Day.

A parade, a queen contest, sailboat races, and a "Landing of the Vikings" pageant are all included in the list of activities the Sons of Norway are planning to commemorate the discovery of America by Erikson about 1,000 years ago.

Just as folks of non-Irish origin turn Irish for a day on St. Patrick's Day, persons of all origins from throughout the region are expected to go Norwegian by joining the festivities on the causeway.

Since the first Leif Erikson Day celebration was held in Jensen Beach more than a decade ago, the event has grown into one of the major annual celebrations in the area.

Mrs. Phil Lee of the host Gulfstream Lodge of the Sons of Norway says 11 lodges from throughout the state will be represented, and that there are already 242 reservations for a Sons of Norway banquet at the Holiday Inn Oceanside on Saturday night.

Though the votes will be counted Saturday night, the announcement of who "Miss Viking" is won't come until festivities begin at the Causeway on Sunday.

At noon a parade will begin at the Post Office on Ricou Terrace, then wind around Palmetto to Commercial, down Commercial to Indian River Drive, and down that road to the causeway. The parade will end on the east side of the draw bridge.

State Representative Chuck Nergard, who is of Norwegian heritage, will be emcee. Of most activities, while Bud Bjorgen of Fort Lauderdale will narrate the parade and pageant.

Trophies will be awarded for the parade entrants, then about 2 p.m. there will be Sunfish sailboat races. Five Sunfish boats will be used for preliminary races, runoffs, and a final heat to determine which lodge has the best crew of sailors. These races will take the place of the Viking boat races held in previous years, as some of the Viking boats are getting too old for use.

Though some lodges may bring Viking boats for the parade, the only one expected to be in the water will be an Octering, a Viking boat more than 100 years old which is owned by the local, Gulfstream, lodge. It was built for eight oars, and will be used in the pageant depicting the first landing of Vikings in America. Norse legend has it that Leif Erikson sailed from Greenland to Vinland (North America) about 1,000 years ago.

The pageant, beginning around 3 p.m. or 3:30 p.m., includes a skirmish with hostile indians who will be played by local Boy Scouts.

Members of the Sons of Norway lodges are asked to wear their "bunad" traditional Norwegian garb to the causeway Sunday.

Plants, hot dogs, Lapskaus (Norwegian stew), crafts, and baked goods are among the many items to be sold at booths on the causeway.

Pick-up truck is latest unwanted

BY BOB FRYER

Chuck Shepherd just can't keep his marina slips cleaned out at the Bait Box Tackle Shop in Jensen Beach.

On Labor Day Hurricane David slammed into Jensen and destroyed four of five boats that were tied up at the small marina.

In the weeks since then, much work has been devoted to clearing the sunken remains of boats from the marina slips.

Recently, one man whose boat was destroyed in the hurricane parked his stationwagon on the hill rising up from the marina slips. While he gathered personal possessions which had been scattered by the hurricane, the emergency brake on the stationwagon failed and the car rolled into the marina.

Shepherd said the stationwagon stayed in the marina for a week before a wrecker hauled it out in exchange for ownership of the vehicle.

Shepherd, a part owner of the Bait Box, said he had just gotten the hull of a sunken boat out of a slip and was finally getting the slips cleared. But on Monday he came to work and found a red pick up truck had plunged into the marina.

The truck, identified as a 1967 Ford owned by Henry Senecal of Fort Pierce, still had its back wheels on land, but its front wheels were on the bottom of the marina slip and the engine was underwater.

Shepherd said a man living on a boat next to the truck heard it go in about 3:20 a.m. Monday, but when he checked on it he could find no one around.

Kip Newbold reported the partially submerged truck to Sheriff's Deputy Ken Wright a short time after it went into the marina.

A check was made to determine if it was stolen, and Shepherd said the check indicated it was not.

The truck remained in the marina all day Monday and finally on Monday night Shepherd called the Sheriff's Department to ask when the truck would be removed. Deputy Rick Rufo responded and reportedly told Shepherd that since the truck was on private property, the Sheriff's Department could not move it. Rufo did give Shepherd the name of the owner of the truck though.

On Tuesday morning Shepherd said he hadn't yet been able to contact the owner, but said if he didn't connect with him soon, he planned to have someone remove the truck from the marina.

"Seems like everytime I get a slip cleaned out, it's clogged up again," he said.

The Sheriff's Department did not have a report available by Tuesday morning as to how the truck got into the marina, who the driver was, whether or not there was an injury, or whether or not the owner had been contacted.

Fire insurance rates to drop in Jensen Beach and Rio

County Commission Chairman, Frank Wacha this week has good news for owners of homes in the Jensen-Rio area. The fire departments have been upgraded, by one notch, by the state, which will mean a premium savings on fire insurance for most people in the district.

Wacha said a review of the fire departments in the area was suggested a year ago by Norman Wilson, partner in the firm of Hartman, Tilton and Wilson, insurors for the county. Wilson told Wacha that such a review was long overdue, and that it might prove beneficial to area residents.

Wacha took the initiative to seek the review from the Insurance Services Office of Florida to check out his district.

"I told the board what I was doing, and they decided to do it for the whole county," Wacha said.

The review team came in and checked for deficiencies in such areas as water supply, communications, safety control, and the departments themselves. The result was a change of the Jensen department from 9AA to 8, basing their findings on a point system determined by the number of deficiencies found.

The Rio Department was raised from a 10 rating to Class 9.

The changes, according to letters from William E. Elsberry, assistant supervisor of public protection, will affect structures according to what they are used for.

He wrote, concerning the Jensen department: "The change from Class 9AA to Class 8 will affect rates for some properties in various degrees, depending on the use of the building, the type of building construction, the hazard of occupancy, and other rating factors.

"The overall effect for commercial properties including habitational other than dwelling is approximately minus 22 percent for all types of building constructions. Residential properties insured under Homeowners type policies will realize an approximate premium reduction of 33 percent for those of wood frame construction, and 11 percent for those of masonry construction. Residential properties insured under dwelling type policies will experience an approximate premium decrease of 48 percent for those of wood frame construction, and 20 percent for those of masonry construction."

The estimates, he cautioned, apply only for insurance companies which use the ISO advisory rates. The resultant effect may differ for holders of other policies.

Navitsky blames state for low teacher salaries

After hearing several PTA presidents comment that they felt Martin County teachers ought to get paid better wages, school Superintendent V. James Navitsky explained his position on the issue, saying, basically, he favors better pay, but there isn't enough money for it.

"I'm put in the position of not being for (higher) salaries. That's not the case, but we're on the opposite side of the bargaining table, so it appears that way," he said during the president's council meeting at Jensen Elementary last week.

Navitsky said one main problem with teacher salaries here is because "we're in a low salary state." He said most all counties in the state pay about the same salaries to teachers, but he said the state's funding per pupil is about half of what it is in some of the Northern states which pay teachers a better salary. Until the state pays more to local school systems, teacher salaries will remain low, he said.

"Certainly it's rough to live on one job with $12,000, which is about what the average salary for teachers is here, but teachers have contracts for only 193 days out of the year. You can't pay a full year's wage when you don't get the work for a full year," he said.

Navitsky said that while there may be some counties which pay better salaries in Florida, he said teachers here have some things some other counties don't have, such as a 23 to 1 pupil-teacher ratio (excluding PE classes), and when teacher aides are counted, a 20 to 1 pupil-adult ratio.

"But it has not been shown to us that teacher salaries are a priority item," commented PTA council vice president Shi Silver.

Navitsky said teacher salaries could go up, but only at the expense of other things which the school board feels are important. He said the school bus schedule could be revised to cut out some services and that the Environmental Center in Jensen Beach could be eliminated. "But I would not want to do that," he quickly added.

"The state of Florida is a lousy funding state," he complained, then listed several school system budget items that have gone up with inflation, including a 1067 per cent increase in the lighting and air conditioning bill since 1967.

"It's not a matter of want or don't want, or of philosophy or not; it's a matter of dollars," he said.

Navitsky said for the last three years the largest lobby at the state legislature was for schools, but he said the lobbyists had no significant impact. However, he said "the business community gets what legislation they want, so we need to get them to lobby for us." Then he suggested getting local businessmen and developers to help organize support for more school funding.

One PTA president at the meeting, who is also a teacher, said that the school system pays teachers over a 12 month period, so it collects interest that should be paid to the teachers. She also said the school board carried over more money from last year to the new fiscal year than the teachers are asking for, implying that this money should go to salaries.

SUPERINTENDENT of Martin County Schools V. James Navitsky met with the PTA Council of Presidents last week and outlined how $12.5 million in bond issue money will be spent on local schools. He also explained his position on pay raises for teachers. (Photo by Bob Fryer)

19 FIT students pass EMT

BY DICK CAMPBELL

Nineteen of twenty-one students passed the National Registry testing for emergency medical technician at Florida Institute of Technology in the first phase of what might become full state accreditation for the Jensen Beach college.

The two students who failed the test were listed as "marginal failures" by FIT diving officer Jim Woodberry, who said the two "will easily pass on retaking the test."

Dave Schottke, assistant administrator for Florida Emergency Medical Services, acted as coordinator of the testing, which makes the students passing immediately eligible for the state EMT examination.

The FIT underwater EMT program is much more intensive than the regular EMT course, but had not received state recognition to qualify the students for EMT testing. A recent Mirror series on the problems of getting local volunteers for ambulance service revealed that the state had not given recognition to the college even though FIT was approved by the Underwater Medical Society in Washington, D.C.

Schottke is new on the job, heading the EMS office in Tallahassee. The FIT request for certification of its course was found after the Mirror series revealed the problem.

HOW TO BECOME A REAL ESTATE INSIDER

QUESTION: I have often considered investing in real estate, but I have so little knowledge that I feel I will be working at a distinct disadvantage by competing with those who really know what's going on. Is there any way that I can gain this knowledge in a hurry, or put myself on reasonably equal footing with those "in the know?"

ANSWER: I think that you have overcome the first hurdle to profiting from a real estate program by acknowledging your lack of knowledge. This is an important milestone because it puts you in a position to search for the knowledge you require.

You can become a "real estate insider" by contacting a practicing real estate investment broker and explaining that you would like to invest with him or her. By embarking on an investment program using your real estate investment expert as a partner, you will then be able to compete effectively in the market.

Obviously there are advantages and disadvantages to this arrangement. One disadvantage is that your expert most likely will insist upon making the major investment and management decisions. In addition, because your new partner most likely will be absorbing most of the risk, you should expect him to share in the profits from the operation, often without any capital contribution.

The advantages are obvious. If the arrangement is properly structured, you can isolate yourself from certain liabilities. In addition, you will have the advantage of having an expert as your team member.

Naturally, you should consult with your tax and legal advisers for their guidance in connection with your decisions.

Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 334-0747, or stop by:

Return of a native

Living "in the country" can be accompanied by all sorts of strange new experiences, as our Mary B. found out last week. Hers were in the form of strange visitors.

Mary B. (Meissner) who works in The Mirror ad department and who has proven adept at all other kinds of tasks like typesetting and proof-reading, just recently moved with her cousin Cathie Farago into the little cottage next to mine, in the little complex of homes on a cul de sac backed only by wilderness and railroad trains.

The two had been living literally high on the hog of sophistication, in a luxury upper story condo owned by Cathie's parents, on the island side of Jensen Beach. There they were sheltered and protected from intrusion, and with all the comforts of life.

But with the approach of the season, and the time when the parents would be wanting their apartment back, the two pretty young things explored the sylvan setting of our neighborhood, and decided they liked it.

They were just getting used to their new surroundings, turning the cottage into a cozy nest, when, last Wednesday night, Mary B. got a shock that very nearly made her remove herself from the premises permanently.

"I'd gone to bed," she said with still-surprise-opened eyes, "when I heard a noise in the kitchen. I thought someone had come in."

"Someone" had.

"I got in the kitchen, and saw these two big eyes looking at me," she recounted. "I turned on the light and saw it — it was a raccoon."

She screamed, and then went for the artillery.

"I got every shoe I owned out of the closet and threw it at him, to make him go away, but he wasn't going anywhere. I'd broken an egg earlier, and I put it in the waste basket. He apparently was going to stay until he got what he wanted."

To add insult to injury, a frog hopped into view on the kitchen floor. The odd couple had apparently accepted the invitation of the open door, which the telephone man who had been there earlier in the day to install the phone had failed to close.

Mary B. was at her wit's end. She ran and hopped into her Volkswagen bug and sped down the drive to city editor Bob Fryer's house, also on the Drive, to get help in evicting the unwanted visitors. By the time they returned, however, the 'coon had beat his own retreat, evidently catching on to the fact he wasn't exactly welcome.

Bob got a box, talked frog into jumping in it, and evicted him gently.

Mary B., a city gal at heart, still clung to the fringe of her initial terror. She was going to move and get, she sobbed to Bob — she was scared to death of things that crept and crawled, or even hopped.

"You've got to get used to the fact that this is Florida," he told her. "This was all jungle until a few years ago, and it belonged to them."

Which is true. We're the invaders, not the raccoons and other native creatures. She can just be thankful that it wasn't an alligator, the like of which so frequently disturb the golf games of golfers on the courses there, and inhabit canals not a chip shot away from $100,000 homes.

I kpersonally love the night sounds around my bucolic little villa — the invisible scurryings of little feet through the undergrowth just outside my window, and the tree frog symphony which tunes up after darkness takes over the landscape.

I've even grown mellow about the trains. Their seemingly constant parade, which barely dents my consciousness during the day, takes on a new and personal flavor at night, after I've tucked myself in. And like the animals, each one has its own personality.

The one that passes shortly after 11 is a jolly sort. His whistle is friendly, a lilting "a-boy-de whooey." He's a night train and he loves it, having the whole stage of ebon darkness to himself. The one that follows, about five minutes later, is as crabby as an executive with dispepsia. His is a terse, barking "blip-blip-de-blip," ordering all and sundry out of the way. A third one, following almost on the second's tail, is tired. "Ah-wah, ooh-ahh," he yawns.

There may be more, later in the night. I'm sure of it, because I counted every one when they were running over the foot of the bed in my former apartment on Palmetto Avenue.

But I don't hear them. The tree frogs have sung me to sleep.

Oops! In last week's Mirror, I did a booboo. It was in a story which grew out of my idle curiosity about the big pipes the county was laying along the route of the flooded Savanna Road area south of Legion Heights.

I called the always-obliging County Commission chairman Frank Wacha to find out what was up. He told me they were installing storm sewers from Commerical down to Warner Creek.

In my scrawled notes, I'd jotted down "Com to creek." And as I wrote the story, I confidently revealed that the remedial pipeline would extend from south of "Commercial Street to Tayler Creek."

Had my statement been correct, it would have been the longest drainage system in these parts. Taylor Creek does its flowing from the Indian River on the north side of Fort Pierce.

I blushingly repent. I will hereby write "Warner Creek" on the blackboard 100 times.

Delay is proper for fire-rec hall

The Martin County Commission didn't expect the series of delays involved in ...ing the intersection of ...anna Road and Commercial Street completed, and ...sultant construction of a ...mil-recreation hall under ...

The delays were typical of ...en a detailed project.

...ower poles and lines had to ...moved first, then the ...uthern Bell lines, and then ...e Perry Cable lines. Then ...uthern Bell came back with ...derground cable to provide ...re service from Commer... to the Catholic Church.

...de to that the rainy season, ...d a hurricane, and more ...rainage pipe to be layed along ...outh Savanna Road, and you ...e delay, delay, delay.

The county commission cannot be faulted for the delay Commissioner Frank Wacha had planned to get the project ...ut the ground in late Spring for completion by November. Dickerson, Inc., the prime contractor, delayed its entry due to other delays on the many projects they have working in the area, and that threw everything back.

In order to complete the proposed fire-rec hall on South Savanna Road, the county needs the fill from the work being done on the road. Hence, another chicken-egg situation rises.

The delay for the fire-rec hall is proper, and should wait in line for the completion of the road. Concerns of the fire department of service for that growing area are proper, but have been a concern for years, and can wait the necessary time to move ahead.

But, Wacha has said that the building will be built as soon as the road work is complete. The money is there for the job, and all that needs to be done is Savanna Road.

We'll have patience.

Protection for PSL

The people of Port St. Lucie now have the interim protection they need. The city council has contracted with ...ff Lamie Norvell for ...al deputy service during transition period, not to exceed one year, that the new Port St. Lucie police department will be set up.

This is a good move on the part of the city, and is a ...ple of cooperation from ...ff Norvell.

While we have, in the past, opposed a police department for Port St. Lucie on the grounds that it is just another layer of law enforcement, more expensive, and furthers the establishment of potential competition and jealousies between law enforcement departments, we do feel that if the city is to have such a department it should be the best, and it should work closely in cooperation with the sheriff's department.

The selection process of a chief of police is being well handled, professionally. The equipment ordering is on schedule.

There will be a few problems not anticipated, but in general, the development of the police department is moving at about the pace it should. So important a department cannot be hurried.

We salute the city for its move to offer interim protection, the sheriff for his cooperation, and the city administration for its handling of the organization of the new police department.

Students need housing

While the need is not as severe as as in previous years, students coming to Florida Institute of Technology still need housing. The community should respond to that need, offereing the students rooms in private homes in Jensen Beach.

FIT has become an important part of the community, and its students have won the respect of Jensen Beach residents. 850 students is a long cry from the several hundred who came here when FIT first opened in Jensen Beach.

The increase in students came with the excellent curriculum offered, the high quality of the faculty, and the excellent placement service for graduates.

FIT is a hands-on school, a technical college that teaches a needed trade as well as the liberal arts that round out character.

The students coming to FIT are interested in learning a trade, and if they don't want to learn, find out quickly that the administration does not put up with slackers.

We have a good college, and a great bunch of students. We hope that the people with extra rooms will rent them to students needing housing.

It began as a picnic

It was about twelve years ago that Ralph Evinrude called me on the phone. He had a letter from a Norwegian fellow asking if he would help him set up a picnic for the Sons of Norway.

I didn't even know there were Sons of Norway lodges in Florida. We had them in Alaska, where the S/N is a very powerful group, both socially and politically.

Evinrude asked me if I would handle it for him, and since it was a good idea for promotion, I called Bjarne Eikevik in Ft. Lauderdale. He was promoting the picnic for the three lodges in Florida.

Jensen Beach was a central point between Miami, Ft. Lauderdale and Orlando, where the lodges were located, and they would weekend at the Outrigger Resort.

Eikevik had an idea that I liked. He wanted to have the picnic, and along with it, a small pageant that would give the younger S/N members an idea of the Norwegian heritage. He wanted the men and women to wear their "bunads" (colorful dresses and suits that indicated the area of Scandanavia they came from) and had obtained a "sexering" (six oarsmen) boat that was 100 years old.

The pageant would recreate the landing of Leif Erikson in Florida.

When Eikevik and I got together in Jensen Beach, I suggested that the event be open to the public, making it a pageant that would be a tourist attraction. He bought the idea, and the rest is history.

Every year, the Sons of Norway hold their pageant on the Jensen Beach Causeway. The one boat grew to three, all 100 years old and all brought over from Norway. Their colorful striped sails blend with the authentic outfits worn by the warriors who man them.

The second year we founded a chapter of S/N in Ft. Pierce-Jensen Beach. It has flourished.

As years passed the Sons of Norway grew in Florida. Now they have chapters in thirteen communities in Florida. Eikevik has gone on to become a top official in the national organization.

This Sunday on the causeway Leif Erikson Day will be held again, with all the pageantry and the wonderful food, prepared from old world recipes, and Norwegian trinkets and souvenirs that are on sale in the many booths. It opens with a colorful parade down Commercial Street and out to the causeway.

There will be Scandanavian dances and music.

The Vikings will again attack the Indians and the Indians will again win the battle. The Indian maiden will again be carried off to the boats, and the people of Jensen, and visitors, will get a taste of the heritage of Leif Erikson and the brave men who first found the North American continent.

The pageant is an exciting and fun filled time for everyone, and should be a must on the weekend.

Eikevik's idea of having something to show the people the Norwegian heritage has paid off. Another idea of Eikevik was to eventually build a museum of Norwegian history in Jensen Beach. It has not yet come to fruition, but is still in the works.

Presently we are trying to get the large boat that was used to make the movie "The Viking" donated to Florida Institute of Technology in Jensen. The boat had been a tourist sight-seeing boat at Montreal Expo, and then was purchased by a Tampa member of the Sons of Norway. He is presently thinking about making the donation to FIT.

Once it is here, it is possible that we would be able to use it as the first step in building Ike Eikevik's second dream, the museum.

We welcome the Sons of Norway for Leif Erikson Day. This is one annual event we won't be missing.

Raft Race excuses

By the time this column is published, the third annual Great American Raft Race will be history, and, no doubt, the Mirror Newspaper entry will be but a minor footnote to that history.

In most sporting events and other forms of competition, the excuses for not winning flow from the loser's mouths after the loss is sustained.

I'm writing my column two days before the raft race and I'm going way out on a limb by predicting we will not win.

And, just to prove to you how sure I am of our upcoming loss, I've already got a list of excuses we'll be using.

For one thing, none of it is my fault. The rest of our staff may be at fault, but my hands are clean of the humiliating finish I'm sure we will have had last Saturday.

Before I place blame on the rest of the staff, let me hasten to note that the Port St. Lucie Exchange Club, which made up the rules for the raft race, is also to blame. Their sin is they didn't write the rules to fit our raft. So, after getting a what surely would have been a craft worthy of "also-ran" status, we had to junk the plan and come up with a raft guaranteed to elicit remarks such as "humiliatingly slow" and "downright pitiful."

We are, of course, used to humiliation. In last year's raft race, our $20.82 special finished about an hour (or was it two) after all other competitors had crossed the finish line.

But we finished, and one innertube contraption full of drunkards dropped out of the race. So we took home a second place, three-inch-tall, trophy. We show it off proudly to visitors without ever once telling them only two rafts in our category finished the race.

It's those infernal "categories" of rafts that caused this year's problem. Well, actually, the problem is someone whose initials are identical to Michelle Naspinski didn't read the rules before we started assembly of parts for our raft. And when we found out what this year's rules were, we found we'd either have to add two more members to our raft crew or enter the "unlimited" category.

We opted to add two crew members rather than go up against the likes of the OMC 18-man war canoe or against the bicycle-driven paddle-wheel job the Port St. Lucie Bank no doubt won with this year. (Last year they were finished with the two-mile course before we were more than 200 yards down the river. I understand this year's model features three, count em, three tandem bikes to power the paddle-wheel.)

This year the paddled and/or poled rafts and the unlimited rafts were on separate courses, and by adding two members and staying out of the unlimited division, we only had to go two miles instead of 4.5 miles. But the last-minute change in design plans to add two more crew members is one of the excuses I'm sure we'll rely on heavily.

Want more excuses? How about:

Our budget was too small to build a competitive raft.

Our raft weighed too much.

Some of our crew members drank too much beer in an attempt to lighten the load in the storage compartment, then couldn't steer so well.

After emptying our storage compartment, some of our crew members weighed too much.

And due to improved steering ability, we took a wrong turn and got lost.

Come to think of it, if we're as slow this year as last year, you can bet we'll take a wrong turn and never again show our faces in town.

Letter to the editor

To the Editor:

Will wonders never cease, here is State Senator Gordon saying that marijuana should be legalized. His reasons for unleashing this mind boggling drug are as follows. (1) The police are unable to stop the smuggling. (2) Savings can be realized on police costs. (3) It can then be taxed. Of course the last reason makes all politicians happy, more taxes.

I just wonder if in the near future another politician of Senator Gordon's mentality will make the astounding discovery that the police are unable to control crime and therefore it should be legalized with the following benefits to mankind. (a) All criminals must apply for licensing. (3) All criminals are to pay sales taxes on their ill gotten gains. (2) We can eliminate police, judges, jails, etc. etc.

I have a few questions that I hope the Honorable Senator can answer, how can we control the carnage on our highways when anyone can smoke this drug, what will happen to our young when the media starts to glorify this evil. Why stop with marijuana? Let it all go.. opium, cocaine. Open the floodgates, to hell with humanity.

CHAPTER OF AARP

BY ERNIE CURWEN
Tel.334-0756

BY ERNIE CURWEN

A spicy young grandmother wanted to know: "where are all those aging Americans we hear so much about. I don't see many around here." Then she goes on to remark that when she was a little girl, she remembers her grandmother as a tired old woman, with long black skirts sweeping the floor, long sleeve dark blouses brightened up on occasions by a bright gingham, apron, steel rim glasses perched on the end of her nose and her dull gray hair piled up in a tight bun.

Also, gramps was a tired old man, baggy kneed pants, saggy pocket coat, scraggly moustache and long, thin white hair. They were old people.

But, today she continues, us eighty-year olds wear bright shorts, with appropriate, colorful blouses, has dyed to match our personalities. We are just as young as we feel and our men folk are not far behind with multicolored shorts, Hawaiian type shirts and sandals to match. That's why there aren't many oldsters around these days, and that should all be to the good, but, here is what happened on one TV program.

Channel 11, Sept. 29, there was a discussion about mandatory retirement for the 23 million elderly that are over 65 right now and this portion of the population will make up 20% of the total by 1990. Young folks felt that the seniors would have to move out of the labor market to make room for the teenagers. Others felt that the know how and the conscientious efforts of these aging Americans was too valuable to be discarded prematurely.

It was pointed out that as long as these seniors were on a payroll, paying high taxes and not needing Social Security benefits, the economy would be in better shape with more workers contributing to the pension fund and fewer seniors drawing on it.

As for the teenagers, it was pointed out in Readers Digest that exemption from very high minimum age and relaxing Union rules would do much to get youths and minorities into the job market, without forced retirement. The article spelled-out how a lower minimum wage could allow business to train two inexperienced youths instead of employing one highly skilled Union member.

Martin County Interagency Council will meet Friday, Oct. 5, 8 a.m. at the Tri-County rehabilitation Center, to hear Florence Hayreuther, of the Fort Pierce, Health and Rehabilitation Service discuss the future of the "Displaced Homemaker Program" and Bruse Ferguson, of Social Security Office will talk on Medicare and associated problems. Nellie Bullock, president is glad to report that the secretary and mailing problems have been solved by Sue Daughters and Colleen Watts. Women Club members are urged to attend, also the clergy.

Martin Council on Aging will hold its regular monthly meeting, Thursday, Oct. 4, 1:30 p.m. in the Library. We all express our sympathy to president Leta Williams on the death of her husband, Gayle, last week. The meeting will cover "Change in Meals Source," "By Law Changes," "Fund Drives" and there might even be some late information on the Log Cabin Senior Center.

Congregate Meals at Langford Field, 4:15 p.m. Mon. thru Fri. has a new name, it is "Treasure Coast Senior Services." There will still be the recreation programs at 3:15 and there was a great one last Friday, when Elliott Arluck, Program Director, presented Steve Clunn at piano and Ken Hansen on the bass guitar, with Elliot jouing at times with songs and guitar strumming. For information call Dorris Walker, 334-2570.

No response to V III

I had no response to our plea for news, nor any volunteers to report on happenings in each section of V III, so this is my last effort to report the news. I hope someone, who is probably more qualified to get cooperation of the park, will decide to try again.

My thanks to those of you who were interested enough to help.

Happy birthday to Anna Bromberger and Kay Koepka on Oct. 3rd. Welcome back to all, as you return to V III.

Many are returning

Ocean Breeze

BY ERNIE CURWEN
234-0734

Folks are coming back to Ocean Breeze ParkK some on regular schedule; some to take care of hurrikane damage; and some because the nesthers weather has turned sour (as recent letters indicate). Sorry folks, but we don't have much improvement to offer with all this hotter than normal weather and the darn thunder storms that are deluging us with one or two inches of rain each and every day. But, you all know from past experience that soon we will be having day after day of that good ol' balmy Martin County weather, so hang on and smile.

The office has started to list the arrivals and, here is the first batch: Mae Smith; Ken and Mable Brown; Guy and Louise Fusco; Vincent and Celia Ashley; Viola Watts; Ted and Olive Wittmer; Floyd and Jessie Prowell; Mildred Fenwich; Al and alice Sharp; Mildred Clarke; Louis and Lillian Dodge. That is 20, listed; but many others have come in before in twos and threes, so to have a starting point for the season's count, we will call the total to date, 50.

It is interesting to note, history does repeat itself, for here is the record for the past few years, for corresponding week: 1978, 20 returned to make total 68; 1977, 26 back for total of 74, 1976, no record; 1975, 32 returned for a total of 104. Looks like office was right when they said, "Even with folks returning because of "David-Damage," they are not coming back as fast as usual."

Now that the hurricane debris has been cleaned up (days, sooner than at other places), the park is resuming its "Welcome Back" neat and pretty appearance. Also, it is very comforting to know that during the dark hours there is a Security Patrol out there protecting them. Those who have a problem sleeping nights (and there are many of them) often see a couple on patrol and can't help but think of those olden days, in a small New England town, when the townfolks would hear the friendly cry of Ye Olde Town Cryer, "Twelve O'Clock and all is well." So, it is nice to know there is a group of dedicated OBPers around. Thanks again.

Just a quicky. A warning to all. Ernie uses a pocket tape recorder, and tries to tell all who are interviewed, that they are going on tape. But, often he forget, so if for any reason you want to talk "Off the record," don't be bashful, speak up. The taping is a big help, as often the scribbled notes can't be decoded. So, thanks for your cooperation.

PARK EVENTS

BINGO, has not started yet and they don't know just when, so watch the bulletin boards. Then, a few minutes later at the Shuffle Court board, there was a notice "Bingo Monday Night."

SHUFFLERS have taken David in stride, but the rains are something else. However, the ol' reliables were at-it as usual last Sat. morning, with Bill, Clyde, Elston and Earl talking up a whale of a game.

It looks as though the Bean Bag games will soon get under way, for the following have signed up: Pearl Wheelock; Fran Rugyan; Ella Lee; Guy Fusco; Joe Jensen; Ralph Ballets; Millie Smith; Evelyn Groves. There is room for many more and Guy Fusco says those who played in Hendersonville last summer had some wild times.

RAMBLING AROUND

Chet and Pearl Wheelock, of 4 Banyan St. are back from 4 months up in Lawton, Mich., where they stayed in their big travel trailer under the branches of a spreading oak. Although Pearl doesn't get in any shuffling, Chet is the Champ croquet player of the family. They made many side trips, one to ahuge family reunion in Indiana. They found David brushed them by with minor damage.

Glen and Marie Roudebush, 28 SW 6th St. are just back from a jaunt all around the East. First, they scooted up to Lexington, Ky. to enjoy the white fenced horse farms, then on to West Union, Ohio where they visited with Lee Zimmerman. After that, they went here, there and back again in such a great variety of twist and turns, that it was hard to keep track.

They went from Wooster, Ohio to Michigan and "did" 1400 miles of the upper and lower peninsular before returning back to Wooster, Ohio. Then, it was on to New York, Buffalo, Luray Caverns, Sky Line Drive and home, visiting: Canfield; Mathews; Dryer; Beyer, along the way. All the OBPers were OK. Maybe Glen will have stides?

Bob and Mary Strohm, 4 Pine Lane are back from a month out Kansas City way. They didn't get away too early this year as Mary had a summer leather class and their son came from auburn, N.Y. for their 50th wedding anniversary on July 25. They went by Amtrack, enjoyed it and found the train patronized quite well, but this train will be discontinued Oct. 1. They enjoyed visiting family and friends, but glad to get back to OBP.

Louis and Lillian Dodge, 6 Mango St. are just back from 6 months in Dalton, Pa. to find themselves in a hurricane mess. The roof was blown off the Cabana room and water damage was extensive and although they had requested the reconnection of their telephone for Sept. 15, they found that they couldn't call out but folks could call them.

Louis' niece and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Scango of Factoryville, Pa. came back with them. It is their first time here and they are so pleased with OBP and OBPers that they want to stay here, and are scouting around for a "good buy."

Melva Atchison of 32 Ocean Breeze Dr. had to come back early from northern Indiana to take care of "David Damage." They are one of the few who suffered "a total." Cabana roof came off, breaking windows and loosening roof of mobile home itself, then the hurricane rains and the continuous downpours since have made the whole interior a dismal soggy mess. Salvagable furnishings are being moved to storage, then the wrecked unit will be yanked out and a new 14 x 60 will be moved in, hopefully by the 15th of October.

They are at present staying in the mobile home on Bay Dr. directly behind their old home. We all hope their new 14 wide will be on time and that they will soon be back in their own home.

He hops to Vienna as 'father of bride'

Not just everybody gets invited to Vienna to be the father of the bride. And not everyone would consider it within the realm of possibility.

But for Frank Ledinsky, it was a mere commuter hop. Co-owner of the Colonial Travel Agency of Cedar Pointe Plaza, he spends at least six months out of the year on the go to faraway places, to bring home first hand information to his clientele.

This trip, however, was related only dimly to his present business. It stemmed from the time back in 1955-56 in Plymouth, Mich., while he was still an automotive engineer for GRW Inc.

"We took Marianne (Tomasik) into our home as an exchange student," he told The Mirror. "Since we had no children, she became like a daughter to us."

The relationship continued strong over the years, bound tight by frequent letters.

"And she's gone on vacations with us when we were in Europe," Frank said.

Thus, when Marianne, now 39, decided to tie the knot with Peter Sandor, a fellow teacher in the Vienna school system, she thought first of the Ledinskys. She invited them both to the wedding, and asked Frank to be her "father of the bride," since her own father had died some time ago.

Frank was glad to accept the invitation. Helen, who was getting ready to leave for a cruise of the Mediterranean, the Greek Islands and Bulgaria, had to pass up the trip, though she would have liked to make it, too.

"When we got the call," Frank said, "we couldn't give her an answer immediately. It came the week before the hurricane, and we didn't know what was going to happen."

Fortunately for him and for Marianne, Hurricane David scurried through the area, doing plenty of damage including to the front of the Travel Agency office, which, being located at the extreme east end of the shopping plaza, took the brunt of the blast. But Frank and helen were open for business the next day after the cane's departure.

Frank, who likes to know all the problems with which his clients are faced, found out in person on the first leg of his Vienna flight. The trip was to have taken him non-stop from Miami to Vienna. But electrical problems developed aboard the plane.

"We were shifted to another plane, a National airline," he said. "National loaded five extra cases of champagne aboard. By the time we got to Vienna, nobody cared much that we were four hours late."

The wedding, Frank said, was lovely -- taking place in a little church outside Vienna.

The wedding mass, Frank said, was very much like our Catholic ceremony. Afterward, a reception banquet was held in a beautiful small hotel, also on the outskirts of Vienna.

The fun came in a different sort of a climax to the reception. The bride was "kidnaped," and taken to one of the guest houses surrounding the hotel.

"The bridegroom had to go out to find her, and was expected to pay for the drinks for the occupants of every wrong cottage," Frank said. "Luckily, he guessed right the first time."

The Ledinskys are particularly grateful to their adoptive "daughter," because it was while Marianne was with them in Michigan that they first became involved in the travel business.

"We got in the back door because of her," Frank said. "Her travel agent said he needed some help, and hired Helen."

They came to Florida nine years ago, and chose this area because their friends Harry and Lucille Bippee, who lived in Jensen Beach at the time.

Helen's first job after their move was with the Stuart travel agency. "And I followed her in."

Three years ago, they decided to "strike out on their own," and founded the Colonial Agency.

It is well that the Ledinskys enjoy traveling, because each of them are off covering the globe at least half of the year, getting the first hand flavor of the countries on their itineraries.

"I feel it's important to know what we're selling," Frank commented.

They particularly enjoy the package tours, which Frank says are the best buys.

"The price includes everything, including food," he explained. "They're little out of pocket, except for liquor and personal items."

Doesn't he ever experience friction or incompatibility during such tours?

"There may be one or two who don't come up to standard," he said, "but then, you might not be up to somebody else's standard."

During a tour of Russia, for example, one of the travelers in his group complained that he never saw a Russian smile.

"Do you smile at them?" he asked. The complainer admitted he hadn't.

"It doesn't matter where you go," he philosophized, "if you're nice to them, they'll be nice to you."

HERE CAME THE BRIDE+ The new Mrs. Peter Sandor, who said their wedding vows in a little church outside Vienna, are seen with "father of the bride", Frank Ledinsky, owner of a Stuart travel agency, left. Both bride and bridegroom are teachers in the Vienna school system.

WEDDING GUESTS GATHER-The quaint little Catholic Church on the outskirts of Vienna, Austria, was the scene of the wedding for which Frank Ledinsky, local travel agency, served as the "father of the bride. The "daughter" is the former Marianne Tomasik, who spent a year with the Ledinskys when they lived in Michigan.

Gearing for fire prevention week

Local firemen will be joining fire fighters from throughout the country to observe national Fire Prevention Week from Sunday, Oct. 7, to Saturday, Oct. 13.

George Ruff, chairman of the fire prevention week commitee for the Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department, says firemen will be making a special effort during the week to impress upon the community the hazards of fire and the importance of taking precautions against one.

Ruff says the week will be filled with a variety of activities, including a fire prevention talk to Jensen Beach Elementary School students by, fire chief Joe Luciano on Monday morning.

The children are making fire prevention posters, and prizes will be awarded to those judged best. And, the posters will be placed on display in local storefront windows.

On Tuesday, assistant chief Will Bowman will begin giving free fire safety inspections for local businesses. "He'll point out any possible fire hazards and make suggestions for fire prevention," Ruff said.

Ruff also noted that firemen will be available to speak on fire prevention to any civic or social group which would like a speaker during fire prevention week. Those wishing to make arrangements for a speaker or a fire inspection should call the fire department at 334 2220 between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

The week will be capped with a barbeque chicken cookout from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Jensen Beach Causeway on Sunday, Oct. 14. The menu includes half a barbecued chiken, beans, cole slaw, a roll and a soda for $3. Tickets can be obtained from volunteer firemen or purchased at the causeway.

The State Department of Forestry will have a unit on display at the causeway, and for the third year, the firemen will conduct a greased-pole climbing contest.

THE MIRROR "DRAGON"—The Mirror's raft in the Great Raft Race on Saturday started out with the dragon's head leading as figurehead. But long before the race was over, dragon got the back seat because he kept impeding the progress of the chief oarsman. The team included City Editor Bob Fryer, Cathie Farago, Michelle Naspinski and Mary Beverly Meissner. The craft was one of many competing in the raft division of the event sponsored by the Exchange Club. (Staff photo by Rick Campbell)

The third annual raft race was biggest (and funniest)

Close to 1,000 spectators lined the bank of the St. Lucie River Saturday to guzzle beer and cheer on their favorite contenders in the Third Annual Great American Raft Race.

The day-long event, co-sponsored by the Port St. Lucie Exchange Club and WQVV radio of Ft. Pierce, turned out unprecedented crowds despite thunderous storm-clouds that brewed overhead.

While rock and disco geared up onlookers for the race, paddlers led their diverse creations to the starting gate, with the Port St. Lucie News capturing an early lead which they were not to lose until race-end.

Oblivious to the jeers coming from the slower-moving rafts of other local newspapers (the Mirror raft was one of the more vocal, as they were barely past the starting line when the News rounded the homestretch) the styrofoam floater glided on to an easy victory. Hard feelings? You betcha!)

Taking second in the hand-paddled and poled raft division was the Ark II with John DiMauro as captain. Glenn Jones, captain of the Serptoma slid into the third place spot, with many of the other rafts either creeping tardily over the finish to assume an undesignated place or giving up mid-stream to break open a six-pack.

Marilyn Smith, Cheryl Langley and Royce Sisson took first place for the women's novice canoe division, after valiantly completing a four and a half mile course from the White City Bridge to the Northport Marina. Second place in that division went to Georgina Kellagher, Shirley Walls and Diane Griggs.

The age 55 and over novice canoe paddlers had a division of their own, with seniors John and Jean Oram capturing first.

Both first and second place in the men's novice canoe division went out to Martin County High School swim team members, who entered several of the crafts in the race. Swimmers-turned-paddlers Clint Van Welde and Gil Oeschlager stroked on to win a first place rating, while Norton Euart and Bob Schultz took a close second.

Winner of the expert canoe solo class, which began the 10 and a half mile course from Sandpiper Bay at 12:15, was Rick Huck. Winning entries in the expert canoe-mixed class began paddling into Northport Marina shortly before the 1:30 starting time of the raft division. First in that category were Earl Dodge and Jay Jay, followed closely by Larry Moore and Judy Grant (second) and Mike Willis and Elsie Giulette (third).

In addition to the racing events, six Budweiser plastic rafts were raffled off to contestants and spectators, and every paddler received a Bud beer bucket and a ribbon exclaiming "I survived the Great American Raft Race." Budweiser donated all the beer for the event, the proceeds of which will be forwarded to the United Way Fund. Exchange Club members report that a figure somewhere in the vicinity of $2,000 was raised at the race.

They attribute the remarkable response to the widespread coverage received from co-sponsor WQVV. Herb Haughton, Exchange Club member and president of the Port St. Lucie Bank, numbered the day's participants to be in excess of 200, that being ten times the previous year's response.

Thus, regardless of the soggy quality of the day, Port St. Lucie turned out its kind in full force, making the race another memorable entry in the short, but growing history of this remarkable city.

THEY'RE OFF!—The raft racers, in Saturday's big water event sponsored by the Exchange club, dauntlessly fight the current and the prevailing wind as they take off from North Port Marina. The entries included everything from the most sophisticated craft that took months to prepare to hastily-contrived ones thrown together at the eleventh hour. The commonest "prize" for all was a set of sore muscles and lots of fun. (Staff photo by Rick Campbell)

Once with feeling

Alright, alright. When the Mirror raft flubbed so desperately at last year's Great American Raft Race, we vowed to start early next year and make an impressive comeback.

Well, September 1979 rolled around while we were too busy with journalistic-type endeavours to notice. Once again we prepared our raft the week of the race and this time we flubbed violently.

At least last year we could boast of a magnificent sail proudly exclaiming the Mirror. At least last year we were grudgingly awarded the second place trophy as we were the only other raft in the unlimited division to finish the course. At least last year we flubbed with dignity.

This year the Mirror entered an unmarked inner-tubal creation that was designed to resemble an ill-fated Puff the Magic Dragon.

Unfortunately, Puff's helium hoisted head collapsed before the race began. Unfortunately, pink and green polka-dotted shower curtains draped on the raft's sides created more drag than they were worth in aesthetics.

Well so much for the bad news. The good news was that this year crewpersons Bob Fryer, Cathy Farago, Michelle Naspinski and Mary Meissner were smart enough to abandon the idea of finishing the race as soon as it became clear that the current was too strong to fight. This year we opened up the beer instead.

Promises are cheap. Everyone found that out when our sincere cries of vindication last year manifested themselves into a giant pink and green dud.

Well just wait. We have already marked off July 1, 1980 as the official starting date for the Mirror "Build-A-Winning-Raft" construction crew. We already have a deviously quick and light-weight raft in mind that was dreamed up by a paddle-weary Mary Meissner.

MUD PIEMAN—Give a lad a mud puddle, and he'll show you what it's for — namely, to splash in. This young man's antics were attracting almost as much attention as the strange-looking craft entered in last Saturday's Great Raft Race at North Port Marina, sponsored annually by the Exchange Club. (Staff photo by Rick Campbell)

A MUDDER KIND OF FUN—While entrants in the Great Raft Race were putting finishing touches on their weird craft, one lad was getting his jollies bespattering himself with mud along the North Fork banks at North Port Marina. The event, which started out under sunny skies, was brought to a wet halt by the afternoon downpour. (Staff photo by Rick Campbell)

Wright 'cautiously optimistic' about Central's hoop hopes

BILL WRIGHT
...wants district title

BY DONNIE WILKIE

The infamous "Tiger Den" in Stuart was jammed to its limit on the night of February 23 of this year, as the huge crowd anticipated two of the finest basketball games that any single area could offer.

The semi-final round of the 1979 District 11-AAAA basketball tournament produced only one truly competitive game, as the Martin County Tigers, headed for their third state championship, edged Twin Lakes, 58-52. It was in the other game, a 76-44 blowout suffered by Fort Pierce Central against Lake Worth-Leonard, where this story begins.

The Cobras, who began the evening with a 14-14 record, could do nothing right. Although they held the Lancers without a field goal for the first three minutes, the score soon began to mount against them: 14-3, 19-5, 29-7 and finally, 4-14 at halftime.

"They blew us right off the map," remembers Bill Wright, the Cobra Head Coach who saw his first season at Central end on that sour note. Nevertheless, the St. Lucians never quit, and played the Lancers evenly in the second half, while being outscored only 31-30. The whole affair gave most of the Leonard players a big laugh.

In 1979-80, though, it may be Central's turn to chuckle.

Wright is armed with virtually the same team that finished fourth in the Suncoast Conference Eastern Division in 1978-79, though most observers are quick to point out that it may be the same team only physically. Otherwise, it is one of the most improved teams in the area, and suddenly, many are giving Central a chance at the district title (now Eastern10), and some even look forward to a possible Region 5-AAAA tilt between the Cobras and powerful Daytona-Mainland.

"It's not the same team out there," said Wright, who will open Central's practice schedule Monday. "They are expecting to win this year instead of hoping."

Wright cites the team's maturity and high expectations as proof of how far Central's basketball program has leaped in just one year. "They talk about going to state(at Lakeland) all the time now, and we've definitely got a shot at it as long as they keep thinking that way."

Among the players with high hopes are returning starters Wilber Washington, Mike Toomer, Wayne Titus and luther Sandifer. Only All-District guard Arthur Robinson is missing from last year's edition.

"I expect Sandifer and Titus to really stand out," said Wright. "Sandifer has major-college ability, but he just didn't show it last year. And if Titus we've got one of the best (if not the best defensive guards in Florida.

"Heck, he shut everybody down who played against him. He held Moses (J.O)hnson, of Martin County) to practically nothing when he guarded him, and he held (Eric) Carrithers of Westwood to just three points."

At six feet, two inches, Titus will probably play a wing in Wright's offense, while Sandifer will take over the show at point guard, the seat occupied by Robinson last year.

The 6'7" Toomer will play inside along with Washington, who at 6'4" and only a sophomore last season, rated as the area's most pleasant surprise.

"Wilbert did so much for us last year," claimed Wright. "Whenever we faced a crisis situation, it was he who brough us through. If he only plays AS GOOD as he did last year, he'll be one of the most recruited players in the state."

Except for Sandifer, Wright considers Toomer to be his most improved player. "He couldn't even catch the basketball when the season began last year," the coach continued. "But when we played Westwood, he just dominated the entire game."

The fifth spot in the starting lineup will probably be occupied by either Frank Hightower or Curita Redding, both of whom stand at least 6'3" and saw limited action a year ago.

"I think the kids realized just how close we came to a 20-win season," Wright stated. "I mean, there were games that we just donated to the other team because of our mistakes, and we just don't expect to make those mistakes this year."

"I was real disappointed with our losing season, but in retrospect, we got a hole early when we lost Andy Chapman (their center) and when Wilbert got sick. It wasn't until after Christmas that we even had our starting team together."

"We made some real improvements during the summer. The team did quite well against college players in the city League (one game above .500, including a win over the team featuring former FPC star Elvis Rolle, which won the league), and our staff has improved, too. We got Jim Wilson to coach the junior varsity, and Barclay Tait to coach the freshman team.

In fact, the barometer for FPC's progress may be found in the frrahman squad, where Wright and crew scheduled 18 games this year, compared to just four (all aginast Martin County last season.

As far as the Suncoast East goes, Wright expects Twin Lakes, Leonard and Lake Worth to challenge, as well as his Cobras, for the title, while Martin County sends a young and virtually untested squad into the campaign.

"Winning the conference is our first priority at the moment because it is the first thing that faces us," explains Wright, who assumed the coaching duties at Central after a stint as an assistant at DeLand.

"I didn't think the most individualy talented team won the state last year (Martin County)," added Wright, who went on to explain that this Fort Pierce Central team "is more talented than the last team I was associated with at DeLand, and they lost in three overtimes in the semi-finals to the champions (Miami Central) in 1977-78. And I know we weren't the most talented team that year.

WILBERT WASHINGTON
...is he state's most recruited junior?

"Every year ther are good clubs I think the key for us this year will be how we handle winning two or three games in a row. If we rest on our laurels, we'll be mediocre. We're going to be successful - how successful deends on that."

"Any win for us is important considering the failure this school has experienced in the past, even wi tremendous talent. A conference title would be great, because it would go a long way toward proving that things have turned around at Central."

And no matter how much anyone talks about any team in October, the full story willnot unfold until the winter freezes are past and the Lakeland civic Center opens for business in March at the state championships.

TIGER TROUBLES-Martin County High School Head Coach Fred Chase argues desperately with ron Lucas, the referee at last week's Martin County-Vero Beach football game, over a call which Lucas made in the second quarter. Lucas and Chase apparently had a small feud while the MCHS coach was at Satellite Beach, but this was the first time the two had met since them. Chase was critical of the refereeing after the contest, which Martin County lost 26-6. The Tigers (3-2) play at home Friday night against Boca Raton.

Central mauls Satellite, 27-0

BY DONNIE WILKIE

Senior quarterback Peter Bartriner completed 12 of 17 passes, throwing for two touchdowns and running for a third last Friday night, as the undefeated Fort Pierce Central Cobras blasted winless Satellite 27-0 in a District 10-AAAA game.

Satellite signal-caller Tom Boyle, who leads the Space Coast (which does not include the Martin-St. Lucie County shcools) in passing, sputtered slightly against the fierce Cobra defense, connecting on only six of 18 atempts for just 46 yards.

Bartriner broke up a scoreless duel in the second period, as he hooked up with Cedric Stubbs for a six-yard touchdown. Todd Breen's conversion kick made the score 7-0.

"We used seven or eight kids at the running back positions during the game," said a very pleased Cobra Coach, Phil Farinella. "The ting that really impressed me wa that he (Bartriner) was able to use all of his receivers well, and that includes the running backs. When you have five or six guys that can catch the ball in the game, it keeps the defense from keying on any one person."

Indeed, the Cobras used another of their backs, Chris Nelson, to register their second touchdown of the night, a ninne-yard toss from Bartriner just prior to halftime. The point failed, so Central settled for a 13-0 lead at the intermission.

Boyle's darkest moment practically ended Satellite's chances, as Luther Sandifer stole one of his third quarter passes and galloped 35 yards for Central's third touchdown. Later, following a 35-yard pass from Bartriner to tight end Greg White, the Cobras aded their final score as Bartriner plunged in from the one.

Central rates 14th among AAAA schools in the latest prep poll, released Tuesday morning, but rating do not concern Farinella as much as the Cobras' next two opponents, Lake Worth-Leonard and Martin County.

"Merritt Island won the state last year, so they are ranked number one," offered the coach. "I've known us to be number one and not be the best team in the state by any means.

"Boca and Satellite had decent passing games, and Eau Gallie was somewhere in between the two of them," he continued. "But Leonard has a great running game, and that should be a real test for our defense. We haven't yet faced a good running team. They (the Lancers) are probably the best team we will have faced, and Martin County the next week will be the best team we'll have faced up to that point."

The Lancers have been the darkhorse team in District 11, the Cobras' old home. They nearly derailed Lake Worth, ranked fourth in the state, three weeks ago, losing just 8-3, and almost upset the powerful Red Raiders of Glades Central, dropping a tight, 25-22 decision. The Lancers unquestionably will be the sternest test, so far, of 1979 for Central.

Game time is 8 p.m.

Former Tiger practiced Monday

McIntyre makes IRCC debut

Ernest McIntyre, the point guard on last year's state high school championship basketball team at Martin County, began practicing Monday at Indian River Community College in Fort Pierce, confirming rumors that he would play for the Pioneers this season.

The Mirror reported last week in its fall preview of the IRCC squad that McIntyre, whose last second shot beat Lake Worth-Leonard in last season's District 11-AAAA championship game, would be playing at Indian River, and not at tiny Salem College, where he had signed to play on a full scholarship.

Apparently, McIntyre's test scores on key college entrance exams were not high enough to qualify him for Salem, and the guard never made the trip, electing to stay home and go to IRCC.

"He never actually went up there," said Mike Leatherwood, the Indian River Head Coach, who last week described McIntyre as "icing on the cake" on a very strong Indian River squad this years.

If McIntyre had registered at Salem, then transferred to Indian River, he would have been ineligible to play any sport for a year.

The only problem at IRCC for McIntyre has been transportation. He lives in Indiantown, and since the school's Activities Bus leaves the Fort Pierce campus at 3:30 p.m. en route to Indiantown, he could not stay for practice. But that problem has been solved, and McIntyre seems ready to assume his role as a Pioneer.

Panthers bump Barracudas, 12-2

BARRACUDA ON THE LOOSE- Billy Pecci gallops around the end during last week's Jensen Beach-Port Salerno Lower Division junior football game at Port Salerno. The Panthers beat the localers, 12-2, as Herbert Mouton scored on runs of 34 and 45 yards. The Barracudas meet Port St. Lucie in their home opener at Langford Park this Saturday night, beginning at 6:30 pm.

Nobody could hold onto the football.

That seemed to be the theme of last Saturday night's Lower Division, Martin County Junior Football League game between the Jensen Beach Barracudas and the Port Salerno Panthers. Worse yet, most of the fumbling fever occured in the first half before the rains came in the second half, hampering both offenses.

But in the end, a pair of breakaway runs by Port Salerno running back Herbert Mouton was the difference, as the Panthers won their first game of the year, 12-2 over the winless localers.

Seven times in the first half the football was turned over due to fumbles suffered by the participants - four by the Barracudas and three by the Panthers.

In between, Port Salerno quarterback Julius Graham was sacked in his own end zone while trying a rollout pass, giving Jensen Beach their first points of the season and a 2-0 lead.

But moments later, with 3:30 remaining in the first period, Mouton, who gained 59 yards on six carries in the first half before the rains made it impossible for the statisticians, rambled around left end and travelled 34 yards for the Panthers' first half only first half strike. The extra point failed, and Port Salerno led, 6-2 at halftime.

Quarterback William Massey directed a quick drive early in the second half, but the Barracudas were stopped at the Panther 28-yard line. Later, Mouton took a handoff from Graham and scampered 45 yards (in Junior Football, the 40 is midfield) for the game's final score.

The Barracudas (0-2) face Port St. Lucie in their home opener this Saturday night. Game time is 6:30 p.m., with the Upper Division game to follow.

UNHAPPY (AND WET) COACH- Herb Seal, the Head Coach of the Jensen Beach Razorbacks Junior Football League team, looks on as his squad plays the Port Salerno Panthers, at Port Salerno last Saturday night. The locaters lost, 7-6 when they failed to convert an extra point after a touchdown, giving them their second loss in two starts. Seal hopes to improve on that this Saturday night (6pm) when the Razorbacks make their home debut at Langford Park against the Port St. Lucie Saints.

Missed point foils Razorbacks, 7-6

BY DONNIE WILKIE

In pro or college football, its a rare occurance when any team misses an extra point, although it can be argued that it is no longer an "automatic" play.

But when, in junior football, where they must try for the point with a regular scrimmage down, a team loses a game only because of a missed extra point...

... It hurts!

That's just what happened to the Jensen Beach Razorbacks Upper Division, Martin County Junior Football League team last Saturday night in Port Salerno, where they dropped their second straight game of the season, 7-6 to the undefeated Panthers.

It was Greg Armstrong who broke loose on a 48-yard end sweep in the second quarter, giving Port Salerno a 6-0 lead. Then, Cleve Brooks dove in for the extra point, a point that would haunt the Razorbacks later.

Although they moved up and down the field all night, the Jensenites couldn't score until late in the third quarter, when Dwayne Straushaugh busted into the end zone from the one-yard line. However, Jensen Beach's extra point attempt was foiled when Straushaugh, running the ball on an identical play (offtackle to the left side), could not push his way across the goal line.

"I'd have to say I was pleased with the way my team played," said Johnny Dotson, the Panther coach who last won a league championship in 1976, when he coached the Lower Division Port Salerno team to a championship victory over Indiantown.

"They got a little tired toward the end of the game, but they had to play both ways and on special teams because we only have 13 guys on the team."

Port Salerno could have drawn first blood in the first quarter, but a roughing the kicker penalty nullified a 37 yard punt return for a touchdown.

Participation up in Sandpiper men's golf

Participation in weekly events of Sandpiper Men's Golf events should be reaching maximum entries with the constant return of members who have sojourned north for the summer months. The event which proves most popular with the Sandpipers is the Individual Stableford setto which will be contested Thursday, Oct. 4th on the Championship Sinner's course.

Following a hiatus of three weeks due to bad weather conditions, the Sandpipers returned to action in somewhat abbreviated play on Sept. 20 and 27th touring the Sinners layout.

In the Best Ball partners event it took a match of cards to learn that the team of Bob Morrissey and Bill reick waltzed to first place over Jim Docos and Bert McDonnell. Each team scored a best ball of 64.

Tom Chapman and Bill Muller snared third with 65 followed by Vin Metzger and John Schawitz with 66. Deadlocked at 67 were the combos of Norm Nardone Dave Kennedy and Joe Corsello and Tom Francoline. Low gross honors for the day went to Tom Chapman with 81 while Bert McDonnell captured the net award with 69.

The team of Ken Beckman, Joe Monty, Harry Kessler and Tom Chapman came out of the "chute" winging to a five stroke edge over their closest rival in Thursday's Two Best Ball of Foursome contest coming in with a count of 131 n second at 136 were Cal Heathman, Bob Klinedinst, Vin Metzger and Carl Staruch.

Jim Oram, Bill Vroman, Fred Carter and Al Bowman took down third with a 138 tally, while individual plaudits went to Jim Oram with a low gross of 80 followed by Low net shooters — Bill Kelso, 69 and John Schwartz, 70.

Oestreich wins football contest — again!

BY DONNIE WILKIE

In most high school and college sports, five out of seven is quite good. A team with a 5-2 record is usually regarded as a tough opponent, but often five out of seven is just not quite good enough.

But in the case of The Mirror Newspapers, Inc. Football Contest, running weekly in both editions of The Mirror, five-out of seven was in fact good enough — good enough to win Terry Oestresch of Jensen Beach the first prize of $25 for the second week in a row.

It is unusual for anyone to win any football contest twice in a row, but consider Oestreich's employment on Friday nights.

He is a high school football referee.

"I've pretty much seen all the high school teams play, and I think that's what may cause people some problems," he said. "Picking the high school games is difficult."

Especially when most of the entries received are from Martin and St. Lucie Counties, where many fans pick Martin County, Fort Pierce Central and Westwood merely because they are the local schools.

Even Oestreich stumbled when it came to Martin County last week, as he opted for the Tigers, who were beaten 28-6 in the Citrus Bowl. He also watched his Miami NY Jets selection, the Dolphins, falter, losing 33-26.

But don't give up!

Keep trying to win the contest. Simply fill out the small, easy to handle entry form adjacent to this article and send to:

The Mirror Football Contest
P.O. Box 787
Jensen Beach, Florida 33457

Remember, you don't even have to be a diehard football fan to enter The Mirror Football Contest.

You just have to be correct.

ratified, while 59.4 per cent said they were opposed.

And, Bafalis said, the district displayed virtually solid opposition to continuing foreign aid in the present manner. Only 6.6 per cent favored continuation, while 32.1 per cent called for ending the entire program.

The biggest response, however, —40.6 per cent—called for limiting U.S. aid to military assistance to nations vital to our protection. Another 20.7 per cent said they favored limiting aid to economic assistance.

Here at home, 10th District residents are more than 4-1 in favor of calling a Constitutional Convention if the Congress fails to act promptly on Constitutional Amendments to man date a balanced federal budget every year — similar to the one Bafalis has been proposing since coming to the Congress.

In addition, district residents are overwhelmingly in support of legisla tive proposals to give the Congress veto power over rules and regulations proposed by the various federal agencies. Some 75.5 per cent said they would favor such legislation as a means to insure more realistic regulations, while only 24.5 said they were opposed.

On the question of using federal funds to finance House and Senate campaigns — in much the same manner as the 1976 presidential campaigns were funded — 10th District residents are adamant in their opposition. Less than 20 per cent — 19.2 — said they would support such a move, while 80.8 per cent said they wouldn't.

In fact, Bafalis noted, opposition to federal financing of Congressional campaigns is even stronger now than it was two years ago when first suggested. In the 1977 questionaire, some 21.5 percent of the respondents said they would approve federal funding.

10th District residents also over-whelmingly favor a single national primary to take the place of the present method of selecting each party's presidential contender and abolition of the Electoral College.

More than 82 per cent said they would favor a single national primary, while 78.6 per cent said they were opposed to retention of the electoral college.

In announcing the results of the questionnaire, the seventh sent out since his election in 1972, Bafalis thanked the thousands upon thou sands of residents who took the time to take part in the annual opinion sampling.

"This year more than 380,000 questionnaires were sent out," Bafalis said. "The 48,888 total responses really represents an excellent return for a mailing of this nature."

"And I wish I could personally thank every resident of the 10th District who took the time to think about the issues and mark the questionnaire. This serves as an extremely important key to what the people want and how they'd like to see their government act," the Congressman said.

Barbershop Singers plan Guest Night

Wanna sing?

The barbershop singers of Martin County will hold a membership recruitment Open House Monday evening, October 15, at the Stuart Woman's Club at 8 o'clock. Guests will be introduced to the popular American art form of four-part harmony and invited to sing along with the Martin Mariner chorus.

There will be entertainment by two chapter quartets, The Elk Tones and The Castaways and a mystery guest quartet. The Mariner chorus, under the direction of Rick Neilson, also will perform and there will be light refreshments. Wives and sweethearts also are invited.

The Martin County chapter is part of the largest men's singing organization in the world.

All men in the Martin-St. Lucie county area are invited to join with the local chapter at the Women's Club open house. Younger men, active in the business community, are especially welcome.

Epilepsy group names officers

The Epilepsy Tri-County, Inc., is beginning the fall season with a new president and a new executive director. They were chosen at the September meeting held at Indian River, Community College.

Mrs. Vee Warren was elected president. The new executive is Mrs. Virginia Sines.

Other new officers are: Mrs. Frances Sevier, first vice president and treasurer; Mrs. Mary Fife, second vice president, and Mrs. Helen Snodgrass, secretary.

The forum is an outlet for those in the tri-county area to express their needs, for families including members affected by the disease. Meetings are held on the first Monday at 8 p.m., in the IRCC administration building, room 206 A.

Insurance firms at last 'seeing light'

Area insurance companies are at last beginning to take a deep breath as they come out from under the thousands of claims resulting from Hurricane David.

A survey of seven companies serving the Jensen Rio area shows that, for the most part, claimants are satisfied with the service they are receiving from the companies with which they have their property insured. There have been some disgruntled customers, all of them admit, but for the most part, the gripes have been from people who thought their landscaping was insured.

"Some people thought their trees were covered, and they weren't," a spokesperson for Hartman, Tilton and Wilson said. "There just isn't any coverage for trees and debris."

The hurricane, which seemed to have a particular appetite for restaurants and mobile home parks, cut a wide swath through Martin County's many mobile home villages, ripping apart screen rooms and pool areas, and de-roofed at least two major restaurants.

The claims piled in so thick and fast that the personnel of all the larger insurance firms were up to their ears in the paper work involving the countless damage claims.

Every one of the homes and businesses with damage first had to be examined and evaluated by insurance adjustors.

"We brought in adjustors from all over the state," the HTW employee said. "They worked closely with a local contractor (Joe Bocchino) to make the estimates. They were out there two days after the storm. For a while we had constant phone calls, and we all worked overtime for days. But it's beginning to slow down now, and more checks are coming in every day. It's slowed down now, but people are coming back from the North, and there'll be more. People are being gracious and patient, and considering the amount of damage, we can't be too upset over the number of gripes we've had."

Gary Rounsaville of Crawford and Company said his firm had "in excess of 1,000 claims," mostly involving house roofs, trees falling on cars, and water damage.

"It's been pretty hectic," he said. "We all worked overtime and on weekends, and people are now beginning to ask 'where's my money?' On the whole, people have been satisfied with the estimates."

Those who weren't happy and demanded a re-estimation have had the scales re-weighed in their favor.

"It's better to pay a few extra bucks and get rid of them," he said.

But the end is still not in sight.

"There's still an influx coming in," said a spokesperson for the Rick Carroll Insurance Agency. "Many were up north when the storm hit. We've had letters asking for a delay in appraisal until they get here."

The Carroll office also had "a tremendous amount of claims." They brought in adjustors from all over the country.

"I can't speak highly enough for the adjustors, she said. "They went out in the rains and up on roofs, and the girls worked overtime. We had a mountain of paper work."

One of the smaller agencies contacted, the Jack Raisch Insurance and Tax Shelter Center, indicated they have the storm claims pretty well under control now. To date, they've had only 34 claims, "but we're still taking them," a representative told The Mirror.

In the main, those homeowners served to date have expressed satisfaction with the opinion of the adjustors.

"We had a couple of disgruntled people who thought they were covered but they weren't," she said.

Nationwide's recently established office in Port St. Lucie couldn't give even a ballpark figure on the number of claimants.

"Our claims office is in Orlando, and our customers file directly with that office," the spokesperson said. But the claims still aren't all filed yet.

"We're not completely settled yet," she said.

It's nice to believe

BY CATHIE FARAGO

Tuesday, October 2nd, was the Feast of Guardian Angels, and many churches throughout the community held mass to commemorate the occasion. However to most, it was just another day filled with the same routines and obligations.

If the feast went unnoticed, it seems guardian angels do not. In our present computer age filled with mathematical equations and depressing newscasts, there remain those who still believe in a soul; perhaps not complete with wings and halo, but nevertheless a soul who has their best interest at heart.

Nina Ziegelhofer, a secretary for Rev. Clark Thompson of the Trinity United Methodist Church, says that although she's not that religious, there have been too many close calls for her not to realize that guardian angels do exist. When asked by an Ocean Breeze Park neighbor if she was afraid during the recent hurricane, she replied, "No, I work for God. He'll take care of me."

Sheila Lewis, who works at Jensen Beach Elementary school, also believes in them. "It's nice to believe in things like that. When people lose their childlike belief, there isn't much point," she said.

The church, understandably, maintains this belief. According to St. Joseph's pastor, Father Morgan, there is a questioning spirit nowadays, which is good, but we still must learn to take a lot of things on faith.

Disbelievers remain however. Some, when asked how they felt, replied that guardian angels are only a myth, propagated by and for the church. Alas, even the Mirror's eternal skeptic, Bob Fryer asked where he had to register to get one. Despite Fryer's skepticism, the Mirror employees still have faith in guardian angels. We have to — who do you think helps get the paper out each week.

Chamber may hike membership dues

Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce directors discussed the possibility of raising chamber membership dues from $50 to as much as $75 a year during their meeting at the chamber office Monday night, but won't make a final decision at least until next month.

Dr. Stan Wampler brought up the idea, saying he didn't like the idea of raising the dues fee, but adding that it might be necessary if the chamber expects to provide more services for area businessmen.

He said he was just "tossing out the idea" of raising the dues from $50 to $60 for discussion, and that it should take some consideration before any final decision is reached.

One board member said the last dues increase, from $35 to $50 a year, came around 1973. He pointed out that inflation has taken a heavy toll since that year.

Fred Nettere commented, "To get something done, you're going to have to pay your way," while Art Hansen cautioned directors they should be ready with a list of things they plan to do with the extra money if they hope to get acceptance of higher dues from members.

While discussing what the extra revenue would go for, directors noted that the July 4th fireworks display cost around $4,400 last year and is expected to cost around $5,000 next year. And, Wampler noted there is far less money in the fireworks fund for next year's display than there was at this time last year.

Helen Richardson, chamber secretary, noted that "we need to paint and fix-up the building."

Wampler said some of the extra revenue should go toward promoting the chamber and toward providing more activities and programs of interest to local merchants.

One director said that with the way inflation has gone, the rate might ought to be set at $65, so another increase would not have to be sought the next year. Still another director said he felt a $75 dues fee would be accepted by most merchants, provided they are shown they'll get something worthwhile for their membership dues.

It was decided that directors should mull over a possible dues hike during the month and that at next month's meeting it could be discussed again. In the meantime, Wampler said he would check the by-laws to see what procedure is required for a dues increase.

In other action Larry Durance reported that county officials have inspected the downtown area and that it looks like two changes to the traffic pattern will be made soon. One will be to eliminate left turns from the northbound lane of Indian River Drive at Commercial Street and the other proposed change is to eliminate left turns from the eastbound lane of Commerical onto Palmetto Avenue. "That means people will have to go around the block to get to the Post Office if they're coming from that direction," Durrance said.

As for one-waying a portion of Commercial Street--a plan discussed at recent chamber meetings--it looks like that won't be happening anytime soon, due to the need for a change in traffic signalization.

It was noted during the meeting that about 34,000 of 35,000 resort and fishing guides have been distributed this year. Work is now underway on a new edition of the guide.

A party for all chamber members is planned to be held after the director's meeting on Nov. 11. It is to start around 9 p.m. At the November meeting, new officers and directors will be nominated and voted upon. The annual installation dinner is set for Dec. 14 at the Holiday Inn in Stuart.

Chamber seeks solution to erosion

Although Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce directors want to have Hurricane David erosion damage to the Jensen Causeway repaired, they're not sure how to go about finding the solution.

Art Hansen noted that about 500 feet of the causeway sustained erosion damage and suggested that the chamber directors adopt a resolution asking the county commisaion to fix the damage.

However, Gene Greenwood of Florida Institute of Technology said FIT currently is participating in two programs to study erosion to the Jensen and Stuart causeways. "The problem is, at this time, nobody has the answer" as to how to stop the erosion, he said.

After Greenwood outlined what role FIT is playing in the studies, Chamber directors decided to have Greenwood get in touch with the person at FIT who is in charge of the studies. That man is then to meet with County Commission Chairman Frank Wacha to discuss what is being done and what might be needed in the way of an erosion remedy.

A VIKING CRAFT well over 100 years old was used to carry an ornery-looking bunch of Norwegians to shore at the Jensen Beach Causeway Sunday. The crew reenacted the legendary landing of Leif Erikson in North America about 1000 years ago. Hundreds of members of Sons of Norway lodges throughout the state, as well as many non-Norwegians, gathered at the causeway to celebrate Leif Erikson Day. For story and more photos, see page 15.

Square foot rent varies in Jensen

The basic cost of running a business -- the rent rate -- varies widely in the Jensen Beach-Rio sector, a survey taken this week shows. But it is considerably cheaper here, on the whole, than in surrounding areas.

On the whole, the per-square-foot rental depends largely on the location, the condition of the building the conveniences like central air conditioning. Within any given shopping center, it also varies with the size of the shop or market involved. The favorable rates seem to go to the ones with the largest floor area.

The footage rates within Jensen Beach range from $2.41, the lowest figure, to $7.40, with the average being in the $4 to $5 bracket.

The low rate of $2.41 per month per square foot is paid by Robert Mayer of the Tiger Touch, located in the corner of the Ricou Building at Commercial and Palmetto.

"That includes the shop and all the space in back," Mayer said.

The highest in town is paid by the tenants of a small shopping center owned by real estate woman Dorothy Daum, who says her square foot rate is $7.40. The little business complex includes her real estate office, a restaurant and a barber shop.

Bob Epp, owner of the new Zia Stella restaurant in the Commercial Shopping Plaza, told The Mirror that he is subletting from another party, and he is paying approximately $4 per square foot.

Irene Johnson, owner of the Wicked Wahini in the same plaza says she went in on a five year contract when the center first opened, at a rate of $3 per square foot.

"I'm sure it's much more now," she commented.

In the Jensen Beach Plaza, which includes the Winn Dixie Shopping Supermarket, the smaller, independently owned stores are paying approximately $4.50 per square foot, according to Pete Rufo, owner of Greek I liquor store. The price the chain stores are paying in that center was not available.

The new and larger facilities on Jensen's periphery are equally divergent. The new professional building at the intersection of U.S. 1 with Commercial Street and the Bessemer Building on A-1-A west of Indian River Drive both charge $7 per square foot, and the Harbor Bay Shopping Plaza rate is $12 per square foot.

It is pointed out that the new and larger buildings include central air conditioning.

Post Office to conduct survey

"Where have you been and where are you going?"

United States Postal Service employees here will soon be asking every tenth customer that question to determine where its new postal stations might be better situated.

In announcing the survey Postmaster A. J. Kovar Jr. stated that postal stations are often the second stop for postal customers and we want to make sure that our Stations are not off the beaten path. In the past, the major consideration in locating postal facilities was where we could get the cheapest land. The customer survey will begin Oct. 15 and should be concluded by Oct. 26.

The survey, which is being conducted in most major cities and their metropolitan areas may result in more convenient locations for post office outlets and self-service stations. Results from the survey will be computerized. The computer will then analyze the traffic patterns of customers who use postal facilities.

Church features top talent

On October 14th at 4 p.m., the Sanctuary of the Jensen Beach Community Church will be filled with the music of piano, organ and flute and trumpet as a new Steinway Grand Piano is dedicated. The piano is a gift from Hamilton Stiles in memory of his wife Phoebe.

The program of dedication will include musical selections by Chopin, Haydn, Sowerby, Mozart, Beethoven, Chaminade and Demarest. Taking part in the program will be:

Gerald and Mildred Snyder, graduates of the Cleveland Institute of Music, who have given concerts in recital and in radio and television. Their concerts include playing with numerous orchestras and participating in various festivals around the country. The Snyders serve as part time faculty members of the Music Dept. of Broward Community College and Florida Atlantic University, in addition to private teaching and performance.

Ruth Gudeman just recently retired from 25 years of teaching at Juilliard. She was the first woman flutist to give a Town Hall recital in New York City, and toured as Flute Soloist with the Salzedo Harp Ensemble under contract to the National Concert Artists Association for 15 years. Mrs. Gudeman has held first chair for many years in the flute section of the Radio City Music Hall Orchestra, the Chautauqua Symphony, and for then years, the Musica Aeterna of the Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York City.

Roger White, who has taken part in worship services at Jensen Beach Community Church many times as soloist, studied at Juilliard also, and later sang for Bell Telephone Hour and the Firestone Hour and the American Album of Familiar Music. His achievements include a command performance at the White House. He now serves as production manager of radio station WMCF.

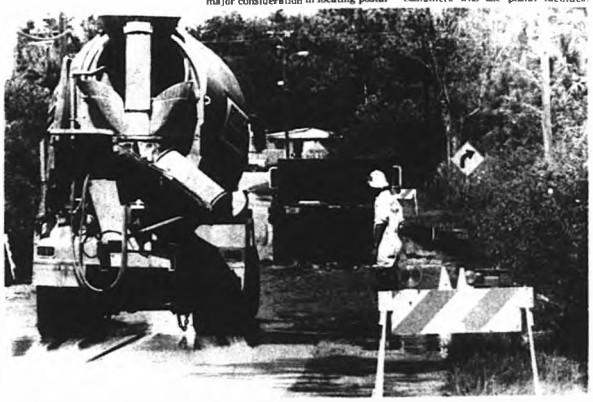
Willa-Jo Mauger is organist at the First Methodist Church, Stuart and is a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music where she studied with Mme. Karn Dayas, a student of Busoni. She is currently accompanist for the Martin County Community Chorus.

Frieda Paulsen, organist for the Jensen Beach Community Church, held her first position as such at the age of 15. In 1971 she completed 20 years of service as organist and Director of Youth Choirs in the First Presbyterian Church of Allentown, N.J. Mrs. Paulsen studied accompaniment at Juilliard School of Music and is also with the Martin County Community Chorus.

Randy Sonntag is a graduate of Martin County High School and Indian River Community College. He received his Bachelor of Fine Arts Degree from Florida Atlantic and has played professionally with Vaughn Monroe, Les Elgart, and Ray Eberle. Currently he is Director of Music at Jupiter Middle School.

Esther Plyler, Director of Music at Jensen Beach Community Church, is a graduate of Baldwin-Wallace College and Conservatory of Music in Berea, Ohio, and did her graduate work at the University of Missouri and at Westminster Choir College in Princeton, N.J. Her choral experience has been that of organist-choir director at the Union Church of San Juan, P.R., choir director at the Second Union Church in Rio Piedras, P.R., director of the Interdenominational Choir of San Juan, and was member of the Casals Festival Chorus for 15 years. Mrs. Plyler also directs the Martin County Community Chorus and other community choruses in this area.

The program of dedication was written to be both inspiring and enjoyable. The public is invited to attend and there is no admission charge, either for the concert nor the reception following in the Fellowship Hall of the church.



AT LAST—When Hurricane David blew into town on Labor Day, it flooded a small creek on SR 707 a little east of U.S. 1, covering the road with about a foot of water. In the weeks that passed, the creek level receded, but the water remained on the road, causing a hazard to motorists and no doubt causing some damage to the road surface itself. Finally, the Rio Fire Department was called in last week to pump the errant water back into the creek.

THE BENEFITS OF DAVID

by

ALLEN F. BREWER

Young David slew Goliath with a pebble from a sling, King David planned the psalms of praise when he became the king.
Now David of the hurricane's brought blessings in disguise,
It's taught us to be ready when the storm breaks through the skies.

We've learned the wisdom to prepare for things we hope won't happen,
We've learned to "play safe" and trust in faith, with doors and windows battened.
We've learned respect for wind and wave, and floods brought by the rain;
We better know how to prepare when crisis comes again.

But every storm cloud, so they say, comes with silver lining;
Our day is no exception,-when the morning sun is shining.

A fine beginning

The new officials of Florida mergency Medical Services Tallahassee seem to be inging order out of the chaos ey found when taking over nder Governor Bob Graham's dministration.

We found such chaos in the ap over certification of lorida Institute of Tech- ology's underwater emer- ency medical technician pro- ram.

Imagine, 200 students a year oing through a training rogram that is much more ntensified and technical than e state EMT training pro- ram, and not being able to ke the EMT test to serve as olunteers on Martin County mbulances. That was the situation.

It was further complicated y the fact that after several ears of applying for certifi- ation, the application of FIT ould be found in Tallahassee.

was finally found after Mirror articles pointed up the roblem, and state Repre- entatives Chuck Nergard and Doc Myers pressed the EMS ffice.

Myers apologized for the problem, pointing out that the employees in the EMS were shorthanded and were just finding things that had been misfiled, or not filed at all.

"Give them time," Myers pleaded.

They took the time, found the application, and have now begun a good job of trying to right the wrong done to the college.

Just recently, the state administered a test to 21 FIT students. 19 passed, and two others will pass the second taking of the test. The students had just one week to review the material taken six months ago before taking the test, but still did an outstanding job.

The test taken was a "national registry" test, not the legal test in Florida, but which would qualify the students to take the state test later for full EMT status.

It was an important beginning for the state EMS, and shows they are trying hard to straighten out what has been a quagmire of bureaucratic bungling.

The next step is the consideration of FIT's application for certification. Jim Woodberry, who is in charge of the diving program, and EMT instruction at FIT, told The Mirror he was encouraged by state action, and hoped for certification in three to six months.

We than the Florida EMS for its efforts, and wish it a speedy accreditation process.

But, at the hospital

The Martin County Commission is being used as the scapegoat by area doctors in efforts to get "advanced life support" equipment and paramedics on the county's ambulance services.

At present, the ambulances have limited life support systems, using volunteer drivers and emergency medical technicians.

The problem is the cost of advanced life support. The county commission, held by law to a five percent increase in taxes, has much of the money already committed, and little room in the budget for new and larger programs.

It is possible that the state will mandate advanced life support on all emergency systems in the next five years.

Presently, the Martin County system is a good one, with volunteers doing an outstanding job.

We would not like to see a volunteer program, in which the ambulance trip is free to those who must use it, with the strong public voluntary support it draws, replaced by a tax-paid system that would limit the volunteerism and cost more and more as time goes on.

It is possible, with the great number of people who would like to volunteer their services, that the state could implement courses that could bring about volunteer paramedic training. That could reduce the cost of the program and keep the spirit of community service alive.

Fun, but futile

The excerise in frustration gets under way Saturday.

President Jimmy Carter and Sen. Ted Kennedy have made the state a battleground of organization. They have caucused with the 67 county organizations to select delegates to the convention.

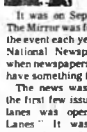
It is now a media event.

Unfortunately, the media seems content to be used.

In the end, someone will proclaim victory, another that the thing really wasn't important.

Then, on March 4, 1980, the state will hold a presidential preference primary, wherein all Democrats will be able to vote for their choice. It is the proper vehicle...and we'll have to go through the whole thing again.

By then, this Saturday's political media event will be forgotten, and the straw ballot would have been blown away by the winds... or should we say hot air.



Dick Campbell

Eighteen years and growing

It was on September 14, 1961 that The Mirror was founded. We celebrate the event each year in October, during National Newspaper Week, a time when newspapers say, "Look at us, we have something for everybody."

The news was most interesting in the first few issues. The new bowling lanes was opening, named "Your Lanes." It was later changed to Jensen Lanes. In the same issue, the foreclosure of the lanes made news, with First Federal of Martin County vowing to operate it until it could be sold.

Plans were revealed to make the Jensen Causeway Park the "recreation center of the area." Commissioner Frank Wacha was developing the park, and announced that the Jensen Lions Club had donated picnic tables and bar-be-que pits, the Jensen Garden Club was beautifying the entrance, and the Lions planned to ship in white sand for the swimming beach. Oh, yes, The Mirror held a contest to name the park. The favorite was "Jensen Beach Causeway."

The Town of Ocean Breeze Park was named Precinct 14 by the supervisor of elections.

Ten acres south of the Port St. Lucie development was listed for $850, and an Indian River Drive home, with garage, and 120' by 238' deep lot was $13,800. Hutchinson Island land was selling, ocean to river, at $165 a foot.

There was a new ski jump almost completed for the causeway park, with donations from Frank Forsberg, Porter Lumber, Ed Peckelis, Ron Weiss, Buck Hendry and HC Hoffner.

Newsboys for The Mirror included Billy Profitt, David Heaton, Ricky Dailey, Gary Crowder, Chris Bohner, Greg Hall and Raymond Bowdn.

Talk about a low budget operation, on the front page of the 12 page edition was the "notice" that since The Mirror office was untended all day, persons should call news in after 6 p.m.

A nine-inch pizza at Poor Bob's cost a dollar.

Frances Langford's Outrigger was nearing completion, and advertising insisted it would not be a private club.

As construction was under way to replace the old wooden bridge to Hutchinson Island, motorists already leery of the thumping timbers they had to drive over four a new test, a hump for single lane passage. Remember the wooden bridge?

The Community Church Thrift Shop held a grand opening.

With the old fire house shack almost falling into the Indian River, work began on a new fire house on Palmetto Road.

Sam Rhodes was beginning Legion Heights subdivision.

Elliott Museum was almost ready to open.

The United Fund drive for Jensen and Rio was getting organized, with Bill Weiss, president, E. W. Shipes, Jr., first vice president, Zola Swarthout, second vice president, and Dick Campbell, third vice president and drive chairman.

Langford Park had one ball field, no lights, and the Langford Park Association was running the show. The head of the association was (who else) Vince Bocchino.

Harry Hoke unveiled a beautiful stuffed peacock as the centerpiece of the community building.

The Chamber of Commerce was discussing drainage problems in Jensen Beach and Rio.

The Jensen American Legion post installed a large barbeque pit, picnic tables and a terazzo dancefloor in a newly developed recreation area behind the legion building.

Remember the Ocean Breeze Park marina? It was where Lil Bit Lane is now, and Gene and Dick Hoke were pictured getting their boat ready at dockside.

Commissioner Frank Wacha had begun promotion of South Savanna Road, asking property owners for rights-of-way to permit the road to be built by the county. It was originally scheduled to end up at Martin Blvd. in Rio.

In the first issue of The Mirror, I wrote, "It is a beginning, and with this, we hope to reflect the life of Jensen Beach in news and pictures for years to come.

"The growth of the Jensen Beach area, and the multitude of problems arising from that growth, the increase in our population, and the resultant building activity to house our new citizens, new businesses coming into the community, and the activities of our businessmen...all these are reasons why The Jensen Beach Mirror was formed.

"The Mirror will be the newspaper that our residents can call 'our paper'."

Now entering our nineteenth year, we feel our success and growth has achieved that end, and are proud to still be doing the job.

Sally Latham

My vicarious travels

Ever since I was a homely little girl, my Roman nose has always been glued to the windows of the world. The one thing I yearned for most was to see the castles in Spain, the temples of China, the Taj Mahal.

Catch me in the library at any given time and you'd find me drinking in the pictures of the Louvre, the Great Wall, or the Pyramids. In short, my dream was to travel to faraway places.

To date, the nearest I've come to fulfilling the yearning was a trip to Cancun on the Yucatan Peninsula, made possible for me by dear friends and travel agents Jack and Mary Lee Crain. There I could have absorbed a lot of ancient culture at the digs around Chichen Itza, but I had the bad grace to get sunburn poisoning the second day there, thus was frustratingly confined to quarters during the whole stay. I had to pick the brains of a native traveler to learn what they were all about.

That much for my traveling abroad. I guess, now, I'll never make it in person. So I get my travel jollies by leaping on everyone I know lucky enough to move around the globe or any part of it, with questions of "Where did you go?" "What did you see and how was it?". I never tire of hearing about their exotic sojourns or of looking at their pictures.

Here in Jensen Beach, my best source of vicarious adventuring is found in Art Hansen and his Lovely wife "Bing." The Hansens just recently returned from their fourth cruise to far-flung ports, so I prevailed on them to share some of it with me.

I was especially interested, because about a month ago, I received a card from them, from Poland, and I've become a particular admirer of the Polish people and the subtle ways they have of thumbing their noses at the Kremlin without getting caught at it. They may be communist-dominated politically, but individually, they hold to their independence as firmly as the Yankees did under British domination.

Today's Warsaw, physically, is rather awesome. Bombed nearly to the point of extinction during World War II, it is now an odio of the old mixed with the new, Bing tells me in her report.

"The old part was copied and rebuilt as before," she says, "but there are large condos all over. One is over a mile long, housing 10,000 people."

The travelers weren't allowed in the grandiose new auditorium, which is built to set 10,000. It wasn't open yet at the time of the Hansens' visit and they weren't allowed in.

"We left Sept. 30, and they couldn't make exceptions."

Warsaw is apparently disorganized, when it comes to handling tourists.

"We were constantly being misinformed or not at all," she says. "We were often queued up and didn't know why, but there was always a uniformed person telling us to 'line up here'."

The political unrest could be felt by the outsiders.

Their feeling about the dissatisfaction of the Polish under Red domination proved correct almost under their noses.

"There was an uprising in Warsaw the day after we left -- we could feel the undercurrent."

But it wasn't all tension and depressing.

"This sounds like we didn't have a good time, but we really did, and we learned a lot," Bing comments. "The staff gave a program of native dancing in costume."

The Red oppression isn't quite as grim as it used to be in the past.

"The courier told us they have independent groceries and restaurants, and it is much better," she says. "They are wonderful independent people."

Art and Bing, in the course of their travels have junketed both by air and by ship, and they far prefer the shipboard way to go.

There's not all that packing and unpacking luggage at every stop you make, as you do when taking a flying tour. The ship is home, in every port, Art says.

This time they chose the cruise ship Stefan Batory, which is under Polish registry.

"It is old, but recently refurbished-comfortable and clean, and the food is good and very substantial, though not gourmet."

The Polish crew was a little limited in their English, but very accommodating, Art remarked. The trip was made more enjoyable by the presence of a couple from Stuart and a "handfull of Canadians," who provided the Hansens with English-speaking companions.

"And, at Tillbury, England, 24 Britishers came on for the package tour of Warsaw, which we were signed up for. We had a ball with them -- fun people."

On board, the Captain's cocktail party and the farewell party were delightful, they agreed. But the end of the trip was marred by the death rales of Hurricane David.

"As we neared St. Lawrence Waterway, David gave us a real drubbing," Bing says. "Neither Art nor I were seasick--we just stayed in bed and read, because we couldn't stand up."

This was the Hansens' fourth cruise in as many years. They've been through the Panama Canal to San Francisco, and a second trip from San Francisco to Alaska, and the third from London to the arctic ice barrier.

"We hope to make the next one to Australia," Art says. "We're going to have to pinch pennies, but we're going to try for it."

I hope they make it. I can't wait to hear what it's like Down Under.

Bob Fryer

My second favorite season

There was a patch that was just the bluest of blue.

Below that was first gold, then rosey pink. And below that was a surreal greenish-blue.

Actually the whole sky was surreal. In every portion, there was something appealing to the eye.

The patches of blue were straight ahead and to the right, and were split by a thin strip of golden clouds that mushroomed out to cover most all of the left half of the sky in a dazzling array of golds, yellows and deep pinks.

As the clouds trailed out above and behind me, they lost definition and seemed more like broad, wispy reservoirs of pink pigment, waiting for some gigantic brush to put the color into its proper place.

To the right of the blue patches was a small group of rolled and dappel clouds. Way off to the right was a bank of cumulonimbus clouds that were dull gray, except for the very tops, which were pink.

I viewed the panorama from the end of a long dock in the Indian River. The water was purplish and the sky was framed with silhouettes of palm trees on the ridge above Indian River Drive. In short, it was a spectacularly beautiful sunset; a 9.9 on the sunset meter for sure.

And, though it lasted for quite a while as the golds faded into pink and the pinks to gray, it was still gone too quickly.

We have a lot pretty sunsets in Florida, and they can come most anytime of the year. But it seems that we get more of the breathtaking ones around this time of year, when autumn begins to turn the nights cool. Maybe it's our compensation for not getthg much change of color in the foliage. Instead, we get our color in the sky.

The sunsets are just one reason why I especially like autumn.

Another reason is the cool nights. They're great for sleeping and are a most welcome change after the humid monsoon rains we always seem to get as Summer fades and Autumn begins.

Lots of things start happening in Autumn, even though in the plant and animal world it's when life slows down to brace for the cold of winter.

It's the season for the Harvest moon and for Halloween. And it's the season for the World Series.

By the time autumn rolls around, the kids are back in school, and the civic and social clubs are regrouping for a new year of activity. That means lots more to do around a newspaper, but it's a welcome change after the Summer doldrums.

The pace of life quickens and the town begins to swell in population again as the snowbirds trickle in from up North. The cash registers begin to jingle a little more, and merchants know that happy sound will continue to increase in intensity through Christmas.

It's a wonderful season for picnics because the days are cooler than the sweaty Summer ones and the mosquitoes are beginning to subside.

In short, Autumn is a glorious season.

But there's one thing wrong with Autumn, and that's that it inevitably ushers in Winter.

Now I'm not saying our Winters are so bad when compared to those the crazy Yankees have to suffer through. But for a body that doesn't cope well in conditions below 50 degrees, even our winters can sometimes get too chilly. And it's because Autumn tells me that those cold spells are on the way that I have to pick Spring over Autumn as my favorite season.

However, if we get many more sunsets like the one the other day, I may have to change my mind.

Letters to the editor

To the Editor:

We'd like to express our sincerest thanks to all our wonderful friends who helped out following David's "visit" causing us cabana damages. A special thanks to Walt & Lucille Van Conant of Hobe Sound and Mel & Patricia Flynn, Jensen Beach for phone calls and the long hours they worked. The men, helping get a new roof on between rains and the ladies, including Jean of Lelaini Heights.

And to our many wonderful Ocean Breeze friends and neighbors, which we won't name simply for fear of missing one, you are the greatest! Salvaging our wet furniture and belongings in your homes, patroling the area, doing laundry, bringing in food and dozens of special kindnesses. And thanks to Gene & Ruth for their concern and watch until men could get there from Indiana. And Claudia & Mike for your help and morale support on our trips and 10 day stay in OB. Without all your help our damages would have been much greater. How great to have such precious friends. May God bless you all.

Evening EMT course fills a need

BY KATHY FARAGO

The Jensen Beach Samaritan Center has been host of late to twenty five students, enrolled in the three and one half month Emergency Medical Training course currently being offered two evenings a week.

The course is a result of joint cooperation between Indian River Community College and the Samaritans. Realizing the need for such an evening class, Maxine Bailey, Samaritan President, proceeded to fill that demand created by the many would be volunteers who were unable to attend the day sessions offered at the college.

The students, arriving from all parts of the tri-county area, are of varied ages and backgrounds. Their common trait, however, is that they remain willing to donate their time and, services to the community.

Because of this, ambulance runs in this area remain free to the residents. For how much longer, no one is certain. The area is continually expanding, and at present, Samaritans have had to extend their services to meet the needs of more than 10,000 St. Lucie County people.

The present EMT course is one solution to the problem of recruiting more volunteers. With a subsidy from the county, students attend the free sessions and are lectured in such areas as CPR and ambulance squad routines by their IRCC instructor, Debbie Swigler. Upon completion on December 18th, graduates must successfully pass a February 15th state exam before they can become full fledged squad members.

In addition to the EMT course, Maxine Bailey hopes to initiate a para medic course. Designed to give more comprehensive training than the EMT class, the para medic graduates would further fill a need of the Samaritan Center.

All concerned are optimistic about the outcome of these new measures and continue to believe that with the further support and co-operation of tri-county members, Jensen Beach will continue to keep its services free to the public.

The students participating in the EMT course are: Herbert Agee, Stuart; Kathy Agee, Stuart; Olive Ashby, Jensen Beach; Kathryn Brown, Stuart; Laurence Burdick, Port Salerno; Candy Ezell; Chris Gabriel, jensen Beach; Gary Gabriel, Jensen Beach; William Hogervarst; Robert Kammel, Stuart; Margaret Ladden, Jensen Beach; Elisa Leaker, Stuart; Deborah Lyons, Stuart; Richard Mathias, Hobs Sound; George Morris; Eleanor Parmenter, Port Salerno; James Peters, Fort Pierce; Glen Peterson, Stuart; Nancy Skanal, Ft. Pierce; Joette Smith, Stuart; Randy Springer, Jensen Beach; Debora Sullivan, Stuart; William Topping, Hdiantown; and William Smith, Ft. Pierce.

WHEN IT CAME TIME FOR STUDENTS to practice CPR on the Ressa-Annie, many agreed it was not as easy as it looked

Pioneer motel builder is guest at 'Brainchild'

THE PIONEER - Al Martz, a current visitor from France, stands nostalgically before the sign of the motel he and his wife built - Jensen Beach's first real motel. Since the death of Mrs. Martz, he has been making his home in his native country.

Al Martz, builder of Jensen Beach's first bona fide motel, has been spending several days here, enjoying the other end of the fruits of his own labors.

For the past year, Martz has been living in France, his native country, since the death of his wife. He returned last week for a combined business-pleasure trip, and gravitated to the Jensen Beach Motel.

And quite naturally so. He and his wife designed and built the 12-unit facility in 1951, and lived there for some 25 years.

In an interview with The Mirror, Martz commented on the vast changes that have taken place in the Jensen area since they first came here.

"There was only the wooden bridge, which was famous then for fishing," he said. "There was nothing on the island."

It was the bridge which first introduced the Frenchman to this section of the Indian River.

"My wife had a sister who lived in Salerno," he said. "We'd been looking for a motel, and I came up to the old bridge for fishing. I saw that nice level piece of land, and thought what a nice place it would be for a motel. With all those fishermen on the bridge, I told myself, there must be some who would like to stay overnight."

And indeed they did.

"Before we were completely furnished, with beds in the rooms but nothing else, there were people lined up at the door wanting to stay there," he said.

That was at the time when the motel concept of overnight accommodations was just beginning to hit, in this section.

True, Jensen had many cottages, which people rented by the month or by the season, but Jensen Beach Motel was the first of its kind in the Jensen Rio area. Its big appeal was to the ardent angler who wanted two or three days of concentrated fishing in the richly endowed Indian River.

Martz, a native of Strasburg, France, came to the United States in 1929, "because it was a better country in which to make a living."

An ironworker by trade, he settled in Newark, N.J. He became a citizen of the United States in 1935.

The Martzes, in their 25 successful years in the motel business, came to love both their adoptive town and the people in it. For their retirement, they had just completed building a home on Mockingbird Hill, and were set to enjoy it for the rest of their lives. Then Mrs Martz died, on Dec. 4, 1977.

The widower beat a retreat to his native home in the southern part of France, where his relatives live.

"I would rather stay here," he said, "but I am alone. If I get sick here, they put me in the hospital and forget about me."

Yet it is easy to see, in conversing with him, that his heart is with Jensen Beach and in the many years he and his wife spent as part of the community, seeing it grow.

"Our guests were our friends, people who came back season after season," he recalls. "When we built this place, Poor Bob's was only a little bait place, and there was no road from Stuart to Fort Pierce. It was when they put the new causeway in that things started to develop."

An avid fisherman himself, Martz says the fishing "ain't what it used to be."

"The fishing was great then, 10, 15 and 20 years ago," he recalled. "You could go out there any night and see the snook chasing the mullet. Not any more. I went out the other night and didn't see hee."

When the Martz couple sold the motel, the first new owners were Fern and Dick Irvin, who in turn sold to the present owners Bill and Dee Strong.

"But our prices then weren't what they are now," Martz said. "When we opened, we charged $4 a night."

Firemen's barbeque

The Jensen Beach Fire Department will play host to hundreds of local citizens and to a number of other area fire departments Sunday when they hold a barbeque chicken dinner at the Jensen Causeway to mark the end of national Fire Prevention Week.

The dinner, which will be served from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., will include half a barbequed chicken, beans, cole slaw, a roll and a soda. Fire Chief Joe Luciano promises it will be delicious.

In addition to the dinner, fire trucks from nearly every fire department in the county will be on display at the Causeway.

The Rio department is planning to demonstrate how their "Jaws of Life" device works and the Stuart department will bring its 85-foot ladder unit.

In addition to all the above activities, the firemen are also planning to have a greased pole climb. A $10 bill will be placed on top of the pole and the first climber to reach it will own it.

Luciano said last year about 600 to 800 dinners were sold, and about 1,200 persons attended the event. He hopes that those figures can be eclipsed this Sunday.

School bond issue work schedule running on time

BY BOB FRYER

The Martin County council of PTA presidents got reassurance last week that the school construction projects which are to be financed by a $12.5 million school bond issue are on schedule.

The reassurance came from Superintendent of Schools V. James Navitsky during a meeting at Jensen Beach Elementary School.

Though no groundbreaking ceremonies have been conducted yet, Navitsky said "All plans have been drawn and are in some stage of approval. In the case of the elementary schools, we will start construction so occupancy will be next September. They're on schedule."

The schedule for elementary schools shows that the final, detailed drawings are finished and that the elementary school jobs are to go out for bids in November. For example, the $370,000 project at Jensen Beach Elementary School to go to bid on Nov. 27, is slated for construction to begin on Jan. 8, 1980, and is scheduled for completion on July 8, 1980.

Should the bids come in higher than the estimated construction costs, Navitsky said money will not be taken from one school project for use on another. He said if the bids are high, either design features can be changed or the school board can borrow from funds expected to come from the state for capital improvements. He also said the bond issue money will earn about $1 million in interest which can be used for construction or for furnishings.

The schedule for the middle schools calls for completion of work at those schools around January, 1981.

The last school to be completed with bond issue money is a new high school. That facility is scheduled to be finished around February, 1982, but will not likely be occupied until the next school year" begins in August, 1982. It is to cost about $6 million and is to be located on SR 711, the road between SR 76 and Hobe Sound. The site is west of the Florida Turnpike and is about two miles south of SR 76. Navitsky said the site is high and dry and that only 40 to 45 acres of the 149-acre site owned by the school board will be used for the high school.

After discussion of the bond issue projects, Navitsky spoke about a new elementary school that will be needed soon. He said the school board will soon be selecting a site selection committee, and he said once that committee finishes its work in February, 1980, the site of the new school should be known.

He cited growth patterns in counties to the south of Martin and said the pattern is for the areas east of U.S. 1 to become increasingly filled with older residents, while families with children settle west of the highway. He commented that he felt the school should be located "west or southwest" of U.S. 1.

When the new elementary school came up for discussion, Susan Merritt, president of the Jensen Beach PTA asked Navitsky what plans were being made to relieve overcrowding at Jensen Elementary. She noted the school has a capacity for 750 students and is currently housing 818 students.

But Navitsky told her "you don't have an overcrowded school" and he predicted that in the next five years, the population of the school would decline.

She disagreed with that analysis, saying that in recent years Jensen Beach has had a rapid rise in the population of young families.

Though she tried to pin Navitsky down on a figure which he would consider as "overcrowded" for the school, he did not specify a number. And, he said with Parker Elementary showing no growth in recent years, if Jensen Beach Elementary gets two crowded some students may have to be reassigned to Parker Elementary in the next school year or so.

The bond issue construction at Jensen Beach Elementary School includes a primary class complex. However, the new construction will only mean a gain of two portable classrooms, says Merritt. She explained that the new class complex would free a portable now used by kindergarten students and allow a special education teacher to move out of a conference room into a classroom. The other space in the new class complex would go for a first grade class and for a music room, which now occupies a portable.

Other improvements coming from the bond issue fund will be a 20 per cent expansion of the library space, expansion of guidance office space, and creation of a storage room-office for a coach.

It's almost time for blues!

BY DONNIE WILKIE

While area rainfall subsided for the first time since August the fishing began to improve, and now, the local fishermen look forward to the winter months and a chance to catch the blues.

That's right, there are people who actually look forward to getting the blues-bluefish, and Martin County houses as many during the fall and winter months as any area.

"Right now, the catches of blues are still spotty," explained area expert Ron Ellis. "The catches reported are only of about four or five bluefish. But within about two weeks, when it cools off and the water temperature decreases, the blues will come in."

There weren't that many reported catches of the fish last week, but some did come in.

John Mastos snarled six blues in the surf at Jensen Beach, using a crocodile spoon; Steve Steele brought in four in the Indian River, using cut ribbon fish; and Jim Gale lined four more, also in the Indian River. He also used cut ribbon fish.

In other catches last week:

Jack Reed and Lou Borek gathered 40 spanish mackrel in two days worth of fishing. They were trolling offshore, using a clark spoon.

Tom Hargrove caught 32 whiting and three pompano in the surf, using cut shrimp; Paul Brennan and son Tommy landed 21 whiting, ten pompano and a drummer, in the surf at the beach, using cut shrimp.

Clarence Karschner pulled in 14 whiting, also in the surf, using cut shrimp.

Charlie Areni, absent from our report for a couple of weeks, came back strong with four pompano and three whiting, fishing in the surf and using cut shrimp.

Irv Fisher snarled nine channel bass and two snapper, while fishing in the Indian River. He used the brand new gold Tony spoon, which was discussed in this column a few weeks ago.

Area fisherman are discovering the spoon to work quite well, and have made some fine catches with it since its appearance on the market.

Jack Prell and Walt Mielke boated two snook and five channel bass, using a mirrolure and fishing in the Indian River.

Ed Wagner and Pat Patterson bagged 23 trout and a seven channel bass, in the river using Gold Toby spoons and trout touts. Scott Gallivan also bragged of a nice catch, as he, along with our expert, Ron Ellis, caught three snook and a channel bass. The duo were located on the Jensen Causeway Bridge, and they used live shrimp.

Finally, Craig Page grabbed an eight and three-quarter pound flounder, in the Indian River using a mirrolure.

Weather-wise, the week was much improved, with the tremendous rains letting up long enough for even some of the biggest puddles to all but evaporate. It's been a long time since we've driven on TOTALLY dry roads.

Here's the list of high and low temperatures for last week, including the daily rainfall and a list of tide times for next week at the St. Lucie and Fort Pierce Inlets:

'End of Hunger' run here this Friday

BY DONNIE WILKIE

World Runners, a club based in Washington, D.C., has a message to give the United States Congress, and this week, it will get its message across - with a little help from its friends.

Members and non-members alike will participate in a nation-wide run which will raise money for the purpose of stopping the world's hunger.

The run, billed as the "End of Hunger Run II," begins today (Wednesday) in Key West, and should if still on schedule, pass through Martin County, along US 1, on Friday afternoon.

Port St. Lucie residents will also get a view of the relay runner, hopefully sometime around 6:15pm Friday.

The run will continue through St. Lucie County and up the East Coast of the United States until the final runner meets the final runner from an identical run (which starts in Eastport, Maine Saturday) at the nation's capital at 2 pm, Thursday, October 18.

The two runners will deliver a message to Congress and to each member individually. It reads as follows:

> Twenty-eight people died of starvation each minute we carried this message to you - more than 300,000 during this run. The truth is that hunger persists not because we can't end it, but simply because we haven't. The time has come to end hunger and starvation forever.
> Every step we took in delivering this message to you has brought us one step closer to the end of world hunger. Throughout the run thousands of individuals have contributed their money and energy to organizations dedicated to ending starvation. In order to get the job done, you, both as individuals and as members of Congress, must make the same commitment. Look and see what programs and legislation directly affect the end of hunger and spend your time and our tax dollars on those that work to eliminate this condition.
> We pass this baton to you to empower you to take the next step and to let you know that we are partners with you in ending world hunger.

In addition to carrying the message to Congress, the runners intend to raise $1 million in contributions, with runners contributing themselves and asking for pledges, either per mile or in one set amount.

The runners will pass through Martin County beginning at approximately 2:24pm Friday, when they will cross the South County Line. They will continue through Rolling Hills (2:49), the Coast Guard Station(3:12), Bridge Road and US 1 (3:31), Days Inn Motel (3:54), Cove Road and US1 (4:12), Salerno Road and US 1 (4:27), Palm Beach Road and US 1 (4:53), Colorado Avenue and US 1 (5:03), West Commercial Street and US 1 (5:32), Martin St., Lucie County Line (5:47), Walton Road and US1 (6:05), and Port St. Lucie Plaza (6:25). The run will continue through Fort Pierce at about 7:30pm and should arrive in Vero Beach at 9pm.

Sewall's Point vs. Southern Gulf Utilities continues

Sewall's Point Town Commissioners held their workshop meeting last week to discuss among others, some of the problems recently incurred between the town and Southern Gulf Utilities. Not only has the company been delinquent in their payment of franchise fees, but is now attempting to reclaim past paid fees on the grounds that they are unconstitutional.

The town commissioners were in agreement with their dissatisfaction of the present services and cited numerous examples of the various problems they have had with them in the past. Commissioner Gunther called the company a "Mickey mouse outfit" and asked town attorney Knight to investigate ways in which the town could force Southern Gulf into receivership.

Also discussed during the meeting was the Hurricane David clean up progress. To date, $24,000 has been spent with yet another week of clean up to go. Mayor Gluckler remained pessimistic about federal relief and claimed that the President is more concerned about sending funds to Central America than Southern Florida.

The committee responsible for the South River Road completion project reported that they will be ready by November to file suit against landowners unwilling to negotiate land values.

The properties involved were recently appraised by Hartman at values ranging from $1,250 - $21,375.

Also brought up before the commission was the problem of Indialucie East drainage. Due to the heavy rainfall of late, large portions of the road have been under water, resulting in numerous complaints from residents. Delving into the problem, the commissioners went back to the 1975 agreement between the Town and the Bessmer developer which stated that they would be responsible for area drainable. At tonight's meeting, commissioners will attempt to determine to what extent Bessmer can be held responsible for that problem.

Made it myself hat party is planned

Sun shines brightly on Leif Erikson Day

Little Viking Erik Fortun shares a cornucopia with dad, Carl

While most folks in the country have just gotten finished celebrating the "discovery" of America by Christopher Colombus, in Jensen Beach, it was a Norwegian sailor who was the cause of the celebration.

Colombus sailed the ocean blue in 1492, but Leif Erikson was plying the northern seas about 500 years prior to that when it is believed he "discovered" America.

In observance of Leif Erikson Day, hundreds of citizens, including many with and many without Norwegian roots, gathered at the Causeway Sunday to pay homage to Erikson and to have a pleasant afternoon.

The weather for the event, the ninth consecutive year it's been held here, was perfect.

The festivities included a parade, native music and dancing, a sailboat race, a Viking Queen contest, a bunad (Norwegian costume) parade, and a pageant depicting the landing of Leif Erikson in North America and a skirmish with unfriendly Indians.

Astrid Doxey, last year's Viking Queen, crowned Ethel Sumstad as this year's queen, and it was announced that more than $1,500 was raised for the King Olav Foundation for a cultural exchange program.

The Jensen Beach Fire Department won the award for the best civic entry in the parade, while the Fort Pierce Shrine clowns won the best overall award, the Palm Coast Lodge of the Sons of Norway took second for Lodge entries, and the Gulfstream Lodge won the award for the best lodge entry.

Bjarne Eikevik won the sailing competition, and State Rep. Chuck Nergard did a commendable job on narrating the pageant even though he didn't get the job assigned to him until 2 a.m. Sunday.

Hundreds of members of Sons of Norway lodges from throughout the state attended the event, and, judging from the smiles on their faces, the celebration was a huge success.

Least the poor Indians be forgotten while attention was focused on the man who "discovered" America, it should be noted that in the pageant, it was the Indians who won the battle and rebuffed the sailors from Norway, thereby making it possible for an Italian Sailor to come along in 1492 to "discover" the place all over again.

Phillips of 24 yards made it 7-0, the Cobras recovedred a fumble and marched in for their second touch down, as Luther Sandifer recovered a fumble in the end zone, giving the home team a 13-0 edge.

Later, after an interception, Leo naird drove for its score, with Robert Schattie connecting with George Jackson for a 5 yard touchdown pass. But Central struck back, as Sandifer pulled in a 37-yard bomb from Barriner, and the Cobras led at halftime, 19-7.

Central quickly turned its first possession of the second half into the clinching touchdown. A 31-yard completion down the right sideline to Phillips set up a 10 yard flick being Peter Barriner to brother Stoney. Leonnard linebacker Mike Pickett got a hand on the pass, but it evaded his grasp and Stoney LBarriner pulled it in for an insurmountable, 26-7 lead.

Barriner completed seven of 17 passes for 140 yards, while being interrepted twice, but some of his passes were on target but dropped by Cobra receivers.

Meanwhile, in Stuart, the Martin County squad was merely getting back on its feet after losses to Lake Worth and Vero Beach in succession. The Tigers, rated as a top ten contender in the state when the season began, had not turned in even one impressive outing in 1979, but they did a fine job in shutting down Boca Raton.

Eddie Davis rushed for 98 yards for the Tigers after switching from defensive back, but Dave Lambert was the catalyst of the Tiger offensive effort.

Due to a death in his family Lambert had not even practiced for much of the week, and Chase intended to use him sparingly, but it baeme evident that Lambert was running through the Bobcat defense with ease. The running back, who was thrust into a starting role when Ricky McGahee and John Bos were lost for the season with injuries, gained 101 yards in 20 carries.

MCHS quarterback David Mc Caughey, following a new game plan which called for little but power running and a few passes, completed just three of seven attempts for 44 yards, while highly-touted Tom Smith of Boca Raton managed nine successes in 19 tries for 116 yards.

The Cobras, by their own admission, are setting after a 22-21 loss to Martin County last year in Fort Pierce. It was the first time any Martin County team had defeated a Fort Pierce Central squad, and Phil Farinella, the Cobras' head coach,was quite unhappy, to say the least, about the loss.

"Martin County is the toughest team we have faced so far," says Frinella. "I don't car what their record is. They have only one weakness and that's tema speed on defense. If we can get our type of offense going good, we should do well. Otherwise, we could get beat."

Fitzpatrick-Potts experiment nearly produces a miracle

...but Saints prevail for 19-7 win

Drained emotionally and disap pointed by results of his first two games, Jensen Beach Razorback Upper Division Head Coach Herb Seal made a bold move last week, designed to inject some life into his sputtering offense.

Fitzpatrick completed just five of 14 passes for 74 yards but with wide receiver Steve Potts, who grabbed four of those tosses, gave Port St. Lucie a scare before, the Saints pulled out a 19-7, come from behind victory.

He's a leader," said Seal in explaining why he made the switch last week. "He takes charge out there and he's one of the finest quarterbacks I've4 seen in this league so far."

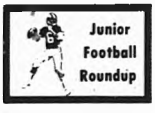
It was a 22-yard pass from Fitzpatrick to Potts that sent shock waves through the crowd at Sportsman's Park as the second half began, and they were soon given a second dose as Dwayne Strausbaugh capped the eight play, 61 yard drive, aided by a pass interference penalty against the Saints, with a one-yard touchdown dive that tied the game, 6-6. Moments later, Fitzpatrick cut off tackle and carried the ball into the end zone himself for the extra point, and Jensen Beach led, 7-6. It was a moment to behold.

But is didn't last long.

"That was the first lead we've had all year," realized Seal. "They might have let up and tried to just hold the lead. It might not have been a conscience effort, but I thinks that's what happened."

The Saints, who had marched down the field in no time flat on their first possession of the night for a 6-0 lead, regrouped after STrausbaugh's go-ahead pibnge, and began a drive of their own, which ended with Curtis Wilson in the end zone for the second of three time on the night.

Early in the fourth quarter, Wilson scored again, topping his runs of three yards on each of his first two scores with a 23 yard burst through a tiring Jensen Beach defense. The next, and final, Jensen Beach possession ended with a fumble at the Port St. Lucie 23 yard line, and the game was over.



Aside from Fitzpatrick's first game heroics, the game belonged to Port St. Lucie runners Jerry Roberts and Wilson. Roberts rushed 15 times, gaining 135 yards, while Wilson added 50 on nine attempts as well as all three PSL touchdowns.

The Saints are 2-1, good for second place behind Indiantown in the UPper Division's Ntional Conference, while Jensen Beach is 0-3 and virtually eliminated from the American Conference race, trading first-place Port Salerno(3-0) by three full games.

"We're not out of it yet," claimed Seal. "I was hoping that Palm City would beat Port Salerno (the Panthers won, thought, 26-6), but it looks like we're going to have to fight for it.

"We played one heck of a game but we lost," continued the coach. "How can you say that much about a loss?

"But I am very proud of my team. We gave them a battle and we didn't roll over and play dead just because it was Port St. Lucie. We played great for three quarters, but then we tired."

Seal confirmed Fitzpatrick as his starting quarterback for this week's game at Suart (it now appears that the game, scheduled for Jensen Beach, will have to be moved due to Langford Park's flooded conditions), saying that if area fans want "to see an aerial display, come Saturday night.

"The ball's going to be flying!

"If somebody had told me, though, before the season started, that this team would be 0-3 right now, I would have told them they were crazya I still think they've got the potential, though."

IRP's Falkenburg scores tennis first in Knoxville tourney

Veteran tennis pro Tom Falkenburg returned home Monday following a victory in the National 55s Clay Court Championships at Knoxville, Tennessee which made him the first player in tennis history to win national titles in the Interscholastic, Collegiate, Junior Vets, 45s and 55s divisions of the game.

Falkenburg, director of tennis at the Indian River Plantation resort on Hutchinson Island, teamed with Buck Archer, of Shelby, North Carolina, Sunday to defeat Warren Drake of Baltimore and Bill Shiver of Newport News, Virginia, 6-4, 6-1, in the finals of the Clay Court 55s doubles division.

Coming just 11 days after his 55th birthday (Sept. 18), the victory followed by 37 years, Falkenburg's winning, with his brother, Bob as partner, the National Interscholastic Doubles Championship at Kalamazoo, Mich. in 1942.

Four years later while Tom and Bob, who was to win the Wimbledon singles title in 1948, were students at the University of Southern California, they again teamed up to win the National Collegiate Doubles Championship.

Following that, the Indian River Plantation pro dropped out of tournament tennis to concentrate on a business career and did not return to the game until 1963. Then teaming up with the late Nolan Touchstone of Jackson, Miss., Falkenburg entered the National Junior Vets tournament for players 35 and over at Shelter Rock, Long Island and, though unseeded, the pair went on to victory. Falkenburg's last victory in the unprecedented chain of wins over almost four decades came when he and Tommy Bartlett of Clearwater, Fl won the National Clay Court 45s Doubles Championships played at Charlottesville, Va. in 1975.

While it doesn't show in the record books Falkenburg also won a doubles title at Wimbledon in 1945. Although the All-England Championships were not played that year due to World War II, a group of English and American servicemen stationed in Britain at the time, staged an informal tournament at the bombed out tennis center, with Falkenburg and partner Eddie Moylan winning the doubles title.

At Knoxville last week, Falkenburg and Archer, who were seeded fourth in doubles, marched to the Clay Court 55s title without losing a set., They defeated Harris Everett of New York City and Bob Bushman of St. Petersburg 7-6 (5-3), 6-2 in the opening round, eliminated Stanley Ford of Knoxville and Joe Probst of Mississippi, 6-3, 6-3, and downed Al Gross of Bloomfield, Michigan and Jack Lafferty of Benton Harbor, Michigan 6-4, 6-4 in the quarter finals.

In the semifinal against the tournament's top seeded tandem, Jay Freeman of Little Rock, Arkansas, and Gus Palafox of Bradenton, Falkenburg and Archer scored a 6-0, 6-4 victory that was a lot closer than the scores indicate. "Almost every game point went to deuce," said Falkenburg, "and we were lucky to get out alive."

Falkenburg, who devotes most of his time at Indian River Plantation to teaching and coaching the resort's teams in local leagues, hasn't played much tournament tennis in the last year. "I began getting ready for the Knoxville tournament about three weeks ago," he explained, "but it wasn't until I played my first singles match that I could feel my game coming back together".

The 55-year old Plantation pro won his first two singles matches, then was eliminated by top seeded Bill Parsons of Altoona, Pennsylvania, 6-3, 6-2, in the third round.

Barracudas chalk up first win

Billy Pecci scored a touchdown late in the third period, and the Jensen Beach Barracudas held off a late Port St. Luci threat, giving the Jensenites their first Lower Division Junior Football League victory, a 7-0 whitewash of the Saints.

Pecci accounted for 25 of the 32 yards in the winning drive, which came about when Port St. Lucie fumbled on the first play of the second half. The Jensen Beach defense took over from there, and turned back a 13 play effort by the Saints as time ran out to preserve the win.

"We've had a lot of mental mistakes," said Frank Fitzpatrick, the Barracudas' Head Coach, after the game. "We knew what we had to do - we just didn't do it right. Tonight the kids just decided they could do the job, and they went out there and did it."

"We could have been beaten," offered Fitzpatrick. "We have a lot of guys playing both ways (offense and defense), and they got a little tired in the fourth quarter. But the boys realized what was happening and they stopped it."

Monday night, said Fitzpatrick, he told his defense that he thought they did "a super job and had an excellent game." The Jensen Beach coach said he felt linebacker Ken Gary was a surprise Saturday night.

"He just played an unreal game," complimented the coach, who also mentioned Toby Townsend, a defensive end, and tackle Pat Turtle as outstanding performers.

When it came to his offense, Fitzpatrick was not lost for words in describing the efforts of his backfield, particularly quarterback William Massey and running backs Moose Hazard and Pecci.

But last week's effort will have to be doubled if the Barracudas hope to derail the red-hot Stuart Hornets this Saturday night. The Hornets became the first team in four years to beat Indiantown in a regular season game Saturday night, when Sam Wesley scampered four yards for the games only touchdown with just three seconds remaining.

"We're going to have a tough time with Stuart," admitted Fitzpatrick. "But everyone's ready for them. We know they're good if they beat Indiantown. But I'll tell you one thing. We won't give them a thing. We feel we can beat Stuart, Indiantown or anybody else.

"The kids know now what they have to do to win," he explained, "and they know that if they don't do those things they will get beat. It's that simple."

...And they all laughed

It's been a while since I last talked to you, but three weeks can make all the difference in the world.

Since my debut in the high school football predicting world, people have been laughing at me, saying things like "I told you so," and "you shouldn't have even tried."

But have I showed them!

After some utterly mediocre weeks of getting my feet wet (some said it was because they were in my mouth), I have rebounded. And now, those same people who said it couldn't be done (they were the same ones that applied for jobs in the Dewey administration) are combg up to me and saying things like "I still don't think you know what you're talking about," and "you're just lucky - wait till you cool off."

How did that saying go? You can't fool all of the people all of the time!

Needless to say, I continued to predict the games even while I failed to publish my now famous "Wilkie Winners," and in the past two weeks, I done, not even those pretenders that take up space in the other newspapers, has been able to cool off my red-hot prognosticable (is that a word?! mind!

Call it what you wish, but no one can argue with my record. After a not-so-impressive (but winning) 6-4, 6-4 and 10-7 weeks, I have chalked up a marvelous 14-2, 13-2 record over the past two weeks, raising my record to an outlandish 51-19 for the season, a staggering percentage of .729.

A 51-19 record in any sport would be nothing short of incredible. I'd be better than the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Baltimore Orioles, but still people would find an excuse.

...If I were a baseball team, they'd look at me and say, "All right, now play the other 92 games."

...If I were a football team, they'd all laugh and say "Ha, Ha. No football team ever plays 70 games in one season, you big dummy."

...If I were a college basketball team, they'd say, "You must have played some tough teams, like Oberdh, Sam Houston State and the University of Florida."

Ha, Ha, Ha.

Others try to talk football, and tell me why I've been so correct. "You must be picking EASY games, like that one last week where Hillsborough beat East High, 32-0."

Well, that just proves that. For one thing, that game was played in Nashville (TENNESSEE!) last week, and secondly, I would have picked East High to win!

Well, anyway, you know how it is on the top. You can't just sit on your past accomplishments. One must continually defend his championship, and that is what I, as of now, intend to do each week.

So here's my list of winners [and losers] for this week:Glades Central over ATlantic by 9; Boca Raton over Forest Hill by 12; FP Central over Martin County by 4 (so much for making friends); Westwood over Newman by 6; John Carroll over at the Westwood game, since they don't play this week; Suncoast over Jupter by 5; Lake Worth over Palm Beach Gardens by 16; Twin Lakes over Leonard by 1 [UPSET!]; North Shore over Okeechobee by 7; Merritt Island over Vero Beach by halftime; Astronaut over Cardinal Gibbbons by 7; Cocoa over Palm Bay by 1; Melbourne over Cocoa Beach by 3; Eau Gallie over Satellite by 12 [which means the score should be 12-0, if Satellite's offense is any indication]; Titusville over Rockledge by 9.

LAST WEEK'S WINNERS WON 14, LOST 2; Record for the season: 51 right, 19 close - .729 percentage.

Indian River Plantation starts new condo

Indian River Plantation has broken ground on $13 million worth of new condominium construction on its 195 acre property here on Hutchinson Island.

Plantation president T. L. "Pete" Nebut, Jr. said work has started on Lakeside, a $7.5 million community surrounded by lakes and the golf course, and will be followed in about three months by groundbreaking for Ocean Terrace, a $5.6 million four story luxury condominium on the beach.

Nebbut said Lakeside, which was designed by Stuart architects Fenton, Hoon & White, A.I.A. will consist of 75 one and two bedroom apartments and townhouses. Ocean Terrace, he said, will house 32 one and two bedroom apartments and will have a private pool, cabana area and boardwalks leading to the ocean.

Prices for Lakeside will range from $78,000 for a one bedroom apartment to $147,000 for the large two story townhouses which feature screened porches on the first floor and open balconies above, according to Nebbut. He said apartments in Ocean Terrace will be priced from $92,000 to $262,000.

Hurricane David and the torrential rains which followed set back Indian River Plantation's construction schedule, according to Nebbut. "While damage to our properties and grounds was not severe," he explained, "it was impossible to work on Lakeside which is just in the beginning stages. We had to wait for things to dry out a little."

Construction of Lakeside and Ocean Terrace will "bring to seven the number of different communities built at Indian River Plantation in the last two years for a total sales value of more than $35 million, according to Nebbut.

"There is a definite trend toward variety in Florida development building," he said. "People are seeking the convenience and freedom of condominium living, but they also want their new, or second, homes to be different from others in the overall development. To date, we have offered more than 25 different floor plans in our seven communities and we will continue to make variety a feature of the Plantation lifestyles."

BACK TO BASICS—The log cabin, well-insulated domicile of our ancestors, is coming back on the scene with all the modern conveniences, thanks to Frank Wacha Jr., and Warner Wacha, developers. The firm is taking on the franchise for the nationwide firm, and will be putting up two "spec" log cabin homes off Skyline Drive. The pre-cut homes come in a variety of sizes and styles.

'Jesus' to premiere October 19

The film "Jesus", after five years in the making, is now ready to be released in NORTH America. It's premiere in this area will be at the Sunrise Theatre in Ft. Pierce on October 19th.

Based on the Gospel according to St. Luke, the movie was filmed entirely on location in Israel. It is reported as being one of the most authentic and historically accurate portrayals of the life of Jesus.

The filmmakers consulted arch aeologists and historians to insure that replicas of first century pottery, clothes and artifacts would be technically accurate. Further research was made to determine robe colors and the kinds of merchants who might have had business in the temple courts.

The crucification in particular required a good deal of documentation in order to make the scene as realistic as possible. Any signs of twentieth century had to be removed in order to make the Israeli site look as it did 2,000 years ago.

The only actor not of Israeli origin is Brian Deacon, a British actor who will assume the lead role of Jesus. "Brian was chosen because he so effortlesaly portrayed the picture of the man Luke handed down to us," commented producer John Heyman. The forty five other featured actors, as well as the 5,000 extras are Middle Eastern in origin.

In addition to its bookings in theatres throughout the world, "Jesus" will later be used for missionary distribution. P roceeds from the film will be used for translating it into other languages in order to make international distribution possible.

JESUS is shown here throwing out the moneychangers in the new motion picture "Jesus" which will premiere in Ft. Pierce at the Sunrise Theatre on October 19th. The movie was released by Warner Brothers in cooperation with Inspirational Film Distributors.

Frank Wacha Jr. is sales rep for Real Log Homes

Frank A. Wacha, Jr. has been named an independent sales representative for Carolina Log Building, Inc., a manufacturer of Real Log Homes.

The announcement was made jointly by Allan F. Pierce, Marketing Manager of Carolina Log Buildings, Inc., and Frank A. Wacha, Jr.

"We're very encouraged by the prospects for growth in the Jensen Beach area," Pierce said, "and, based on Mr. Wacha's role in this highgrowth area, we expect people will be hearing, and seeing, a lot of real log homes in the not-too-distant future."

Pierce said there was a growing trend in the national housing market toward building log homes as primary dwellings and not just vacation or secondary homes.

"Log homes used to be considered fine for only summer vacations, or perhaps as hunting cabins, tucked under a tall pine by a lake or alongside a stream," he said, "but that's no longer the case. The technology of pre-cut log home construction has improved dramatically within the last decade to help make log homes energy efficient and viable, year-round family dwellings."

Carolina Log Buildings, Inc., she added, offers more than 35 different models of pre-cut log homes, including new energy-saving, solar-oriented models.

Carolina Log Buildings, Inc. Fletcher N.C., is a subsidiary of Traditional Living. Inc. Traditional Living is the parent company for six manufacturing companies producing log homes under the trade name of all log homes, and is the national leader in pre-cut log home construction today.

Navitsky sooths NRS fears of Parker switch

BY BOB FRYER

Martin County Superintendent of Schools James Navitsky met with about 100 North River Shores parents' Tuesday in an attempt to sooth fears that their children may be transferred from Jensen Beach Elementary School to Parker Elementary School next year.

Those fears were apparently fed by a comment Navitsky made a couple of weeks ago at a council of PTA presidents' meeting at Jensen Beach. At that meeting, he noted the overcrowded condition of Jensen Elementary, the declining population at Parker, and said students from North River Shores and/or Sewall's Point might have to be sent to Parker in the next year or so.

A LITTLE SQUIRT of the hose worked wonders to turn shy and skeptic children of Small World Learning Center in Rio into big fans of the Rio Fire Department volunteers. Last week was National Fire Prevention Week, and in observance of that, the Rio firemen visited the center to teach the children some fire safety lessons. Shown above pulling the handle on the nozzle of a fire hose is Deborah Whitley. Behind her is John Henry, and in the captain's hat is Krista McRoberts. The firemen are John Enderschat at left and Robert McLendon at right. Inside today's issue of The Jensen Beach Mirror you'll find a story and photo page on the firemen's visit to Small World and a special tabloid section saluting the volunteers in the Jensen Beach and Rio fire departments. (Photo by Bob Fryer)

At Tuesday's meeting, Navitsky asked the parents not to create a polarization in the community by thinking of one school as better than the other. And, he said, "There are no plans whatsoever in anybody's mind as to moving kids and changing (the boundaries of) districts."

He explained that a state survey team will be coming to the county in February to study the school's capital improvement needs, and that it will not be until after that team reports its findings that it would be an appropriate time to consider school district boundaries, if, indeed, there is a need for a boundary change.

Furthermore, he assured parents that if there is to be a consideration of a boundary change, it would be something the school board would do at public meetings, allowing for plenty of public comment. He said the board would have "a couple of months" to consider redistricting, if necessary.

The state survey is to take a week and will include a tour of existing facilities and a review of a map pinpointing where each student lives. Though the survey team's report may take weeks to be printed and returned to local school officials, Navitsky said on the last day the team is here, they will review their findings with him and indicate what their recommendations will be.

Navitsky brought a sketch showing school populations at Jensen, Parker, Palm City and Port Salerno elementary schools and said he feels confident that with those enrollment figures, the team will recommend a new elementary school.

It is upon the team's recommendations that state funds are allocated, and Navitsky said he believed funds would be provided by the state for a new elementary school to be built in three years.

The survey team will recommend a general location for the new school, but a site selection committee consisting of school board and superintendent appointees will do the work to pinpoint a site. He speculated at the council of PTA presidents meeting two weeks ago that the site would probably be west of U.S. 1. And, he said Tuesday that it probably ought to be about equidistant between Jensen and Port Salerno, but to the west of Parker. However, he said elementary school sites at Martin County High School and at Locks Road, just west of the Turnpike, were sites he did not feel would be desirable for the next elementary school.

Navitsky said the school board does not just change districts for the sake of changing districts, and that as a policy, it does not like to make district changes unless those changes will be long term, thus preventing a child from being switched to and from two schools any more than necessary.

When the new school is built, there will obviously have to be some changing of school boundaries. However, Navitsky indicated that if the Jensen Beach Elementary School population doesn't mushroom too much, it may turn out that portables can be used to relieve the overcrowding until the new school is built and that no boundary changes would have to be made.

Navitsky also pointed out that years ago Rio and North River Shores children went to Parker before they were redistricted to the then new Jensen school. "Anybody on a bus is subject to shifting to another school," he said.

Though racial balance at the schools was not discussed at length, there are more blacks at Parker than at Jensen Elementary. None of the parents cited that as a reason for wanting their child to remain at Jensen. One parent said she had heard there was a vast difference in philosophies between the teachers and administrators of the two schools, and at the PTA presidents' council meeting, the change from a school a child was familiar with to a new one, plus the extra time it takes to get to school when the Roosevelt Bridge is up were cited as reasons for opposing a switch to Parker.

"You should not be knocking or comparing other programs because that polarizes the community," Navitsky said.

One parent, who said he had been a teacher in Broward County for five years, said the worst of Martin's schools, if there was a worst, would top the best of Broward's. And, he said, "I don't think if they told us today that we had to send our kids to Parker that it would be the bitter end." His comment brought a round of applause from the audience.

Inlet festival highlights Gov. Graham, mock air battle

A visit by Gov. Bob Graham and his wife and a mock air battle of World War II planes are just two of the many events which are expected to bring a turnout of some 8,000 people to the Stuart Causeway on Sunday, Oct. 21.

The festival, a Treasure Coast-wide venture, is the "second chance" for celebrating the long sought widening and deepening of St. Lucie Inlet, a project for which the county has been seeking government aid for many years. At long last, the present congress has made the money available and the work is already underway to make the treacherous river-ocean connector safe for boaters and fishermen, and usable for larger craft.

Gov. Graham is due to arrive at noon at Witham Field where he will have an opportunity to inspect the WWII aircraft of the Valiant Air Command, a nationwide air fleet which gives air performances all over the country. The planes, later in the day, will stage a mock air battle over the Stuart Causeway where the festival will be underway.

The Festival was originally scheduled for Monday, Sept. 3. The bleachers were up and all signals on "go" when Hurricane David's approach cancelled out the event. This time, since it falls on Sunday, the day will begin with religious services from 9 to 10:40 a.m. Leaders of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths to speak are the joint heirs from First Baptist of Stuart, the Rev. Thomas Zehnder of Redeemer Lutheran Church, Rabbi Mel Hecht of Temple Beth El of Fort Pierce, and Father Gerald Morris of St. Martin de Porres Catholic Church. Calvary Baptist Church Choir will sing, under direction of C. S. Ratcliffe.

Ski team shows and skill demonstrations are among the water attractions, to be conducted by Herman Reitz of Marine Industries Association. The Valiant Air Command, which will be on public display Saturday afternoon at Witham Field, will stage stunt flying exhibits as well as the mock air battle during the Sunday afternoon hours.

People who plan to make a day of it will find plenty of food on tap. The 5,000 pounds of mullet amazed for the originally planned festival have been on ice since the hurricane, at Black's Seafood.

"We'll be thawing out the fish this weekend," Said Henry Crane, local spokesman for the donating Organized Fishermen of Florida. "We'll cook it and see how it tastes. If it's up to par, we'll go with what we have. If not, it's back to the open seas for a new catch."

The Rotary Club of Stuart will play chefs for the fish fry. They'll also be making hush puppies to order, and serving up baked beans and cole slaw. The dinner will be served throughout the day for a minimal $1.50.

The Governor will be at the causeway from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. He will be introduced by County Commission Chairman Frank Wacha, who will also introduce other state and national dignitaries attending the event.

Stage entertainment will fill the afternoon, ranging from disco and rock to the jazz classics. Two of the best known among the entertaining groups will be Lenny Laden and his Galloping Grannies, and the ultra-smooth Big Band Sound, led by professional bandsman Joe Moniz.

One facet of the program history buffs will make a must on their itinerary during the day is the trip to Elliott Museum and to the House of Refuge, the latter having been designated as a national shrine. On that day alone, festival-goers will have free admittance to both attractions. Transportation to and from the two points will be provided by "trolley."

The festival is being coordinated by Ray Navitsky of the Stuart Chamber of Commerce and Doris Sheridan of the public relations firm of Sheridan and Wolfe. Banks, businesses and civic organizations are participating in financing the gala occasion. No tax money is involved. Sheridan has assured the public that it is strictly an all-community effort, and that if money is left over from the donated funds, it will be refuned to the donors on a pro rata basis.

ST. LUCIE INLET—The permanent improvements which are underway at the St. Lucie Inlet (near top of photo) will benefit boaters by providing safer passage to and from the Atlantic Ocean and will benefit Jupiter Island (in foreground) by restoring beach land that has eroded away over the years. A gala celebration of approval of the inlet improvements was planned for Labor Day, but Hurricane David prompted a postponement of the big party until this Sunday. It will be held at the Stuart Causeway and Governor Bob Graham is expected to be present.

Taxpayers urge county to pass plan

The Martin County Taxpayers Association is prodding the county commission to pass the long-delayed, state-mandated comprehensive plan before new development gets out of hand.

The plea came to the commission's attention in a letter written by the Taxpayers' Association president, E. C. Wareheim to County Commission Chairman Frank Wacha, after meetings with Wacha and County Attorney Jack Carmody.

The comprehensive plan, the preparation of which was ordered for all areas throughout the state by the Florida legislature some years ago, will impose controls on zoning and development in general.

Wareheim, however, contends that the commission already has the necessary control under existing ordinances and the zoning code.

"They have all the rights they need now, to dovetail with the comprehensive plan," Wareheim told The Mirror this week.

In the letter, written after full consideration by the Homeowners' Association board, Wareheim suggests that "all growth is not desirable, and many projects and developments should be turned down in order to provide an orderly influx of people and projects, but those projects which impair the health, safety and welfare of both present and future residents should be denied or, at best, delayed until such time as the public factors can be guaranteed for all."

The factors he refers to are potable water supply, sewage disposal, safe and adequate roads, and adequacy and availability of fire and police protection, as well as ambulance service and schools.

The association also favors "impact fees," a proposed assessment in advance to be imposed on new home developments and new businesses.

"All of these new families are what cause the increased expenditure (for the county) yet their annual taxes cannot be adequate to pay the increases of the tremendous costs we envision, and the only answer is to pay their share in advance," Wareheim contends in his letter to Wacha.

Passage of the comprehensive plan is really the underlying factor which will ultimately give the county full control over new construction.

". . . a comprehensive plan is desirable and necessary, that there be no false assumptions on the part of potential developers, and that present residents know of the direction in which the county will develop," Wareheim writes. "In addition, even modest growth in favorable areas carries with it millions of dollars in added economic costs, traffic congestion, and undesirable alterations in the life style that are abhorrent to the majority of present residents."

He added that the board is concerned with safe setbacks for construction on the oceanside and river shores, noting the disastrous example set when a hurricane hit head-on along the mainland of northwest Florida.

Wareheim told The Mirror the Taxpayers Association has no plans for making any special appearance before the commission relating to the issues involved.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,

This letter is to refute the statements of Mr. Frank Braner's letter to the editor on 10-3-79.

Mr Braner has made many comments about the legalization of marijuana which are typical of the uninformed. First of all it is obvious that Mr Braner has never used marijuana because he described it as a mind boggling drug, which it is not. Later in his letter, Mr. Braner asks "how can we control the carnage on our highway when anyone can smoke this drug"? Anyone who has ever had the slightest interest in reducing highway fatalities knows that alcohol is involved in over 50 per cent of these accidents. Mr Braner cannot produce any proof that the use of marijuana has increased the number of traffic deaths simply because none exists.

He goes on to say that if society is to legalize marijuana why not legalize all crime? Really Mr. Braner? this movement is merely trying to stop calling marijuana users criminals, just as society has stopped calling alcohol users criminals, and just as England has stopped calling us colonists criminals.

You are one of many people who think that just because some one writes a law down on a piece of paper that it is good and just. One day some one may pass a law against ignorance.

To the Editor:

Last year there were many times when I drove to Fort Pierce Central High School to pick up my daughter. I was shocked to see children smoking pot on school grounds. Waiting for the bus to pick them up, while school personnel passed them by doing nothing.

Again this year, it is happening. children passing a joint, one to another, toking, as they call it and school personnel doing nothing about it.

During a visit to the Fort Pierce Central High School today, for a conference concerning my daughter's curriculum, I asked why nothing was being done about this.

The answer was "To tell you the truth, school personnel is intimidated. Because the children pass it from one to another even though school personnel have seen them and caught them, the children's parents bring the courts in on it and some personnel have had to appear in court.

Now my question is "Who is running the law, school, school personnel and parents? It is time we parents took on the responsibility given to us at our children's birth.

We went through problems, like any other parents, with our teenager. Because of these, we became stronger, not weaker.

All taxpayers should be concerned. Everyone who cares should stand behind the teachers and school board. Get the schools cleaned up and more educated children will graduate and not receive certificates of attendance, due to illiteracy.

If anyone on the school board is reading this, please be aware that we are for the teachers, schools and children. We, as parents, want you to know that you must stand behind your school personnel as well as we should. Support them when they catch a child breaking the law. How can we relieve the teachers' frustrations? They are being intimidated by students who could care less about education and as a result — everyone is suffering.

If anyone feels the same as I, call me at 334-3388 or write at my address below. Let's see if we can organize and help out teachers teach, principals take less snowdrin, and most of all help our children learn to respect authority and find out what schools are for.

Letters to the Editor:

Does your child attend Jensen Beach Elementary School? If so you might be interested as a PTA Member and as a parent. Take a few minutes of your time and have your eyes opened wide.

In 1974, PTA President Barbara Hendry, was approached by Dr. Robert Schaffer of the Martin County School System, concerning the matter of a Reading Program for Jensen Beach Elementary School. The school was short of funds and could not supply a Reading Lab. However, if the PTA could raise the money and set up a Reading Lab in the school, then a teacher could be obtained. At that time the "Right to Read" Program was created.

With the help of the future 1975 PTA President Carole Selover, special electrical outlet tables, books and reading kits were purchased for the sum of $2,650.72, by the PTA. However, no teacher was hired and the Right to Read Lab was split up among different teachers.

In 1976, Kathleen Grant became PTA President and the number one priority item listed for the school was a Reading Specialist. During that year, there was no teacher appointed.

During 1977, PTA President Barbara Van Pool was asked if the PTA could supply special reading equipment that the school did not have, with the promise of Principal Dale Clark that we would get a Reading Specialist teacher. Her duties would be to help all the teachers and students in all grades with their reading problems.

In the Spring of 1978 the PTA donated the sum of $1,134.05 for the purchase of special reading equipment. In the late Spring of 1978 Mr. Clark announced the appointment of Mrs. Lynn Gladwin, for the position of Reading Specialist. Her qualifications were more than anyone could dream of, she had her Masters Degree in Reading.'

The school year of 1978-79 progressed with the long-awaited Lynn Gladwin "Reading Specialist." Her year was spent teaching reading in the Nurse's First Aid Room, in halls, and in the corners of class rooms, with all the dedication of a Super Teacher!

In August of 1979, at the opening of the school year, Mrs. Gladwin, her books and special equipment were finally moved into a portable class room, where we as parents thought she would be teaching, special reading this year.

During August and September notes came home stating that Mrs. Galdwin would be helping out in the Third Grade until a new teacher could be obtained for the Third Grade. The new teacher arrived and another note came home stating that Mrs. Gladwin would be helping out with the Fourth Grade, until another Fourth Grade teacher could be hired. The Fourth Grade teacher was hired and Mrs. Gladwin was moved to the Fifth Grade to help out. In the mean time the "Reading" portable was consumed by another class.

As of a week ago, I discovered that we now have lost our Reading Specialist, and that the position will not be refilled. Mrs. Gladwin would remain in the Fifth Grade. The state will soon fund a K thru 3 Primary Specialist. However, this position will not include the Fourth and Fifth Grade students. Those students would have the Cirriculum Coordinator, Lou Rizzolo, try to help them with their reading problems, as it was done back in 1976. I well remember seeing Mr Rizzolo helping Fourth and Fifth Grade students in the lunch room, laboring to read First and Second Grade Level books.

Because of our struggle, hard work and donations Jensen Beach got a Reading Specialist. Thereby making it possible for Palm City Elementary School to be entitled to a Reading Specialist. This is because, Jensen Beach and Palm City are the only two elementary schools in Martin County that are not Title I Schools. Title I Schools have Federally Funded teachers and aids to provide small group instruction for children having problems in reading. These classes are in addition to the regular reading classes. Title I, is determined by a factor, based on the Economic Status of the students and families being served by a school attendance area. In other words, Title I Schools are determined by how many Free Lunches are given out in that school. (If and when Jensen Beach School is re-districted, Jensen may then become a Title I School, due to the loss of children from Sewalls Point and North River Shores.) I have been told that there are many children in need of extra reading instruction, and that Jensen's Test Scores are dropping.

I went before the Board of Education meeting on October 2, 1979 and expressed my concern. My question to the Board was, can a School based Management just drop a Reading Program like this? The Chairman of the Board response was, Mr. Clark is here, we'll let him tell you. Mr. Clark said it was being done because of the increase in students.

If we need more teachers and portables, lets get them as quickly as possible. It is a well known fact, that for years we've known about these sub-divisions, and that all these new houses being built, were coming soon. We also know that the increasing population are younger people, families with school age children.

Don't do away with extremely important programs such as reading. I might add, that Jensen has a special Resource Class, it still has it's own private class room, a special Resource teacher and they just hired a part time aid to assist. (Requirements for Resource classes are based on IQ Test Scores that are above average.) What is more important, frills or necessities? It is a definate necessity to know how to read! When Resource children come back to their regular classes from the Resource room they are back, mixing with children who can not read grade level material. This may be another factor to why the Resource child "becomes so bored in the regular class."

If we as parents don't look in with our eyes wide open, what would we know of today's education? If we as PTA members can donate time and large sums of money to our schools and have things like this happen, it makes me do alot of wondering. Raising money, paying expenses, and giving donations of almost $4,000.00 to Jensen Beach Elementary School should give everyone there "The Right to Read."

Soon after I moved to Jensen Beach, one of the experiences which helped make me feel happily at home was an assignment taking me to Elliott Museum.

I've always enjoyed museums, of any kind. They have a way of putting the petty things in my life into proper perspective.

When I was a child, our every visit to my sainted Aunt Dorothy in Washington had to include a day at the Smithsonian, which I had quiet conversations with dinasaurs and Neanderthal Man--where the American Revolution came alive for me, and where I was reminded that the diamond blinking at me from under glass was just a piece of charcoal x-million years ago.

But I was always made acutely aware of the hush-hush atmosphere, and was warned that, as in the library, one didn't speak above a murmur. It was a grown-up world that I was invading, and children should be seen but not heard.

I went into the Elliott Museum still affected by this syndrome, but it didn't last long. The Elliott is a museum with a difference, starting with the warm welcoming friendliness of director Janet Hutchinson and her assistant (now retired) Emeline Paige. A far cry from the long-faced monitors and docents of the Smithsonian, these two showed me an effervescent, humor-filled love of everything with which they were surrounded, and that happy attitude rubs off on all comers to the richly endowed haven of history. They made me want to come back on every slight excuse.

I stopped in for a visit the other day to update myself on the Elliott, because it and the House of Refuge, both of which are listed on the National Register of Historic Places, will be free to the public this Sunday, during the St. Lucie Inlet Festival. And even if you've been through the two attractions run by the Martin County Historical Society before, you should take them in again. Every time you visit, something new that's old has been added.

The fun part about the museum is that it is as much a joy to kids as it is to adults--a fact made immediately evident the minute you walk in. On either side of the main lobby are joys for the very young and young at heart -- a full-scale miniature circus and a whole wall-full of toy soldiers, the latter being the latest acquisition, Janet tells me.

The soldiers, wearing the authentic uniforms of nearly every major country in the world, were given by Nathaniel Simpkins III. Some of them have obviously been well-enjoyed by happy youngsters, peppered with tell-tale teethmarks.

It was a big job, sorting them out and preparing them for the exhibit. But board member Col. James Waldie and Mrs. Betty Misure have made a fantastic production with them. Even the broken ones are utilized -- they're in the "infirmary" on the top shelf.

The Elliott Museum is famous for its unique collection of classic cars, which occupy the entire rear ell of the building. Latest to be added are the steel-topped '57 Cadillac given by Jensen's Ralph Evinrude, chairman of the board of Outboard - Motors Corporation, and Dr. Richard Pennick's classic Thunderbird, bringing the complement to 22. Scattered among them, are antique motorcycles, bicycles, and a fire engine or two.

The "ladies" being conveyed in these elegant autos have been garbed in authentic period costumes, the work of Curator of Costumes Helena Waller, whose photographic memory has recreated in every detail the elegant garb of the past.

Kids of all ages will also delight in the old fashioned ice cream parlor in the west wing, where on special occasions "soda-jerks" Cathy and Billy Childs dish out ice cream cones and sodas to all comers. Sunday will be such an occasion.

That west wing is like a visit to the turn of the century, with its apothacary shop, music store, clock shop, shoe store and doll shop.

The museum, built by Harmon Elliott in honor of his inventor father Sterling Elliott, is more than just a showcase of the past. Director Janet, who has a rich background in running historical institutions, keeps the ball rolling the year around for the Historical Society, in the lively arts. Every month, some distinguished artist hangs a new show in the gallery, and in most cases he or she is introduced in person at an opening cocktail party. Those who visit this Sunday will see the works of Hui Chi Mau, which will give way Nov. 9, date of the annual membership cocktail party, to Swedish-born artist Roland Reinel, now living in Palm City. That membership cocktail party, hosted by the Historical Society, is one not to be missed.

But I'm getting ahead of my story. Just put the Elliott and the House of Refuge on your Sunday must-list, and you'll want to join the Society and find out the rest by yourselves.

The devil made me do it

A practical joke is a serious and difficult thing to set up. I love it.

I started on this one over a month ago. Last year I received an Executive Fly Shooter for Christmas. I keep it in the drawer, taking it out occasionally to have some fun.

It is a pearl handled pistol, very real-looking, with a plastic rod running from the point of the barrel back to the handle. On the end is a bullseye circle. You pull the trigger and the bullseye snaps forward to slap at a fly.

I took it to Chumley's for lunch and showed it around. Travis Campbell asked if I could get him one. I agreed.

It comes in a brown case with fake red satin lining, an attractive thing. When I ordered it, I ordered something else.

I went to Chumley's last week for lunch. I came late, as usual, and Travis was sitting in his customary booth. I presented the fly shooter to him, and he was very pleased. I went to my seat at the counter to wait, the white cannister protruding from my back pocket.

I didn't know who it would be, but eventually Doris Sheridan came in and sat down with Peg Meissner and myself. She would be perfect. After all, she hates my jokes.

She was impressed with Travis' fly shooter, and asked me to get her one. I agreed to send for one.

"Boy, this hurts my pocket," I said, bringing up the can of "Avalanche Shave Cream."

"What is that?" she asked.

I explained that it was a special shave cream that Salli had bought for me from the spa in California. It cost $25 a can.

"It is supposed to be an aphrodisiac shave cream," I said. "My problem is that I smoke so much I can't smell anything."

I waited, and waited. Time moved so slowly the seconds seemed wearing lead boots before she finally said it.

"Oh, let me smell it."

She took off the cap, and pressed the button down.

If I may explain, the can has a trigger that won't close once it is opened. A harmless white foam pours and pours out of the spout until the can is empty.

"Oh, my God it won't shut off," she screamed.

I jumped off my chair, yelling, "Doris! What are you doing! My $25 shave cream!"

Doris was trying to stop the flow with her finger.

"Oh, my! Oh, my! It won't stop. I'm sorry, I'm sorry."

She took a napkin and put it over the can. The napkin began rising above the cloud of white foam.

Have you ever seen a napkin a foot above the hand on a cloud of white, rising rising.

"I'm freezing my finger! It won't stop!"

The crowd was gathering around. The waitresses were petrified in collusion over the never-ending flow of foam.

Doris' eyes were saucers of bewilderment.

I kept yelling about my $25 can of shave cream.

There was a two foot high pile of foam on the counter, and a like mass of foam on the floor as the flow slackened.

By that time I was crying with laughter as she turned to me.

"It's a gag. It's a gag," she said angrily. Her wide eyes darkened, her mouth became set.

"I'll get you for this, Campbell. So help me, if it's the last thing I do, I'll get you for this."

I cleaned up the mess in the midst of her name-calling, and by the time I got through she was laughing with me. I had tears running down my face.

I bought her lunch, and enjoyed one of the finest practical jokes I have pulled. After I left, I understand that someone else tried the can and it had recharged somehow and shot all over the place.

But, as I left, Doris renewed her promise.

"Remember, I'm gonna get you. But, can you get me a few cans of that stuff?"

Police chief flap

The selection of a police chief for the hoped-to-be Port St. Lucie police department is just another in the continuing series of what seems to be government-by-crisis in the city.

The city manager withheld the names of the candidates from the council, to keep the list from becoming public, fearing that if the home cities of the candidates learned that they were applying for a job elsewhere they might endanger their present job.

This has been one of the unfortunate by-products of government in the sunshine. It is unfortunate, but must be a part of the operation. The "game" of government must be public.

The selection process is as important as the appointment process.

It was Boss Tweed who once said, "I don't care who gets elected. Just let me name who runs."

It is also unfortunate that former City Manager Leonard Silvia admitted that his screening and qualifying of the candidates was to avoid making the list public. Though not a violation of the government in the sunshine law, it is a violation of the spirit of open government.

That the city council supports such action, and gave Silvia a free hand in the selection down to the final name that would be submitted to the council, seems to give too much power to the city manager in regards to so sensitive a position.

This follows on the heels of the garbage controversy, wherein the first set of bids were thrown out, the second bid specs seemed designed to allow one firm to take the contract, and the renegotiated contract was one that all three could have bid on.

Through all this Silva seemed to be moving into a position of political strength that, until his resignation, made us wonder who really was setting the policy for the city.

The council seemed to be giving Silva a free hand to do his job. That is good. There should be little interference in the manager's running of the show. But the council also seemed to be abdicating its policy responsibility to Silvia.

Silvia moved with dispatch, albeit secrecy, in making those decisions.

We were heartened by the council's reaffirmation of open meetings in the case of the disaster preparedness board.

...Silvia's departure will give the council an opportunity to reassess the fine line between policy-setting and meddling in city operation.

Leadership is the key to it all, and that leadership should be the prerogative of the elected officials.

Erosion Solutions

Trying to find a solution to the erosion of the Jensen Beach Causeway is one of the many projects undertaken by the Corps of Engineers with the help of Florida Institute of Technology. It is a major project, with far-reaching potential.

But those solutions are a long way off, and the Jensen Causeway is a long way gone. Action is needed now to protect what is already there.

The county commission is hard-pressed to protect the park, as whenever they move they are stopped by the Department of Environmental Regulation or the Department of Natural Resources before they can do anything.

The smell along the west shoreline of the Indian River could possibly be eliminated with the free flow of tidal wash through the west relief bridge. That flow is slowed to almost a halt even in mid-tide wash because of a sand spit that has built up on the south side of the bridge.

The force of northeastern wind-blown storms could be lessened a little with the opening of the bridge channel. Some of the surge would then flow through, instead of stopping.

Giant trees stand uprooted, falling into the river, or backwards across the causeway. The uprooting was created first with the undermining of the tree roots.

The protected area of the causeway is that which is already bulkheaded. The bulkheading is designed to extend the length of the western part of the causeway.

We urge the Martin County Commission to move at haste to re-establish the causeway, get the necessary permits to bulkhead, and bulkhead the remainder of the causeway park that is not bulkheaded. Permits to dredge the sand spit from the west relief bridge should also be obtained and that work completed as soon as possible.

We know that an answer to erosion in the golden grail of study, but the study should be done on the eastern end of the causeway. The community park should be protected now with concrete and steel bulkheading, and the west relief bridge reopened.

Hey, kid, wanna divorce?

In Sweeden, they're thinking about allowing kids to divorce their parents.

I know that's hard to believe, but I read it in a UPI story out of Stockholm the other day.

Right now, it's just a proposal from a governmental committee, but the story also noted that earlier this year Sweeden made it illegal for parents to spank their children. So, who knows what those Sweedes may do?

I know they have a much different lifestyle in Sweeden than here, but what if Sweeden started a movement and it turned out that kids right here in the good old U.S. of A. could call it quits with their parents.

Can you imagine' kids divorcing their parents! What would life be like if that was allowed?

Picture, if you can, some punk kid divorcing Mom and Dad for...

For What? Just where would you start in allowing such divorces? What would the ground rules be?

In Sweeden, one of the ground rules considered in the proposed kid-parent divorce law is "neglect". The chairman of the government committie which is proposing the Sweedish law cited an example of a three-year-old child in a foster home being entitled to a divorce if his natural parents no longer showed any interest in him.

At first glance, neglect sounds like a good ground for divorce, because if parents neglected their children too much, it could literally mean death for their kids.

But with some slick lawyer in divorce court on the side of the kid, the concept of "neglect" could be stretched pretty far. And, the next thing you know, when little Johnny screams for his Twinkies just before dinner, his parents will be jumping up to get them for fear of being found guilty of neglecting their rotten kid.

Now I'm not about to say I was a rotten kid, but I know when I was much younger, there were times when I felt neglected.

I remember once I got so mad I ran away from home. I was about eight or 10 years old, I think, and I have absolutely no idea anymore what it was that made me mad enough to leave.

But I did. I stalked out of the house and went down the street one block to what kids called "the little woods".

It wasn't much of a woods. It took up less than a block of our neighborhood and consisted more of underbrush than trees.

There was a bigger woods down the street, but I was too scared to venture into them by myself because of the snake stories my older brother had told me. So, I choose the "safe" woods as my new home away from home.

I hid out for what seemed like about four hours, though I suspect it was more like half an hour. Then I tired of life on my own and returned just around dinner time. (What better time to play the role of prodical son?)

When I got home, I found that my Mom hadn't even missed me.

Boy, was that ever humiliating. And maybe in the hands of a sharp attorney, it might have even been grounds for divorce, provided kiddie divorces had been legal in the days of my childhood.

But I'm glad we didn't have such a law. Because for every one time I felt neglected, there are dozens of times that I can see now that my parents made big sacrifices for me. Sacrifices I took for granted.

And when they didn't give in to my every whim, it was for my own good. As a result, I think they turned me out fairly unspoiled.

They did give me one notion that might give me problems if I ever travel to Sweden though. That's the notion that with rights come responsibilities.

1978 to September 1979 First Federal recorded almost 2000 real estate loans for the Treasure Coast area, totaling more than $78,000,000.

Michael J. Brown, President of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Ft. Pierce stated: "I am particularly proud of the growth for the past year considering that savings inflows have been generally slow throughout the country due to the high rate of inflation the nation has experienced."

Mr. Brown explains further another factor for great growth of First Federal over the past year: "Contributing to our growth has been the new Fort St. Lucie facility opened last November and our eighth office opened in June in Sebastian."

First Federal Savings and Loan Association was founded in 1934. With now over $349,000,000 in assets it has a total of offices located in St. Lucie County, Indian River County and Martin County. It currently has plans to start construction in the near future for the ninth office in south Port St. Lucie and pending applications for two more additional offices in the Treasure Coast area.

He also says: "Although mortgage interest rates are at record highs, money is still available for residential loans. This is primarily attributed to the six month certificates which are also at record levels and tied to treasury bill rates."

...If you want to get some concept of how the "north area" is growing, ask Bob Schlerf.

Schlerf and his wife Betty, frustrated by the vagueness of area orientation, have spent the past two months researching and preparing an updated map, showing the streets in every area served by the Samaritan Ambulance service, from Sewal's Point to Walton Road, on Hutchinson Island from the bridges north to Outdoor Resorts of America, and on the west from Roosevelt Bridge (S.R. D&M Trailer Park) in St. Lucie County, on U.S. 1.

In addition, the Schlerfs have mapped in all of Jensen's new and planned subdivisions, including Pine Crest Lakes, Town and County, Timberwick, Jensen Estates and Sugar Hill, as well as the new industrial park on Savanna Road.

Schlerf said his project grew out of the difficulty service organizations have in trying to locate some of the resources of the volunteer ambulance department's calls.

"The county has no maps, showing the street names and numbers," Schlerf contended.

County Planner Tom Mumford, however, said updated maps are available at the county administration building.

"We don't have it on a single sheet," Mumford said. "They are in volumes of many pages. Maybe that's what he means."

The maps prepared commercially include the north part of Martin County, but don't include the south St. Lucie County area which is considered part of Jensen Beach.

Some "bleed into" the county to the north, but aren't complete in that department, the county planner said.

A chamber of commerce official contended that the commercial maps are not satisfactorily complete, and are already outdated.

Schlerf, a service man with Fort Pierce Utility Department, had never tackled cartography before, but he said he has had willing help with preparing parts of it, especially Sewall's Point.

"A Sewall's Point policeman mapped that entire area for us," Schlerf said. "He gave us not only names but house numbers."

The mapmaker said his work is not a commercial venture, at least as yet.

"We're going to have three copies made," he said, "One for the Samaritans, one for Civil Defense, and a spare."

RAMBLING AROUND

Jack and Edith Dodge, 4 Arborvitae have just returned from 4 months on the shores of Sebago Lake in Maine, where they have a cottage with two of their daughters in cottages nearby. Jack says the golfing is great up there and that is what he enjoys the most. Tail-end of David did some damage to small boats, and "David-Damage" here was limited to a few small leaks.

This year they attended the Maine/Florida get-together of over 400 for a wonderful clam bake and all sorts of entertainment. They ran into Don and Iva Cross of NE 8th St. who knew the ropes" and guided them through a grand march. Edith said it was great fun and they will do it again next year.

Earl and Lila Ehrmann, of 7 Kunquat, have just returned from Flint, Mich when they spend 8 months each year in their home on the outskirts. Lila said they had the usual family reunion of 100, rent a hall and shave the grandest potluck meal with each family contributing their specialty. Earl said he most of all enjoyed the Senior Citizen buys trips. Every week a trip somewhere, often having to line up at 6 a.m. to get a seat. Five bus loads to a Detroit baseball game. Earl wonders why we don't have them.

Orval and Dee Dee Mertz, 4 Almond Dr. are back from spending 5 months on Pretty Lake, near Ft. Wayne, Ind. where they have a cottage. Dee Dee said the weather was pretty good, but the fishing was poor, so they raised tomatoes and strawberries. They had company all summer, and no wonder, with 5 children, 12 grandchildren and 5 greats living nearby. Evelyn Figueiredo of Almond Dr. drove out in her Motorhome for a week's visit from Wareham, Mass. Evelyn's husband Charles died last June, but Evelyn plans to come back to OBP late in October, when her daughter goes back to Korea.

Len and Maryann Blanchard, 3 Banyan St. have just returned, after spending 5 months in their Manton, Mich. home. It was a bad year weatherwise with a summer of a few mild days one week, had to have heater on every night, heating bill each month, more than all winter in OBP. But, Len said, at least it was dry, in fact so dry and cold that gardens are way behind. They had the usual huge family reunion and the Donnelvs of Areca visited them. Glad to be back, as they left Michigan in a snow flurry. They were fortunate, no "David-Damage" at all.

Frances Reese, 2 Oak St. is also back after spending 5 months in her Manton, Mich. home. Frances also reports, "miserable, cold summer" with very poor gardens. She had quite a reunion with her family, son from Calif., daughter from Mo. and son and daughter from Mich. Frances said there wasn't any square dancing, but plenty of ball room at Senior Centers. They have a great one in Manton with meals, crafts and entertainment. Alex and Jo Povernese, ExOBPers, now in Zepher Hills visited Frances and they are both fine. Another, who reports no "David Damage."

Larry Hoon, 5 Cypress Dr. flew back last week from 6 months in Minneapolis, his wife Annette and son Larry Jr. will drive down. Larry also remarked about wet spring, delaying the farming for 3 weeks, and he also mentioned the Senior Center that was in his words, "just one big happy family". Larry said, up there his interest was church work and that is what he is anxious to get started on, here in Jensen Beach.

Get free flu shots

"Lest we forget," Blood Pressure Clinic by the Health Dept. nurses, Langford Field, 9 to 11 a.m. Fri., Oct. 19. Remember, last month there was some confusion and the next week folks were asking about it. So, here it is: blood pressures will be checked by Martin County Health Dept. nurse, Gen McManonman next Friday. For info. call her at 287-2277.

Also, the Health Dept. will give FREE FLU SHOTS to all seniors over 60, at their clinic on E. Ocean Blvd. Remember, don't all go the same day, see last week's Mirror for schedule or call Ernie C. 334-0756.

Seniors are still talking, of course; and some wonder what they were discussing last week, so here is a couple of items.

One senior heard on TV about a steak "special" at $3.60 per lb., and got to thinking back to his working days, remembering in the early 40's that bottom of the round steak was 30¢; top, 35¢; and very expensive rump was 40¢. He figured that is up 1000 percent in 40 yrs. or (by straight arithmetic) at a rate of 25 percent a year. And, carrying it a step further, he calculated it would cost the rich $9.00 a pound by 1990.

The senior gal he was chewing it over with then mentioned her pet gripe, pointing out that finally Congress had sneaked through a $5000 raise for themselves. And, for doing what? Making things tougher for us in every way. This led to another senior gal, griping about the quality of our products as she had just spent $400 for an appliance that after a month of fixing still wouldn't work right.

A completely disgruntled 80 year old senior had this to day, "No wonder our balance of trade is off, foreigners rightly prefer German or Japanese goods of much better quality.

Labor is now recreationally oriented, just interested in money to spend in their fast increasing time off, a "work force" interested in "earning their keep" and proud of doing a good job has gone the way of the 5¢ cigar.

Seniors could keep these things in mind and when there is an opportunity, tell their grandchildren about good ol' Better for Less days.

The '55 Alive/Mature Driving class that was mentioned last week was so full of information that will help seniors drive safely, some more of those items that were explained by instructor Leon LaRoche will be listed.

First Leon asked the students what bothered them most, and it was quite astounding what they said: Driving of nervous husbands; others don't stop at stop signs; many don't use turn signals; improper signing near cities; having to make left turn when there isn't a signal light; tailgating; passing on double yellow line; beating me to a parking space; noisy mufflers; being cut-off by passers; blinding head lights; slow drivers in fast lane; centerline hogs; weaving motorcycles and bikes; speeding of others; not moving when traffic signals change; improper lane changing; driving without lights in rain; fast driving and splashing you in the rain. (any more [illegible])

This listing gave Leon a chance to explain about driving in residential districts. He said the only safe way was to drive slowly and carefully searching for hazards every minute, that are caused by others doing the things mentioned above. Then, he remarked that surveys brought out that although we would be the last to admit it, Seniors' greatest fault, is refusal to yield the right of way.

Don't ever demand your right of way, as you will get injured just as much, right or wrong, if your stubborn pride results in an accident. Remember the car on the left must yield (if 2 cars arrive at same time), so before proceeding at intersection, first look left (ear nearest you), then look right (personally, I take a second look left.)

There are many more of these valuable suggestions and some will be described next week, along with test examination results. But, this class is good for what ails senior driving; and could save a life, possibly your own. It will get you a 10 percent reduction of your Colonial Penn Ins. It is hoped all who can will take this course. To register, call Leon LaRoche, 334 0416.

Treasure Coast Senior Services is soon to live up to its new name as a brand new 14 passenger bus has been delivered to Site 9 at Langford Park (See page one for complete story). This bus can be used to escort seniors to doctors, etc. in mornings, for seniors who don't have transportation to meals in afternoon, and for weekend trips to places of interest. Call site Manager, Darris Walker, for information, 334 2570.

CHAPTER EVENTS

Chapter event of the week was the Board meeting, 1:30 p.m. Thur., Oct. 11, at the Salem Inn. President CMac. MacIntyre presided. The board went about its official business of paying bills and setting policy. Committees reported, and here are the things of interest to general membership.

Frank Edwardson made another plea for more Fri. it men and women to help out in the home for his "Do It Yourself (with help)" committee. If you can help out, you might be able to make a few bucks. Tel. 287-0473.

Social Security office was discussed. They now come to Stuart on Mon. and Wed. 9 to 12 at the United Methodist Church Education Bldg.

Again questioned about having a permanent office here, they said if the demand was great enough it would be done, but as of now, not too many are using the present service. Seniors, you better patronize, Mon. and Wed. Also, remember the new Medicare number: 1-800-342-7586 for Jacksonville.

The AARP Health programs at picnics may have to be switched around a bit, in order to coordinate the multi-purpose use of Langford Park. Possibly the movie program will have to be a 9:30 a.m. Please let CMac know if this would be satisfactory. 283 7639.

Some folks didn't get a September bulletin and often were irate. But, in most cases, it was because of non payment of dues, as Al Tucker, Membership Chm. and Bulletin Business Mgr. had the names of all the delinquints removed from the circulation list. Therefore, all those wondering why "no Bulletin" give Al a ring. 287 4241.

Vera King, Chm. of Travel committee is very anxious to get some one and two day trips set up, but to date she hasn't been able to come up with anything that pleases at least 30 AARPers. So, all of you folks that are continually asking, "Why don't the Chapter have a bus trip," please get in touch with Vera with your suggestions. Call 283 1650.

WMCF radio, according to, Gen. Mgr. Fred Neterre, wants to put on some programs, of seniors, for seniors and by seniors. This is an outgrowth of those very effective 'spot announcements' they have been running for seniors for the past 2 years. Anyone interested in participating, call CMac. 283 7639.

The Colonial Penn Health Ins. enrollment period ends Oct. 31. AARPers in the quiet of their homes better review their coverage. If you need more coverage, get it if you can afford it, but don't be high pressured into getting more than you can carry and don't duplicate. For years all that was heard was complaints of poor service, so it is good to hear otherwise. The other day, Harry C. called and said the 800 number he had been given worked excellent, good, fast, courteous service with a smile. It was so good, he just had to tell about it. For info call Al Cammise 283 2455.

Several lot owners who returned this weekend encountered snow on the trip south. Peggy and Clancy Guthell said they were staying overnight in a motel in Virginia and had the heater on in their room when they went to bed. During the night a chill wakened them and they realized the electricity had gone off because of wet snow breaking the power lines. It seems hard to imagine when it has been so warm here!

NEED TO REPLACE YOUR SLEEPER MATTRESS?

MANY PEOPLE have been wondering what the typical, everyday Martin County High School volleyball fan looks like. Well, here she is, at full strength and clapping away during a recent game at the Tiger Den in Stuart, where Martin County is building a volleyball powerhouse. The gym has been getting more and more crowded with curious fans, and this one, 22-month old Nikki Baum of Port St. Lucie, seems to be enjoying herself. Nikki is the sister of MCHS senior Kathy Baum, who plays on the Lady Tiger volleyball team. The team is 9-3, and Nikki? Well, she's ready for a showdown next week with Fort Pierce Central, the conference leaders, at the Den. Game time is 8 p.m., but Nikki says you should show up early, at 7 p.m., for the junior varsity match.

Tiger, Cobra netters brace for volleyball showdown

BY DONNIE WILKIE

In this, the age of mass communication, one would imagine that it wouldn't take long for a volleyball score to travel 20 miles.

In the case of Fort Pierce Central's match last Wednesday against Boca Raton, it took exactly five days.

That's right!

Martin County Head Volleyball Coach Sherrie Robins, who has been spending a few extra minutes each night praying for someone – anyone – to knock off Fort Pierce Central so her Tigers could claim a co-championship with the Cobras should they defeat them next week, was informed of Central's lapse against Boca Raton just before her Tigers took the court against Lake Worth Monday night. The only problem was that the Central-Boca match was played last week.

Within seconds, it seemed, the news of Central's downfall spread around the Tiger Den like a flash fire, providing the homestanding Tigers with the inspiration they needed to defeat Lake Worth, 15-1, 15-9.

Meanwhile, in West Palm Beach, the Cobras were disposing of Forest Hill in consecutive games, 15-3, 15-8.

Central and Martin County, then, will face each other next Wednesday night in Stuart, with at least a share of the Suncoast Conference Eastern Division championship on the line, depending on the outcome of the teams' matches between now and then.

The second-year Tiger mentor seemed pleased enough with Monday's victory, although she agreed that her team became a bit disorganized early in the second game.

"There were times when they played sloppy," she said. "You can tell when they start crowding each other around the ball, but that doesn't happen too much anymore."

Susan Werner, who usually paces the Tigers in points scored while serving, took a back seat Monday night, as Lisa Grondahl starred, recording 11 points. Kim Metzger followed with eight.

And serving isn't the only area where Grondahl is excelling.

"Lisa has made a tremendous improvement during the season in her spiking," complimented Robins. "She is really coming on strong for us."

"I'm a little bit concerned about Susan Werner. She isn't jumping as high as she was, and is missing a lot of spikes because of it. We're going to work with her right away on improving that."

"Everyone out there is serving well. There's no one having trouble with that at all."

Serving was a particularly sore spot for Fort Pierce Central when the rivals' hooked up earlier in the season in Fort Pierce. But Coach Julia Nixon claims that has changed.

"We have been working hard and putting a lot of concentration on our serving," remarked Nixon, whose squad cooked the Tigers in the Cobra Cave two weeks ago. "We didn't serve well at all against Martin County when we played them the first time."

Nixon says the Tigers disappointed her when they met in Fort Pierce, but has no illusions concerning the second meeting.

"I really was expecting them to be a much stronger team. Maybe it was an off night for them."

"We're taking one match at a time, but I have to feel that the Martin County match is the toughest one we've got left. Our immediate objective is winning the conference, and in order to do that, we have to beat Martin County."

"After that,, we definitely are aiming for the Districts," continued Nixon. "We'll be playing teams we've never seen before."

Except Martin County, who, in the luck of the draw, got Fort Pierce Central as a first-round opponent. The tournament will by played at Vero Beach, with Satellite, Merritt Island and Eau Gallie joining the Indians, Tigers and Cobras.

The Cobras have relied on a great offensive attack, featuring spikers Anita and Priscilla Pratt (Anita is a year older than her sister) and Dedra Burgess, and setters Liz Lampros and Christy Flinn. But Burgess also anchors a defense that routinely turns the hardest spikes into everyday returns.

"I guess their consistency is what makes them click," observed Robins of the Cobras. "It seems that they just don't give points away. A lot of times a team starts good, but when they start getting scored on, they fall apart. Fort Pierce doesn't do that."

Robins, although conceding that "every team wants to go for it all (the state title)," pointed out that if the season ended today, she would still be very satisfied.

"I think the girls have worked together more as a team. It's finally come to mean something to them to play volleyball. They have established a program at Martin County- before it was just something you could do, but now it's important and people are noticing us. Just in that sense it's been a good season."

The Tigers-Cobras clash is slated for the Tiger Den in Stuart, beginning at 8pm next Wednesday night. A junior varsity game will preceed the action, at 7 pm.

FP Central eliminates Tigers from district

Phil Farinella isn't one who talks too loudly before a football game, but his team whipped Martin County last Friday night, he was all smiles.

"It's like a weight off my shoulder," he said. "At the beginning of the season, with 16 or 17 starters back, Martin County figured to be our toughest competition."

Helped by a big-play offense and a defense that provided them the football, Fort Pierce Central galloped to a 27-0 halftime and went on to defeat Martin County, 34-7 in a District 10-AAAA game at Tiger Stadium last week.

Three costly interceptions of the Martin County quarterback, David McCaughey, who upped his total to seven for the year.

Ron Lee took a handoff from Peter Barriner and broke loose around the right end for a 70-yard touchdown run. When Martin County regained possession, McCaughey tried another pop-pass, and this time, Solomen Lee intercepted at the 24 in Tigerland. On their next play, the Cobras made it 14-0 when Barriner spotted Luther Sanifer open in the end zone for a 24-yard strike.

Barriner followed by hooking up with Victor Phillips on a nine-yard touchdown play.

No sooner had Barriner and Company trotted off the field, than Derick Thompson had picked off another of McCaughey's ersant aerials, setting up yet another FPC score, a 20-yard pass from Barriner to Sandifer.

The teams traded touchdowns in the second half, with Eddie Davis scoring for Martin County, and reserve running back Charles Wallace tallying for Central on a five-yard dash.

Lee led all rushers in the game, despite carrying the ball only five times, with 138 yards. Stoney Barriner came in with 51 and Winston Franklin added 37. Martin County did manage 123 yards rushing, the largest total any Central opponent has recorded this year.

While Martin County is now mathmatically eliminated from the District 10-AAAA race, Fort Pierce Central can win it all with a win over Merritt Island next Friday night, October 26. But before that, they meet Twin Lakes in West Palm Beach (at North Shore High School) this Friday night.

Martin County also travels to West Palm Beach this week, as they meet Forest Hill (0-5). Westwood faces Pahokee in the West and John Carroll is at Glades-Day.

ON THE PROWL. Fort Pierce Central defensive back wide receiver Luther Sandifer was one of the reasons that FPC crushed Martin County last week, 34-7 at Tiger Stadium in Stuart. Barracudas drop two out with loss

Quarterback Sam Wesley, who one week earlier had stunned Indiantown with a touchdown run that beat the Thunderbirds 6-0 with just three seconds to play, sprinted for 127 yards in 11 carries Saturday night, as the undefeated Hornets overpowered the Jensen Beach Barracudas, 18-0, in a Martin County Junior Football League game at Sailfish Park in Stuart.

Wesley posted scoring runs of 46 and 38 yards to clinch the game for the Hornets in the final period, but only after the Jensenites had put up a mighty struggle.

Stuart gained its first score early in the second period, after forcing the visitors to punt deep in their own real estate, as Kevin Howard capped a three play mini drive with an 18 yard dart.

After the teams exchanged possession in the second half and marked the end of the third quarter, Wesley completed an eight-yard toss to Steve Powers, then baffled the Jensen Beach defense by fumbling the snap and picking up the loose ball, then taking off up the middle of the field for a 46-yard touchdown run and a 12-0 Hornet lead.

Wesley wasted no time in putting the game away by ripping through the Barracudas' outside containment and scampering 58 yards for a final score.

The Barracudas could have stayed within a game of the Dolphins at Langford Park. Now, though, they must beat the Dolphin leaders or be eliminated from championship consideration, as Palm City could conceivably clinch their conference title with a win.

In other Lower Division action Saturday night, Indiantown ripped Port Salerno, 38-0, and the Dolphins increased their American Conference lead to two games with a 20-0 conquest of winless Port St. Lucie.

"We moved the ball pretty well but we got sloppy," said Bob Morgan, who saw his Saints absorb their fourth straight defeat at the hands of the Dolphins.

Port St. Lucie returns to Sportsman's Park for their final three games, beginning this week with a Saturday night clash with Port Salerno, then games with Indiantown and Stuart.

IRP rips NR Shores in tennis opener

Indian River Plantation's ladies' Division I tennis team opened the 1979-80 Tri-County Tennis League season with a 6-2 victory over the homestanding North River Shores Tennis Club team.

Five of the visitors' wins came in straight sets as only Fran Quinn and Gail Taylor were extended before rallying to beat Skip Dinter and Beverly Meer, 2-6, 7-5, 6-1.

Susie Fox and Kathy DeWindt defeated Muriel Berg and Timmy Socker, 6-1, 6-3, for the Plantation while Connie Falkenburg and Barbara Garramore stopped Giorids Blackard and Sherry Flymale, 7-6, 6-2, and Sandy Thurlow and Nancy Dillard beat Gerry Areni and Laura Rinker, 7-6, 6-3. The other Plantation wins came when Hilde Pate and Sally McCarthy downed Jody Bond and Carole Newman, 6-4, 7-5, and Marge Miles and Jean Wamnes took Marie Roberts and Beverly Wolf, 6-3, 6-4.

North River Shores' wins came as Mary Ray Evans and Bertie Travis trimmed Chris Knight and Marion Taormina, 6-1, 6-3, and Maureen Schroff and Barbara Stangland edged Jean Schaeffer and Gerry Wagner, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3.

Westwood faces third-ranked Blue Devils Friday night

If Fort Pierce-Westwood fans are hoping for an easy victory after consecutive shutout defeats at home, they can dismiss the thought immediately.

The Panthers (3-3), who have stumbled through 16-0 and 10-0 losses against Delray Beach-Atlantic and Cardinal Newman in their last two outings, must travel to Pahokee Friday night for a clash with the undefeated and highly-touted Blue Devils.

Antoine Russell's Devils are 6-0, ranked in the state's top five among AA schools, and flying as high as ever after clinching a playoff spot last week by blasting Lake Placid, 44-8.

Other area teams must pack their bags as well this week, as Fort Pierce Central treks to West Palm Beach to take on Twin Lakes (the game is at the North Shore High Field, just off 45th Street) and the Martin County Tigers make the same trip to face winless Forest Hill.

While Central was plastering the Tigers (2-3) at Stuart's Tiger Stadium 34-7, last week, Westwood was, for the second week in a row, failing to cash in on an early scoring opportunity and throwing their chances for a winning season out the window, against Newman.

The Crusaders' Pat Licata fumbled the opening kickoff and Westwood recovered at the Newman three-yard line. But after one running play moved the pigskin to the nine, two others lost two yards and a Terrence McGriff pass fell incomplete in the end zone.

The teams remained deadlocked at 0-0 into the third quarter, but Newman, aided by crucial clipping, encroachment (each on the same fourth-down play, giving the Crusaders a first down) and pass interference penalties against the Panthers moved the ball to the nine, from where Ed Jarmakowicz took a handoff and darted into the end zone for the game's first score. The Newman Junior running back-kicker kicked the extra point and later added a 34-yard field goal to clinch the win.

Elsewhere around the Florida East Coast:

Walter Battle rushed for 114 yards on 20 carries, scoring two touchdowns in Merritt Island's 34-14 District 10-AAAA victory over Vero Beach, played before a Homecoming crowd of 4,000 at Merritt Island.....Tom Bayis threw for 213 yards, tossing one touchdown pass, as Satellite broke a five-game skid and 18-quarter scoreless streak with a 32-0 surprise romp over Eau Gallie, also a District 10 contest.....Jessie Tolbach, Eric Denson gained 111 yards on 23 attempts to lead Titusville (5-1) to a 15-8 win over stubborn Rockledge..... Palm Bay's "Jaws II" defense tightened, allowing Cocoa, previously unbeaten, just 115 yards in total offense (minus two rushing), as the Pirates threw the District 10-AAA race into a mad scramble with a 31-13 knockout of the Tigers.....Melbourne moved into a tie with the Pirates for the 10-AAA lead, downing Cocoa Beach 28-13.....and Astronaut cruised to a 16-3 halftime lead en route to a 31-3 trouncing of Cardinal Gibbons.

Greg Bain scampered 62 yards for the winning touchdown and picked up 162 yards on the night as Glades Central clinched the District 14-AAA championship with a 13-0 shutout of Atlantic.....Suncoast assured itself the spot as the District 13-AAA representative when they smashed hopeful Jupiter 27-0 in Jupiter, as James Johnson passed for 140 yards (9 for 15).....North Shore stormed 80 yards in four minutes, with Harry Gosier scoring the winning touchdown in a 14-7, come from behind victory over winless Okeechobee..... Bob Wright tossed scoring passes of 75 and 50 yards (250 yards total) as Twin Lakes roared to a 20-0 lead, then held on for a 20-14 District 11-AAAA win over Lake Worth-Leonard.....and Boca Raton struck quickly, then relied on its tough defense in a 19-0 zip of Forest Hill.

Finally, Lake Worth, rebounding from its first loss a week earlier, outscored Palm Beach Gardens, 34-12.

Here are directions for the Central and Martin County games:

FP Central (4-0) at Twin Lakes (2-3)– (game to be played at North Shore High School)–Travel US 1 pr Turnpike to PGA Boulevard (PB Gardens exit on Turnpike); pick up I-95 off PGA between US 1 and the Turnpike; Travel South to 45th Street, turn East; follow 45th to old Jal-Alai Fronton; turn right at Jal-Alai entrance (away from Fronton) and follow to North Shore High.

Guarranteed good time on 'couple's day' at Sandpiper Bay

According to some club-toting couples, Sunday is "divorce day" at Port St. Lucie's Sandpiper Bay. Actually, Sunday is couple's day on the resort's three beautiful golf courses. When all goes well, the clubs are used for hitting a little white ball across a green and into a small hole marked by a flag.

When all does not go well, just about anything can happen.

"Mary, I have some advice for you. If you're pulling up grass it means you are swinging too low. Move your grip down," advised one half of a Sandpiper couple, George Jacobi.

"George, I have some advice for you. Shut up," came the response from Mary, his better half.

Obviously, golf is one of those wonderful little games designed to further marital bliss.

"Right about now they start handing out the divorce certificates back at the office," joked fellow golfer, Pat Blalock.

While the harmless digs were given and received in very good humour, the two couples, Frank and Pat Blalock and George and Mary Jacobi, proved that Sunday is undoubtedly the most interesting day for a spectator to tour Sandpiper's golf courses.

The couples reported that the courses had been closed except for weekends since the hurricane. As they had been used to playing several times a week, they are just now getting back "in the swing of things."

This reopening has been a relief for many residents who have found that golf is an important part of their life in Port St. Lucie.

"I started playing so I could see my husband," quipped Pat Blalock, whose husband Frank is a long-time pro and avid enthusiast in the game, "now, I play more than him." The Blalocks say they golf, both separately and together, about four or five times a week.

Mary Jacobi, on the other hand, picked up the sport while her husband, George, was in the service. "It seemed that every place we stayed there was a course," she said.

Now, she admits to playing at least three times per week, while George Jacobi only hits the courses "a few times a month."

Whatever the actual time spent playing golf, all the partners agreed that Port St. Lucie is the place to spend it.

"Port St. Lucie is a fantastic place to settle," remarked Frank, "for golf and everything else." With that, the two couples putted off in their motorized carts to shoot a few more balls and add a few more words of wisdom to each other's knowledge of the game.

How does one advise their golf partner who is also a partner in marriage? Just like they hit a golf ball, very, very carefully.

Sandpiper men hold best ball event;

Dewhirst foursome takes top honors at 59

A single stroke separated a trio of teams in the Best Ball of a Foursome event staged by the Sandpiper Men golfers in their weekly matches on the 18-hole Sinner's course. Scoring 59 for the lowest tally included the quartet of Col. Sam Dewhirst, Bob Englebert, Will Hyde and Ken Beckman.

Deadlocked at 60 was a combo of Bob Wilson, Oscar Rozett, Wes LaCour, Gordon Ferguson and Dolf Ciferi, Jim McNitt, David Moses and Dick Spooner.

A trio of teams ended in a three-way tie at 61 were Roy Hannum, Shug Hickman, Pat LePore and Bob Klinedinst---Dan Smozanek, Fred Gradishar, Homer Davidson and Gene Allison—Jack Dalton, Dom LePore, George Jacobi and Dick Lundin.

Individual scoring honors were shared by Col. Don McConnel, 77; Dan Smozanek, 78 and Tom Chapman, 79, while George Jacobi took the "shotmaker" honors of the day when he holed out for a net double eagle on the 11th hole and an eagle two on No. 8. Dick Spooner netted an eagle two on the 18th hole.

Meanwhile the "pipers" are lining partners for the First Round 54-hole Member-Member event which starts on Oct. 25th and will continue for three consecutive Thursdays.

Luckless Razorbacks lose

BY DONNIE WILKIE

Greg Moore's 66-yard run in the third quarter highlighted the Jaguars' first victory of the 1979 Junior Football League Upper Division season, a 12-0 conquest of the hard-luck Jensen Beach Razorbacks, who suffered their fourth consecutive setback.

Moore galloped through and around the Jensen Beach defense for 130 yards in 12 attempts, but it was his breakaway effort around right end in the third stanza that gave Stuart the confidence it needed.

The touchdown play, which broke a 0-0 deadlock, was Stuart's only offensive play of the third quarter, as Jensen Beach moved the ball up and down the field at will but could not remove the zero from the scoreboard.

"I just don't know what to think," said a disappointed Herb Seal, who along with the rest of the league looked forward to a banner year for his team. Instead the Razorbacks have fallen to the likes of Palm City and Stuart, whose only wins have come at the expense of the Jensenites. Seal was sure about one thing, though.

"They baffle me."

Quarterback Chris Fitzpatrick, operating from the shotgun formation which Seal installed after his squad's success through the air against Port St. Lucie, completed eight of 18 passes for 77 yards, but watched helplessly as his receivers dropped, missed or muffed several of his aerials.

After driving to the Stuart 30-yard line, only to have penalties push them back, on the game's first possession, the Razorbacks were shut down by the aggressive Jaguar defensive unit through the rest of the first half.

When the localers blocked a punt, gaining possession at the Stuart 33, they quickly proceeded to return the favor, as Steve Chester fumbled after catching a Fitzpatrick dart at the Jaguar 25.

That miscue resulted in Stuart's only sustained drive of the game, which featured a steady ground game and only one pass, a short four-yarder. Moore provided the punch with 29 yards on five efforts, but Ron Leonard coughed up the football at the Jensen Beach 31, and the score remained 0-0.

The Razorbacks came storming out for the second half, determined to change the numbers, but after controlling the ball for over half the period with a march to the Stuart 18, where they had a first down, they came up short as Fitzpatrick failed to connect on end zone passes to Chester and running back Craig Robinson. Two running plays netted only four yards.

It was on the next play that Moore turned the entire flow of the game on its ear with his 66-yard gallop, but the Razorbacks picked up where they left off after the ensuing kickoff as Dwayne Straunbaugh bulled forward for 14 yards and a first down. On the next play, though, Fitzpatrick overthrew Parnell Jones and Stuart's Stanley Johnson intercepted at midfield.

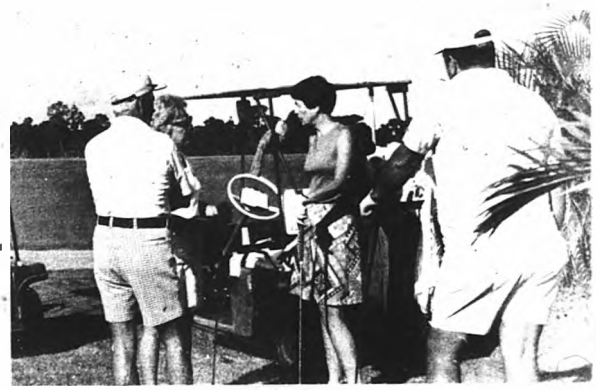
Even in the fourth quarter, with the score still just 6-0, the Razorbacks were able to move the ball upfield. A 19-yard connection with Robinson (who turned in his best performance of the season with four receptions), a 15-yard penalty and another pass of five yards to the running back gave the Backs a second and five situation at the Jaguar ten.

But three plays later, Fitzpatrick fumbled the snap, and Anredner Thompson quickly pounced on it to assure Stuart of its first win. Moments later, Johnson hurled a 45-yard bomb to Leonard, who outran the Razorback defense into the end zone, making it 12-0.

Seal did praise Robinson for his play after the game, and complimented his offensive line, which allowed Fitzpatrick to be sacked just once, on the next-to-last play of the night.

"That isn't bad at all," he said. "I really thought they played a good ballgame."

If the Backs wish to win their conference (the American), they must win their final three games (one of which is against Indiantown) and hope that Port Salerno loses its final three. The Backs meet the Panthers on October 27 in Jensen Beach.



TALKING IT OVER—The Jacobi's and the Blalock's joined for a rewarding day of golf play last Sunday, now that Sandpiper Bay has recovered from Hurricane David. The couples said that the courses were out of commission until recently due to the soggy conditions caused by weeks of rain. TAKING A SWING—Mary Jacobi practices her swing while waiting for her turn to begin. While couple's day at Sandpiper Bay provides a fun and active outlet for local marrieds, advice on technique is not always so greatly appreciated. (photo by Michelle Naspinski)

BEWARE! the "RUST MONSTER"
He works 24 hours a day

QUESTION
How and where does rust start?
ANSWER

Rust starts anywhere. Rust is formed by the union of oxygen in the air with iron or steel by a process called oxidation. Moisture is an important agent in producing the change. Anywhere you have unprotected metal parts, oxygen, and moisture, you can and probably will have rust, but rust may not always be evident. Rust can form inside hollow metal parts, below metal surfaces, and inside hidden seams.

Nicholas J. Flora

Nick Flora is one of the many retirees who have taken the volunteer firefighting department as a way of staying active in their community.

Flora is 69 years of age and has been a member of the Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department for the past seven years. He holds the rank of lieutenant with the department and spends an aveage of 40 hours per month attending the drills and sharing in the responsibilities around the fire station.

Prior to moving to the area, Flora had ten years experience in a New Jersey fire department and was also qualified in first aid.

Flora, who resides at 379 Flora Road in Jensen Beach, says his most memorable experience was helping to build one of the fire trucks, an old G.I. surplus unit. He is secretary-treasurer of the department.

Eugene A. Peer

When the Rio Fire Department decided to incorporate, Richard Pinsky called upon his friend, Gene Peer, a local attorney, to help. Peer met with the department and helped them incorporate.

He also made many friends, and became a fireman several years ago.

"After meeting the members, I came to like them and understand the need for firemen in the area," Peer says.

Gene Peer, 33, lives at 2170 NE Dixie Highway with his son, Jason. Peer's working hours prevent him from being around the fire house as often as he would like to be, but he credits the department with helping him learn in the time he has to attend. Would he recommend others to become involved in volunteer firefightingk? "Absolutely," Peer says.

Jack Giannini

Jack is the younger half of a father and son team at the Jensen Beach Fire Department. He is 17 years old and is a member of the Junior Firemen program at the department. As a Junior fireman, he must ride in the cab of a firetruck on calls. But he is learning all the duties sand responsibilities of the regular firemen and will be ready to assume those duties when he turns 18.

Jack has been with the department since June, when his family moved back to Jensen after a few years in New Jersey. He enjoys his work at the department and hasn't missed a drill yet.

Vito Giannini

Vito, a 42 year old tractor trailer driver, served for the Jensen Beach Fire Department for two years, then moved his family to New Jersey.

But now he's back (for good, his wife, Marie says), and he is once again a volunteer with the local department.

"He's not here as much as he would like to be because he's on the road so much, but when he's here, he's always ready to help at the fire department. In fact, sometimes he and our son see more of each other there than at home," says his wife, who is a member of the department's auxiliary unit.

The Giannini's have four children, and one of them, Jack, is a member of the Junior Firemen program at the department. Currently, the Giannini's are building a home in Leilani Heights.

Jamie Yurillo

Jamie Yurillo became a full-fledged member of the Jensen Beach Fire Department when he turned 18 this year. Prior to that, was an associate member of the department under a Junior fireman program which chief Joe Luciano organized.

Even when he was an associate, he participated in weekly drills and shared in the responsibilities that regular firemen did.

Now that he's a regular fireman, he can drive a fire truck or ride on the back. As a junior fireman, he was restricted to riding in the cab.

He learned how to operate pumps, lay out hoses and use radio equipment as an associate, so his graduation to a regular fireman was not a challenge he wasn't ready for.

Jamie is a student at FIT.

Art Eitnier is one of the many retirees who have taken the volunteer fire fighting department as a way to fight boredom. He has been associated with the Rio Fire Department for three years, and serves as president.

Eitnier, 69, lives at 6 Banyan Terrace Drive in Rio with his wife, Thelma. They have two children, Arthur and Joan.

His most memorable fire was the electrical fire in which a man was electrocuted on U.S. 1 southwest of Arant's.

Spending fifty hours a month on drills and working with equipment, Eitnier enjoys his work as a volunteer and recommends it to anyone seeking something to do that is rewarding.

He is an underwater technology student at Florida Institute of Technology, and said he joined the department, "Because I felt I'd like to do something to help and to get to know the community. It has been a lot of fun and I've learned a lot."

John is from Philadelphia but hopes to eventually move to Oregon to open a dive shop. He said if there is a volunteer department where he lives in Oregon, he'll join.

Tom Neeson

One of the newest members of the Jensen Beach Fire Department is Tom Neeson.

He joined the department in June, and said his prime motivation for joining is because he feels citizens should be community minded and because he felt it was time for some young persons to serve.

Since joining he has attended all meetings and spends a good many hours at the department.

Though most people have an image of a fireman only as a fire fighter, Tom says the duties cover a wide variety of things and actually little time is actually spent at a fire. Keeping things clean, watering plants and trees in droughts, and helping keep the roads clear, such as the firemen did during Hurricane David, are all part of the job.

Community support is key to success of JBFD

While it is well known fact the people of Jensen Beach have always taken great pride in their community, never hesitating to come forth to support or save property, no matter how large or small, that support has never been more in evidence than with the Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department.

How many folks realize the Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department is the only fire department in Martin County that has literally purchased all its own vehicles?

While a certain amount of funding is derived annually through special district taxes, it is the people of Jensen Beach who have donated all the funds used to purchase the trucks and much of the equipment for their fire department.

Today, the Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department has a fleet of nine a units and a department which ranks o second to none in Martin County.

It was Randolph Spoony, a comparative newcomer to the area, who was so concerned over the lack of fire protection in Jensen Beach that he, along with a request that some type of fire-fighting equipment be placed in the north county area. The venture was successful in that the county agreed to give the group and old used truck to start a new the Jensen Bait and Tackle Shop.

Even though the rig was considered a real junker, it was the beginning of the Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department.

The backbone of dedicated men who worked diligently to repair and man that truck were the original volunteers of the Jensen Beach Fire Department.

The year was 1967.

With the organization of the local volunteer fire department, it was William "Scotty" St. Clair who became the first fire chief, a position he held for almost seven years before stepping down in 1968. St. Clair was also owner-operator of his own garage in Jensen Beach, until his recent death.

Randolph Spoony served as assistant chief throughout the early years and as chief from 1968 until his retirement in 1971, when Joe Luciano took over the top position. Chief Spoony died last June.

While the volunteers were proud of their one-unit beginning, they realized it was just the beginning. They were aware of the impending growth of the area and recognized the need for more and better equipment.

Through generous support from the community will be determined to know whether or not the department will contain air packs, tools, oxygen, and other life-lifting equipment.

Un order, and expected to arrive in four to six months, is a truck which will likely be numbered 107. It is a "class A" pumper with a 1000 gallon tank and a pump with a capacity of 1500 gallons said when a new fire station is built along Savanna Road. The truck will be in order, plus No. 108, will be stationed there Number 101, with a 360 gallon tank, was sold this year.

The important thing is, however, that the department must expand to keep pace with the rapidly growing area. Certain facts remain unchanged. The dedication of those who serve on the volunteer fire department is ever present, just as the support, both moral and financial, of the Jensen Beach residents.

Truck No. 105 is a 1978 model later purchased by the county to move the fire station from Indian River Drive to the present Palmetto Street location. The truck was equipped through a combination of county funds and local money.

It was in the mid 1960's the land was purchased for the new truck. The truck has a 34-foot ladder which in usually referred to as a "snorkel", or "cherry-picker."

Truck No. 108 is, as Joe Luciano describes, "another truck we built." The truck body is leased from the state Department of Forestry. But the fortunes did the work to put on a tank and pump.

Truck No. 109 is yet another truck leased from the Department of Forestry. This one has a 1,250 gallon tank, and Chief Luciano says it's "as good as brand new." It cost the department $8,000, but it bought new would cost $35,000 to $40,000. Luciano estimated. The truck is good for structure and woods fires.

Starting with the smallest, there is the chief's car, a sailing wagon which is equipped with first aid equipment. Fire extinguishers, axes, shovels, ice chests, stretcher. It is equipped with 4-wheel drive and is the first unit at the scene of a fire.

Number 110 is not a truck, but a van, used to be an ambulance for the Indialantic volunteers, but is being made over into an all-purpose utility vehicle for the department. It will contain air packs, tools, oxygen, and other life-lifting equipment.

Number 102 is the lead attack truck and is used for structure fires. It has a standard drive and is never used off the road.

Truck No. 103 is a tanker truck capable of lifting none or woods fires Tony Rojt, one of several talented Easter monkeys in the department, gets major credit for putting this 1000 gallon tanker together.

Truck No. 104 is a combination house and brush unit which the county equipped with a 500 gallon tank. It also is a 4-wheel drive.

Invalid rescue markers offered

Invalid persons living in the community will be determined to know whether or not the department will contain air packs, tools, oxygen, and other life-lifting equipment. It will be known.

Huge woods fire in March took hours to get under control

Firemen lose valuable friends

The Jensen Beach Fire Department has been touched by sadness during the past year with the loss of three persons who meant a lot to the department.

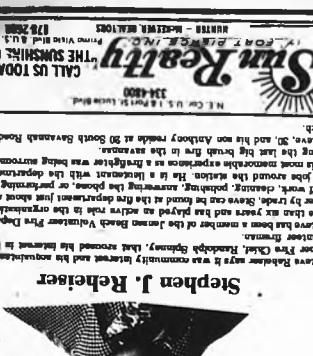
During the year, Bill "Boots" St. Clair, Gene Poux, and Lillian Quincy have died.

St. Clair, who operated a garage on Indian River Drive, was the department's first fire chief. He served in that capacity for 13 years and helped build the fledgling department into a highly-efficient unit.

Poux was a former assistant fire chief with the department who logged countless hours working to make the department strong.

And Mrs. Quincy was a member of the firemen's auxiliary for well over a decade until her recent death. She and fellow auxiliary members served to make food for the firemen during extended fires and helped out in many other ways.

Fire Chief Joe Luciano said the members of the department sorely miss these three persons and give thanks for the outstanding devotion to the community which each of them displayed.



Thomas G. Scott

Tom Scott, 22, is currently on leave of absence from the Rio Fire Department, as he has joined the armed service. However, when he's on leave from the service Scott comes by the firehouse, picks up his plectron, and serves when called.

Chief Bill Gass says when Scott is gone, he is sorely missed, as "he was one of our best firemen."

Rick Sanchez, 29 years of age and an automotive machinist by trade, said it was a friend who first interested him in firefighting.

While Rick does not have as much time as he would like to spend at the fire station, he still manages to attend the drills and does help out with the various chores at the station when time permits. He has been a member of the Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department for 3 years and 6 months and, not only does he enjoy serving as a volunteer, he recommends others to join in the organization.

Rick was a part of the team who fought the large brush fire which covered nearly 2,000 acres of pine savannas and jumped U.S. 1 a couple of years ago.

The secretary-treasurer of the Rio Fire Department is 55 year old Kenneth Klager. He lives with his wife, Yvette, at 2146 SW Gull Harbor Lane, Stuart.

At 56, and retired, Klager has been a member of the Rio Fire Department for nine and one-half years. He was first brought into the department by Chief Bill Gass. He remembers the Jonathon Dickinson State Park fire as the most memorable event in his service.

Spending twenty hours a month at the fire house, Kenneth works mostly on Mondays and Wednesdays in his job. He enjoys being a firefighter.

"Any man who is physically capable should volunteer some time to his community," Klager says.

Fire Chief Bill Gass says Volmer is very knowledgeable about fires and has provided instruction to other members of the department.

Volmer is a truck driver for A Rmellin Express Lines and is often out of town. But when he's around, he spends about two nights a week at the fire department. He is married, has two children and lives in Port St. Lucie.

Sprague now holds the rank of Captain and has served with the department for the past 21 years. Aside from working full time, Ed Sprague still manages to attend drills and do his part of the upkeep of the equipment.

He had little difficulty in recalling his most memorable experience with the local fire department.

"There is no question about it, the experience I will never forget was fighting the massive woods fire which burned the area from the Walton Road straight through to Baker Road in Rio, although there were many homes in the Jensen area threatened by fire that night, there was no structural damage. That was about twelve years ago," Sprague said.

Ed Wrede

Ed Wrede, who came here from New Bergen County, N.J. six years ago, carried over his interest in fire fighting from his active days as a glass blower with a surgical instrument company. He was a member of the company fire department in New Jersey. He and his wife Edna chose Jensen Beach as their retirement home because they had relatives living here. And Ed "intended to do a lot of fishing." But unfortunately, the fire department and other interests have severely limited his angling intentions. The Wredes live on Spruce Ridge Avenue.

C. Scott 'Scotty' Lucas

Scotty Lucas is 25 years of age and has been a member of the Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department for the past three years. Serving as a volunteer fills at least two of Scotty's personal desires — an eagerness and willingness to help his community in a time of need, and "all the coffee he wants to drink."

Scotty, a full time carpenter by trade, manages to spend approximately 25 to 30 hours per month at the fire station taking part in the weekly drills and doing his part in keeping the station and equipment in tip-top shape.

"My most memorable experience as a volunteer? Guess I would have to say it was being a part of the team fighting the 2,000 acre windblown woods fire which occurred in the Savannas," he said, adding, "It certainly put the adrenalin in high gear."

Willard 'Will' Bowman

Will Bowman, 71, is the assistant chief with the Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department and resides with his wife, Ruth, at 3608 N.E. Jeannette Drive in Jensen Beach.

Will first became involved with the local fire department on a day when a large brush fire was being swept by high winds along 707A. He volunteered to help in any capacity he could

That was eleven years ago and Will has been an active participant in the department from that time on

While his experiences have been many, he singles out three structural fires and at least one huge brush fire.

Auxiliary lends a helping hand

Long before the organization of the Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department Auxiliary, it should be noted the wives of the volunteers always played an important role in the efficiency of the local fire department.

Before the elaborate communication system we enjoy today, emergency calls were passed along to the various firemen by their wives who had set up individual telephone call lists.

In the event of an emergency, be it day or night, the local fire chief would receive the original call. While he would leave immediately for the fire station to sound the alarm, his wife would make several phone calls to the homes of other firemen whose wives would in turn go through their own call list to notify others.

Because of the quick action on the part of the wives it was not unusual for several of the volunteers to arrive at the station simultaneously with the chief.

Over 20 years ago in the mid 1950's the ladies got together and organized the Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department Auxiliary, a dedicated hard-working group who support the equally dedicated volunteer firemen.

Most of the members are wives of the firemen. The balance are Jensen Beach area residents who have been sponsored by a member and approved by majority vote. The group meets the first Monday of the month at the firehouse to discuss ways to assist the firemen in their work. Some of the projects are rummage and bake sales, barbeques on the causeway and White Elephant sales at their meetings to make money to stock the kitchen and for incidental expenses.

For many years the Auxiliary joined the firemen in preparing and serving food to hundreds of persons on the causeway for the Fourth of July celebration and other events.

During fires of any duration, the women are on hand to make coffee and sandwiches, pots of chili or kettles of hot soup. A memorable all-day brush fire in the savannas brought the women out in force for 12 to 15 hours to cook not only for the Jensen Beach firemen, but also for volunteers from Rio, Port Salerno, District 1 in Stuart, Palm City and other fire departments. Food was served over a period of hours as the tired and hungry men brought the trucks back to the firehouse to have the tanks filled with water.

At 7:30 the next morning the women were back again preparing breakfast following an early-morning structure fire where Jensen Beach was assisted by Rio firefighters.

Charter members, many of whom are still active with the Auxiliary today, include Hazel Wilkie, Martha Spinney, Eleanor Sprague, Kitty Robertson, Juanita Proffitt, Ann Wortham, Sue Poux, Mildred Tilton, Gladys Dickensheets, Dorothy Smouse, Betty Baker, Elsie Dean, Georgiana Kranitz and April Wilkie.

Current auxiliary officers include; Edith Hill, president; Kitty Robinson, vice president; Martha Moore, treasurer; and Lily Kugel, secretary.

Former auxiliary presidents include Dorothy Ross, Dorothy Luciano, Hazel Wilkie, Juanita Proffitt, Gladys Dickensheets, Martha Spinney, Sara Jane Wache, Hugh Bowman, Marie Yurille, Kitty Robertson, Dorothy Smouse and Mildred Vommer.

Wacha says departments are running smooth

"If something is running right, don't try to make it better or you might make it worse," is the philosophy Frank Wacha says he adheres to in his role as Fire Commissioner for the Jensen Beach and Rio fire departments.

By virtue of being county commissioner, Wacha is the fire commissioner for the district the Jensen and Rio departments are in. And, Wacha says he is well-pleased with the operations of both departments and feels no need to "butt-in" unless asked for advice.

"Because we are charged with protecting the health, safety and welfare of our citizens as county commissioners, it is the commissioner's role to serve as fire commissioner," Wacha said, adding that since he's been a county commissioner for 13 years, he has developed a good working relationship with both departments.

Wacha says it is his role to act as a liaison between the departments and the county commission and to help the departments get the funds they need from the county to operate.

"If the departments have a problem, they come to me and we talk it out. But I try to stick my nose in their affairs only very minutely, because both departments run a smooth operation without my interference," he said.

Wacha noted that it is because of the effiency of the two departments that fire insurance rates for most citizens in the area will soon be going down. And, he said, "We probably have the lowest rate we can get now until we get a better water system - with fire hydrants."

Wacha said Jensen Beach Fire Chief Joe Luciano and Rio Chief Bill Gass both work well with him, and he says the county is well served by its volunteer firemen.

"Jensen Beach and Rio have a tremendous debt to the volunteers of our area, both in the comfort of knowing the emergencies will be handled and in the comfort of not having to pay exhorbitant costs for those services," Wacha said.

Richard Pinsky

Pinsky, president of the Rio Volunteer Fire Department, joined the department six years ago. He said it was Chief Bill Gass who influenced him to join at a time when the department really needed the help.

A dispensing optician practicing in Jensen Beach, Pinsky resides with his wife Jackie and their five-year-old daughter Kyla Mar, at 2960 N.E. Dixie Highway.

He is very enthusiastic about serving with the Volunteer group and is quick to recommend others become involved, if their schedule permits.

Pinsky spends much of his time at the station, attending drills and sharing the many responsibilities.

He is chairman of Fire Prevention Week for the department this year.

Chief Joseph A. Luciano

Joe Luciano joined the Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department six years ago because, as he put it, "Moving to this area upon my retirement, I thought working with the local volunteers would be an excellent way to become involved in the community."

A dedicated worker, Joe was elected chief of the department in January 1977, following the retirement of Randolph Spinney.

Chief Luciano came into the local fire department with five years experience in firefighting techniques.

The chief spends approximately 170 hours per month at the station and enjoys every minute of it.

While Luciano is proud of his department, he is equally proud of the residents of the Jensen Beach area for the support they have so willingly given to the Volunteer Fire Department.

Chief William T. Gass

Bill Gass has done much to help build the Rio Fire Department into a top notch firefighting unit. At 57, Bill lives at 726 NE River Terrace in Rio with his wife, Lillian. They have three children, including two boys serving with the fire department.

Bill works as an auto supplies distributor.

The son of a volunteer fireman, Bill has over thirty years of experience as a fireman, twenty in New Jersey, where he was chief of the Franklin Lakes Fire Department. He is a life member of the New York and New Jersey Fireman's Association.

His most memorable experience was finding an unconscious young man in a burning trailer bedroom about ten years ago.

Gass enjoys firefighting, and says there is a need for more volunteers in the Rio Department.

Comissioner Gunther submits resignation

Sewall's Point Commissioner John C. Gunther submitted his resignation to the town board to become effective December 31, 1979. Choosing not to cite specific reasons for his recent action, Gunther did say that he chose to announce his decision now so that ample time would be given to any candidates choosing to run for office. Deciding to resign within the six month period that constitutes re-election rather than appointment, Gunther felt strongly that his successor be chosen by the public. Elections will be held in March of 1980.

To date, $30,000 has been spent in the aftermath of Hurricane David which puts the town $25,000 in defecit over the $5,000 disaster fund that had been budgeted for the oncoming year. Mayor Gluckler remains pessimistic in his hopes for federal funding and may be forced to transfer other earmarked funds to the clean-up project.

Also posing a problem to the commission is the Southern Gulf Utilities Co., which claims that the franchise fee paid to the town is unconstitutional. In a recent meeting, town attorney Knight stated that the agreement between the two is a binding "contractual obligation" that has been in effect since 1964, and is investigating into the commission's ability to setze the company. This would possibly affect the Martin County proposed takeover of Southern Gulf, however the commissioners have spoken with Wascha and Higgins who claim that the purchase of the Utility Co. wouldn't evolve for quite some time.

The issue of drainage in Indialucie still remains under discussion. Although no action has been initiated against Bessemer, the town is in the process of taking elevations of North Sewall's Point Road to determine whether outfall to the river through easements would be more beneficial than attempting to change the flow of water as it comes down the hill.

Int'l director warns Lions on danger of 'standing still'

'Eighty-five percent of man's learning comes through his eyes," International Lions director Lyonal Lindsey told some 150 Lions and their guests Friday evening, at the Jensen club's 25th anniversary banquet.

Eyesight is the main dedication of Lions around the world.

But, he said, the United States Lions census is losing ground to that in other countries, and it poses a threat to the policies by which the club functions.

In Florida alone, there are 700 fewer Lions members than three years ago, and seven fewer clubs, he said, while in Japan, membership has increased by seven percent. One less American representative on the board and one more from another country could shift the balance of power, he indicated.

"The world is changing, and Lions must change, too," he warned.

He advised the club to develop new programs which will attract and keep younger men in the club.

Al Walker, one of the two remaining charter members of the Jensen Beach Club, served as emcee for the dinner meeting. Harvey Schlemmer, past president, introduced the out-of-town guests — Lions and their wives who had come in from all parts of the district to honor the local club on its anniversary.

Walker gave a brief history of the organization, since its first meetings held at Seymour's, then one of the best dining spots in north Martin County. Since then, he said, meetings have moved to the Anchorage, the Crow's Nest and the Sheraton Inn. They now hold their luncheons at the Village Corner.

Walker and fellow Lion Virgil Wilson have been responsible for the now-famous Pancake Day breakfasts, one of the club's most successful money-making projects.

"In our 17 years," Walker said, "we've served 102,000 pancakes, 4,200 pounds of sausage, 850 pounds of coffee, 510 gallons of syrup, 1,360 gallons of milk, and 4,760 gallons of orange juice."

Funds for this and all the other Lions' projects are channelled into caring for the visually handicapped and those with serious hearing problems. The community, Walker noted, has given the work full support. One example, a Lions' benefit tournament this past weekend, brought some $2,000 into the club's coffers. (Joe Farrell was tourney winner.)

Often, funds come from generous private donations, like one received quite by surprise Friday evening. Martha Moore, who has been a generous supporter and who last year gave $5,000 for a Leader dog for blind Lion Joe Foley, was called up to the podium to receive an award for her beneficence. In turn, she handed Lindsey a check for $1,000, to be used by the Jensen Lions where it is most needed.

The club received another check for $1,000 from Past District Governor William Weiss, in memory of his late wife Dottie. Mrs. Weiss, over the years, gave much of her time to helping the Lions cause, and attended countless conventions with her husband. She was known and loved not only locally, but throughout her husband's world of Lionism.

Foley and his wife alice were at the dinner, and joined in the gesture of appreciation shown Martha Moore. With him were his present leader dog Mr. Jones, and the "retired" Mr. Gunter, both yellow Labrador retrievers. They rested gracefully at Foley's feet throughout the ceremonies.

Charter Monarch certificates were presented to Walker and Harry Jennings, charter members of the Jensen Club, County Commission Chairman Frank Wacha who as a member of the Stuart club was the local club's "founding father," and to Virgil Wilson, for 20 years of service.

Lindsey, the eminent guest speaker, has been in Lionism for the past 28 years. A Texan by birth, he fell in love with Florida while he was in the service, and now makes his home in Lakeland. The international director "got hooked" on the Lions when, soon after he joined, he saw the importance of the work the club was achieving.

"When you see a kid who never saw his mother get an operation that gives him his sight," he told The Mirror, "it makes you feel that you're really accomplishing something."

Lionism, he contends, has a vast impact on the thinking and philosophy of people around the globe.

"It is so big and so influential," he said. "With its 1.3 million members, it can have more influence on people's lives than the government."

Lindsey, whose wife "Charlie" travels with him most of the time, is constantly on the go, attending board meetings and giving talks before clubs. His past week, for example, has included an international board meeting at Jacksonville, visits to clubs in Biloxi, Miss., and Lakeland. He left here for talks in Orlando and Miami.

A wholesale beer distributor for the past 33 years, he now finds little time for the business.

"I have two sons, and I leave most of the work to them," he said.

Festival draws thousands; Gov. lauds county efforts

The Stuart Causeway, on Sunday, was the biggest traffic jam in county history, as thousands surged in for the history making St. Lucie Inlet Festival.

A large segment of the crowd turned out for the specific purpose of seeing a governor in person. The visit of Gov. Bob Graham, as emcee Frank Wacha, Martin County Commission Chairman, pointed out, was a rare occasion. It was the first time in nine years that a governor has visited Martin County.

For a brief half hour, the center of attention was on the speakers' platform, where local and state dignitaries who had played roles in getting the funding for the inlet were seated. Prominent among them were the governor and his wife, U.S. Rep. and Mrs. L. A. Skip Bafalis, State Rep. Chuck Nergard and his wife, Col. James Adams of U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, County Commissioner Tom Higgins (chairman of the festival) and Commissioner Rud Bagwell.

Gov. Graham cited the widening and deepening of the inlet as an important factor in the area's future growth. Calling the connector of the ocean and the waterway a vital step for Florida, he said: "The sea has shaped things that have made Florida so distinctive. This part of Florida is just awakening. Making the sea more accessible is an important part of this state's progress."

Sen. Phil Lewis praised the local government for its tenacity in fighting for the inlet project over many years and many obstacles.

"The local county commission, led by Tom Higgins, spurred it on," he said. "They wouldn't let go, like a dog with a bone."

Bafalis, in a short speech, told his listeners that "When I went to Washington, the inlet was my No. 1 project."

Each of the speakers was to have been allowed five minutes podium time, after the governor's address. But a looming black storm cloud cut them down to what may go on record as the shortest speeches in political history.

With the first raindrop, Wacha hurriedly advised the audience to "run and get the devil out of here."

The mass of people lost no time in taking his advice. In a brief few moments the arena was cleared and people sought shelter under every available inch of tent and awning space as the skies opened in a skin-drenching downpour.

Chivalry showed itself everywhere, as spaces miraculously opened up for members of the Martin County Band, which had performed earlier, and whose first concern was protecting their instruments.

The visiting dignitaries, including Gov. Graham and his party, headed immediately for Sailfish Point, where an elaborate private party was underway. The huge yellow tent set up for the occasion was already half filled with invited-guests — bankers, politicos, and business leaders from both the Martin County and St. Lucie County areas.

One of the guests rating only with the governor as an attention getter was golfing great Jack Nicklaus.

The affair was a Polynesian luau, staged by the Mai Kai of Fort Lauderdale, and complete with grass skirted lovelies performing native dances. The climax came when the dancers entiecd some of the officials to the stage for hula lessons. Rep. Bafalis and Nergard drew big hands for their efforts.

The governor's wife was presented with four Indian chief prints by pioneer Buck Hendry.

Once the rain was over, on the causeway, the festival-goers emerged full force for the water shows, the fish fry and the art show, sodden but undaunted. The highlight of the afternoon came with the appearance of the Valiant Air Command, which performed breath-taking mock air fights. For the latter event, cars lined bumper to bumper along Indian River Drive, as far north as the Outrigger.

The success of the festival was particularly gratifying to the committee, since it was a second attempt. The first was cancelled out by Hurricane David.

As Secretary of Agriculture Doyle Conner said earlier in the day: "Martin County is not going to be frustrated by anything so minor as one little hurricane."

Campbell heads Chamber slate

Dick Campbell, editor of The Mirror Newspapers, was nominated for president of the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce last week.

The nominating committee, headed by Dr. Stanley Wampler, nominated Fred Nettere, owner of WMCF-fm as vice president, Gene Greenwood, deputy executive director of Florida Institute of Technology, Jensen Beach, as treasurer, and Wampler, owner of Jensen Beach Animal Hospital, as secretary.

The directors nominated include William Keel III, Ronald Teal and Barbara Torose, two years; Ron Mitchell, Ted McCluskey, David Lamb, Richard Zurich, Jayne Peterson, Arthur Hanson and Marge Paris, one year.

The elections of officers will be held at the board of directors meeting, 7:30 p.m. on November 12, at which time members of the Chamber will be asked to vote on the slate and any other nominees. An open house, to which the public is invited, will be held at 8:30 p.m., following the meeting, to meet the new officers and directors.

Campbell was president of the Jensen Chamber in 1964, headed the building construction committee and has served for the past ten years as chairman of the Jensen Beach Resort Guide, a Chamber produced promotional booklet.

The Chamber membership now stands at 286, an increase of 41 percent over last year, according to executive director Helen Richardson. Most recently welcomed as members are First Federal Savings and Loan of Fort Pierce, Port St. Lucie Branch, Darlene A. Burba, Realtor; Alfred I. Collins, registered broker, James A. Burba, New York Life Insurance, and William D. Sikes, Realtor.

The Chamber is again sponsoring a Halloween painting contest for the children at Jensen Beach Elementary School. The students are invited to paint "Spookies" on the windows of businesses around town. In the past, the event has successfully held Halloween night vandalism to a minimum.

Gable difficulties, hangover from David

If you've been having television headaches, they're probably all part of a large hangover from Hurricane David.

"We've had more than our share of problems on the trunk line leading to Jensen Beach," Chuck Locke, vice president and general manager of Perry Cablevision said Tuesday.

The chain-reaction of problems began coming to Perry's attention on Oct. 13, with a damaged cable on the Langford estate. Work crews were unable to get in because of a low-hanging power line, and the repairs were completed only within the past few days.

Other trouble areas cropped up in Rio, at Beacon 31 and the River Club, and within the same week, other amplifiers had to be replaced in the Rio area.

All reported trouble spots have now been corrected, Locke said, but that doesn't mean their storm-spawned woes are over.

It's likely that others may be uncovered where connections have been weakened by the storm," Locke commented. "We may still be finding and repairing storm damages through January and February."

Daylight savings time ends Sunday

Don't forget to set your clocks back an hour this weekend, or you may find yourself out of step with church or work.

Daylight savings time, on which we've been operating for the past six months, reverts to Eastern Standard Time at 2 a.m. Sunday, so when you go to bed Saturday night, it will be wise to reset the clock from 10 to 9, or 11 to 10, depending when you go to bed.

In case you're still confused about which direction the clock hands should be turned, rely on the fewer-workable cliche: "Spring forward and fall back."

Wet weather keeps blues from coming in

BY DONNIE WILKIE

The bluefish that normally invade our waters in the Martin St. Lucie County area will be delayed this fall, at least until the uncommonly wet weather, which has plagued the area ever since Hurricane David swept through Jensen Beach and Port St. Lucie, departs.

Ros Ellis, a local fishing observer, feels that "it should take quite a while," even after the weather dries out, for the blues to start coming into our rivers and close to shore — especially in this area as opposed to areas to the south, where the Gulf Stream is closer to land.

"The reason the blues aren't showing up in the numbers they usually do at this time of the year is that everything is drifting out," said Ellis Monday. "Lake Okeechobee is full with all the rain coming down, and it's all fresh water."

Bluefish do not like the fresh water, and instinctively shy away from it at its first sign.

"With all that water pouring from Lake Okeechobee toward the canals and the Inlet," continued Ellis, "there is no way for the bluefish to come in. Farther south, where the Gulf Stream is closer, they're getting a few more blues, but they won't show up here until all this weather goes away."

"And who's to say when this will let up. We haven't gotten as much rain, but we're still getting the heavy rains. When it does more like it'll stops, it'll still take a lot of tides to sweep it all out."

The weather, unfortunately, must cooperate, and it hasn't, and won't for at least another week. The pattern established since early September of sunny mornings and wet afternoons should continue, at least through next Tuesday, though the weekend could be a summer than lately one.

Despite the odds against them, the fishermen on the high and low seas found a couple blues who couldn't retreat in time.

The only reported catch of blues all week was credited to Jack Prell, who snarled two of the creatures in the Indian River, using the new gold Tony spoon. He also yanked in a couple trout.

Other than that, said Ellis, the week "was a little bit of everything," and a quick review of the local action will confirm that theory.

Joe Monty grabbed four pompano and four drum fish, while parked in the surf at the Jensen Beach. He was using pieces of shrimp.

L. T. Weeks lined 25 sheephead, a fine catch, while stationed just inside the St. Lucie Inlet. he used live shrimp. Meanwhile, Lars Johnson pulled up four snook while fishing in the surf with red-tail hawk.

The triumvirate of Charlie Kessler, John Crawford and Bob Duncan gathered 15 snapper, a snook and a channel bass. They were located in the Indian River, and they used, for the most part, live shrimp.

Richard Behre bridged a seven and a half pound channel bass while on the Jensen Causeway bridge. He used live shrimp.

Ed Wagner and Sandy Adair reeled in nine trout, a snook, a channel bass and one grouper, all in a day's effort, while wading in the Indian River. They used trout touts; Clay Shumann snagged four snapper, two trout, an eight-pound jack and an eight and three-quarter pound flounder, all while wading in the Indian River. He used live shrimp.

Bill Bailey caught six spots and four whiting in the surf, using pieces of fresh shrimp; Jerry Green lolled two sheephead, a grout and a whopping 15 jacks, though he was wading in the river, using live shrimp. John Hayburn also had a fine day's worth of fishing, capturing six weakfish (cousin to the trout), three croakers and a six-pound grouper. He used his boat in the Indian River, and achieved his catches with a nye-lure.

Bob Hullugs tamed five sand perch, in the surf, with fresh shrimp; Jim tulley leashed three snook, in the C-24 Canal, using a red-tail hawk.

Finally, Ada Frenock hooked a four and three quarter pound black bass, while fishing in the Savannas. She used a jelly worm (or plastic worm); and Richard Monglello teamed up with Steven Marangio to zap four sheephead, in what Ellis described as a "nice batch," while on the Jensen Causeway bridge. They used live shrimp.

Weather wise, the area recorded 1.02 inches of rain over the seven day period of October 16-22, though more was expected within the next 48 hours. That was a decrease of .46 from the previous total of 1.48 for October 9-15.

The palm trees here don't lose their leaves don't turn shades of yellow and gold.
The thing we like best about the old palm trees, is they never, ever, ever get cold

..Mykinos is a small Greek Island. It has small concrete houses that are white as snow. If at all possible, take a cruise around the Greek Island and stop on this secluded spot in the Agean sea. There you will find shops of all kinds, restaurants with food that will excite the stomach. Check out a clawless lobster that is big enough for three people! Explore through small walkways only to find small cantines and pubs hidden away. At night Mykinos lights up and you can imagine the island as a candle floating in the ocean.

Concert to open music series at FIT

The Classic Chamber Ensemble, consisting of two violins, viola, cello and piano, returns to the Florida Institute of Technology Chapel at Jensen Beach, Friday evening, Oct. 26 at 8 p.m. to open the 1979-80 Performing Arts Concert Series.

This outstanding ensemble has been enthusiastically received in two previous series appearances for their excellent performances of works from the Classic and Romantic periods. This year chamber music lovers will hear works by Mozart, Greig, and Beethoven.

Tom Tsaggaris, former director of the Greater Palm Beach Symphony, studied violin at Columbia University and the Juilliard Conservatory, and was invited to play first violin under Dimitri Metropoulos. He has also played under the directorship of Leonard Bernstein, Arturo Toscanini, and Fritz Reiner appearing as first violinist for the Metropolitan Opera, Minneapolis Symphony, Radio City, and International Ballet. he founded the Adelphi Symphony and Chamber Orchestra in New Jersey, which he conducted for sixteen years.

Melissa Ross, viola, studied with Victor Stern, staff violist with A.B.C. of New York, and majored in instrumental music at the University of Miami. Appearing with chamber ensembles throughout Dade and Broward Counties, Miss Ross is a member of the Florida Philharmonic, Civic Opera, and Greater Palm Beach Symphony, and is principal violist with the Coconut Grove Chamber Ensemble.

Bess Simon, violinist, is a recent resident of Florida. Formerly from Pittsburgh, she received her music degree from Carnegie Mellon University and her M.A. in music from the University of Pittsburgh. In 1957 she founded the Gateway to Music (five musical programs for children in the schools). She is also a member of the Fine Arts Players of Pittsburgh.

Marlene Woodward, pianist, began her studies with her father, Josef Sadlon, at age six and attended Juilliard and the Manhattan School of Music before moving to Florida in 1957. Since then she has soloed on Television's Channels 5 and 12, Radio WJNO, and at the Royal Poinciana Playhouse, in addition to serving as staff pianist for the Greater Palm Beach Symphony and the Civic Opera.

This concert is open to the public and is free of charge, as are future concerts throughout the series.

EMT course takes much planning

The announcement of an emergency Medical Technician course being offered in Jensen Beach was not really an impressive message. It just confirmed that the course would be available.

The amount of time and organization involved to get the course is another matter. The Mirror would like to recognize the many facets that had to put together to get the course here.

The reason for a night course is simple; there are too many potential volunteers who would not be because of their employment, be able to go to Indian River Community College in the day time to take the course, thus would not be able to qualify to serve.

Upon seeing the need, Samaritan Resident Maxine Bailey contacted IRCC and asked that an instructor be assigned to teach such a course. IRCC responded, and the course was set up for two nights a week.

The class would be held at the Samaritan Ambulance Squad room, and the applications and paper work was handled efficiently by IRCC officials there also made textbooks and work books available to the students.

Martin Memorial Hospital got into the act with physical and dental examinations, coordinated by EMT coordinator Doni Haas.

Applications for the class came in from Indiantown, Hobe Sound, Stuart, Palm City, Port Salerno, as well as from Jensen Beach and Florida Institute of Technology. Two young people from Port St. Lucie also made application.

In all, 25 applications were processed.

The class also needed an ambulance, provided by the Samaritans.

Civil Defense provided a projector, and IRCC provided the 24-hours of emergency room training.

The class will write final exams for state EMT qualification on February 15.

We believe the above is a tribute to the close working relationship that has been built between the community, Samaritans, IRCC, the hospital and Civil Defense in the interests of emergency care.

Community pride

The inlet festival is now history, and was an outstanding show.

It has been a long time since a special event of the magnitude of The festival has been produced with as much community support. It indicates the sincere desire of the people for a new inlet, and their appreciation that Congress has finally been able to get the project under way.

The delay caused by Hurricane David must have made it better.

Only an occasional shower (and one gully-washer) interrupted the celebration.

The dog-fighting, World War Two aircraft lived up to their exciting expectations. The water sports show was excellent, the food good, and the cooperation between the many civic clubs was outstanding.

The two coordinators of the event, Ray Navitsky and Doris Sheridan, deserve highest praise.

Let's find a reason to do it again. It was fun.

Support Bike-a-thon

This Saturday, bicycle riders will be participating in a "Wheels for Life" bike-a-thon in support of St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital.

We hope that all residents of Jensen Beach attend the event at Crane Creek Ranch from 8:30 a.m. to offer moral and financial support to the drive.

Sponsors are still needed. Persons desiring to participate or donate can get blanks at schools and at Lil Saints Stores throughout the area.

Grass law upheld

The grass ordinance of Port St. Lucie has been upheld, and a salute to the city attorney is due.

The grass ordinance is a needed law on the city books, and every property owner should be held responsible for the health, safety and welfare of the people of the town.

Grass growing above twelve inches in height is considered endangering to the health and safety as vermin and snakes find ready refuge in such ground cover.

We are pleased that the ordinance has been clarified by the court, the proper place for such clarification.

Bugaboo deflated

From the time I was a tot, right up until this Sunday, I've hated crowds.

It has actually been a fear verging on a phobia. It stems back, I'm sure, to the times when mother used to herd us three kids from the cottage on the Delaware into Philadelphia and in to John Wanamaker's huge emporium, an awesome big place where mothers could leave their children in Kiddieland while they did their shopping all over the store.

I hated it from the moment when we got on the jammed commuter train on the city's outskirts, my little bespectacled face jammed into strange backbones, belonging to faceless huge entities all of whom I was sure then, hated little girls and delighted in crushing them to death.

The dread of huge masses of people continued through my childhood, especially in the summer months when an alien organization named Chattauqua put up a huge tent in what I considered my personal front yard (actually it was the village green) nightly drew throngs of people I'd never seen before, and spent the evenings making noises discordant to my ears. During these hard times, I'd cower in my ivory tower on our second floor, waiting and praying for the time they'd go away.

Even the toughening calouses necessarily grown by working as a newspaper person failed to dull my fears of vast numbers of people crowded into one lump of humanity. The worst and most frightening assignment I ever took on was covering a Ku Klux Klan meeting in Oakland Park. That night-blackened, featureless horde, all intent on the spale of hate which was emanating from the hooded figures lit only by a flaming cross gave me nightmares I couldn't escape for months afterward. That was the deepest hell of my crowd phobia.

Over the weekend, however, two experiences proved to be therapeutic antidotes to my inner devils. One was the Friday night 25th anniversary of the Jensen Beach Lions, and the other the Inlet Festival on the Stuart Causeway. These two events, though totally different in nature and intent, taught me that crowds are not always synonymous with terror, but rather can be mass media for joy and pride and love for home and fellow man.

To most people, the Lions gathering wouldn't rate as a "crowd." The head count at the Stuart Elks Clubhouse was in the neighborhood of 150 people. But in most cases, the mere fact of walking in and taking pictures among that many people still fluttered my pulse, dried my mouth, and made me certain I'd do everything wrong.

Not so with these Lions. Though there were many I didn't know personally, it was a room full of friendly, individual faces, all on my side. Even if I goofed, I knew from the moment I walked in, they'd understand and love me none the less for it.

Perhaps it was the fact that, for the past three weeks, I'd been a Lion—or at least I felt like one. It fell my happy lot to research and prepare the stories about the club's progress during the past 25 years, and every bit of it was right up my alley.

As a victim of bad eyesight since the beginnings of my memory, I have always been keenly aware of the tragedy of blindness. At the age of 11, I underwent an eye operation by a doctor who told my mother, in my hearing, that "she won't see after she's 18." Since then, every morning I wake up to a world still visible, I thank The Lord for eyes.

As I walked in on that crowd Friday night, every one of them became my personal benefactor, because the Lions, around the world, have one dedication — to save sight for the needy, and when possible, to restore it. Thus every one of these men and their ladies, who give so much of their time to people like me, immediately became my personal friend.

This, I told myself, was not a crowd. It was a kindred gathering of people who care.

On Sunday, the size of the crowd I was to face and fight at the Inlet was 100 times bigger than the Friday night affair, but the only enemy in its midst appeared to be the heat. I had taken my car over to Elliott Museum for parking, and to catch a trolley, back to the action, on the advice of vice-chairman Doris Sheridan, and naturally, just as I pulled in, a trolley pulled out.

But that part, too, proved a delight. I was invited inside to await the next by museum director Janet Hutchinson, and I whiled away the time with a lovely visit with Emeline Paige, former assistant director now partially retired but still working the Saturday-Sunday shift. The governor might already be speaking, I told myself, but this is more pleasant, anyway.

The trolley finally came, and much to my surprise, there was no shoving, pushing or jostling. Everybody, it seems, loves a trolley—from the little kids floating balloons over their heads to the white haired couple nostalgically reminiscing about the electric trolleys they used to ride in Philadelphia. Everyone is everyone else's friend on the trolley.

Even when the deluge came, bringing to a screeching halt the talks by the dignitaries on the speaker's platform, the drenched crowds became just a gathering of friendly individuals with a common problem. After taking a few sodden pictures, I finally gave up and ran to the fish fry pavillion, which was already jammed like sardines in a tin. A wet gentleman graciously pushed back a step making room for this water-logged reporter.

Crowds, I found, are not to be feared. They are made up of people just like you and me, all seeking for a momentary place in the sun to share in person a common cause or a brush with the great or near-great who brought them together in the first place.

That for my phobia.

I may die from dieting

I made a deal. I will, I will go through with this diet.

It has been painful thus far, but I am determined that no amount of pain will deter me from losing those ten pounds wrapped around my waist.

The one slice of unbuttered, un-orange marmaladed protein toast tastes more like one piece of the soggy ceiling tile that Hurricane David caused to droop from my office ceiling. The grapefruit for breakfast was tart, curling my tongue and allowing me to pucker to the point that only a cigarette would fit in my mouth. Add black coffee to that, without rich, soothing, white cream.

I'll sure be glad when the pink grapefruit comes out.

I'm going crazy. I don't know how much longer I'm going to be able to hold out. I am fighting the best I can.

What do you think of a quarter pound of thinly sliced roast beef, and one sliced tomato for lunch? That is it. No martinis, no hamburger smothered in mushrooms, or loaded with ketsup, tomatoes and onions. It's barbaric.

Salli told me it would be tough. The Scarsdale diet is one that chemically balances your body. It takes two weeks, and promises about ten to fifteen pounds off in that period.

I had heard about the diet one Saturday morning when we finished playing tennis Don St. Onge came into the breakfast room with me and ordered one piece of unbuttered toast and black coffee.

He said the diet was working for him, that he had lost quite a bit. The Foxfire Kid added that both he and his wife were on it, and when Sandy joined us she ate the other piece of dry, unbuttered toast and had black coffee.

So, when Salli told me that she was going on the diet, I said I would join her to help her and myself lose some weight.

Drinking coffee all day makes one use the bathroom considerably. The only other thing is water. I can have as much water as I want. I plan to gurgle through the day.

Salli laughed when I decided to try to make the two weeks of Coffee, tomatoes, sour grapefruit, ceiling tile and coarse roast beef.

"There's no way," she laughed. "When you come home at night and pour that martini ,what about that?"

I pulled in my stomach, stuck out my chest, raised my fist, and said, "I'll do it. I will make the sacrifice for my bod. my bod is a temple of good health. Besides, Ransom told me that I was slower because of the bulge over the belt of my tennis shorts."

"I'll believe it when I see it," Salli said disparagingly.

I think it was when Dr. Penick gave me my annual physical that I had the first hint that I needed to lose a little weight. He said I was ten pounds over what I weighed two years ago, and should plan to get some of it off.

I talked with Bill Bartlam when I was over there to get my back back in shape, and he told me in a not-so-subtle hint that extra weight could be the cause of a back problem. He added that I have had back problems for several years...about the amount of time that I have been overweight.

I don't care. I must push the pain to the back of my mind. The grinding, burbling of my stomach must be ignored.

I see a large, Idaho baked potato. Steam rises through the melting butter. A large glob of sour cream is ladled gently on the top of it all, and then a sprinkling of bacon bits tops off the magnificent creation.

No. No. I must not think of that. I'll look out the window of my office...out the window to the magnificent view of the Indian River, with billowing white clouds over the Atlantic Ocean, clouds that remind me of whipped cream topping on a pineapple-marsh mallow sundae at Susie's.

Get thee behind me, calories.

I think I can. I think I can.

I must think of "The Little Engine that Could".

It takes backbone, courage, changing one's entire lifestyle for two entire weeks.

(I'll bet that little engine was carrying a load of giant sized pizzas with mushrooms, sausage, green peppers, anchovies, onions...ALL THE WAY!)

It has been hard. But, I am determined. Have faith in me.

Today, the first day, I have endured the first two meals. Tonight is dinner. One step at a time. If I can get through today, I'll face tomorrow.

Carolina saves the clock

I've listened to my last alarm for awhile.

The other morning, I came perilously close to an act of vengeance against my alarm clock which I know I would have regretted.

I'm still not sure how I managed to wake myself enough to realize that the immediate pleasure I got from a karate chop to the clock would be more than offset by the pain in my hand which would no doubt immediately follow the chop.

Even that pain may have been worth that one beautiful instant when I vanquished the Westclox and, in doing so, declared to the world I would no longer be its slave.

I'd already worked from early in the morning to late at night on Monday and Tuesday, so when 7 a.m. Wednesday rolled around, I was not what you might call fresh and rested and ready to set the world on its ear.

Not only did I hate my Westclox and irritating noise it was emitting, but I also hated myself for placing the alarm so far away that I had to get out of bed to shut it off.

You'd think after awhile it would shut itself off. But not this $3.95 bargain of a timepiece. Nothing doing. By previous experience I knew it could go on forever.

So, I stumbled out of bed, my heart full of malice and my hand rearing to give that clock its just reward.

Ah, then it struck me, and by the time I reached that beautiful little clock, my hand was relaxed and a cat that ate the goldfish smile came to my lips.

What struck me was the realization that this was the last time for two weeks that I would have to listen to an alarm clock.

That's because as you read this, I'll be up in the gorgeous mountains of North Carolina, enjoying the spectacular beauty of the leaves changing color. And, if you're still having the same weather that was hanging around for the last week or so before my vacation started, you'll be wet.

Now it's not very often at all that I would swap my beloved Florida residence for one anywhere else (except perhaps for one on an island southeast of here). But I have a feeling I'm going to be enjoying North Carolina a lot more than you'll be enjoying the soggy weather here.

Now I'm not saying I'm going to relish the cold weather we'll no doubt be having in Carolina. Cold weather and I are not even remotely compatible, so I'll have to disappoint all you folks who wish I'd leave town and never come back.

But I can live with cold weather for two weeks if it means not having to listen to an alarm clock and not having to wake up, look out the window, and study the various shades of gray.

It will be sort of a working vacation, as my parents are building a log cabin — something they've dreamed of for years. But I'm ready for some outdoor, physical work instead of the indoor, brain (?) work I've been getting my fill of at the paper.

Besides that, I'll get to see loads of relatives I haven't seen in months. My brother, Alton, and his wife, Jean, and their children Allie and Ellen will be there. So will my sister, Pris, her husband, Jim, and their kids, Briah and Sara. My sister, Susan, will be there a few days and my grandparents may even make it up from Savannah, I'm told.

Since all four of my parents' kids have left the nest and are living in different (and distant) cities, it will be the first time in about a year that so many of us will be getting together. I'm looking forward to catching up on the news and to renewing friendships with my young nieces and nephews.

Ug, a thought just occurred to me. With those little nieces and nephews around, there'll probably be enough racket in the morning to drown out 20 alarm clocks. I'm sure they'll be much cuter than my Westclox is though, and I'm counting on you folks in Jensen to straighten out the weather so it will be nice again by the time I return.

Correction

In the story last week relating the donation of a van to senior citizens for transport to daily congregate meals at Langford Park, The Mirror erred in reporting the agency donating the van. It should have been reported as "Treasure Coast Senior Services, Inc.", an agency that serves the four county area.

Also, the Martin County Commission allocated matching funds of $6,000 to the program.

The Mirror regrets the error in agency identification.

Hints on senior driving

The final exams are over for the tober 55 Alive/Mature Driving ses and the senibes came through th colors flying high, some with 100 rcent and most with 80-90 percent rs course has so much for what ails senors driving that a few more teresting items as given by structor Leon LaRoche will be ted.

1 — From the Roosevelt Bridge to ral Gardens is the most hazardous rip of road in Martin County. Plan ur trip to avoid it.

2 — Texaco corner, opposite Bailey nt Yard; Commercial St. & Skyline ; Commercial & US 1; South of osevelt Bridge, turn off to wntown; turn off to Publix, going uth on US 1; entrance to OBP; and riveways on 707 to Ft. Pierce are s that have most accidents, or ose calls. Don't daydream at these ints.

3 — All left turns are a potential ard. Plan trip to make mostly right rns. Also, remember while car is in rt it is the safest, so ask yourself, "Is is trip necessary?" Use the yellow ages more.

4 — An interesting note, there have en NO accidents at all at Confusion rner for the past 2 years. Folks now it's a problem, so use care.

5 — Some points to help avoid cidents: Be comfortable behind the heel with both hands on wheel at 3 nd 9 o'clock positions, don't stare ectly at road ahead, scan the total ndside, stay out of other's blind ots and watch your own; keep a istance open around you for maneuvering room, concentrate, be repared for the unexpected; analyze ose close calls and if at fault, correct. ow down for tailgaters, let em go by. on't slow down too quickly, after the est of a hill, other drivers can come up suddenly.

Really, there is much more and all seniors should take advantage of these classes, they could save a life, your own and will get you a 10 percent reduction in your Colonial Penn Insurance. For information and to register, call Leon 334-0416.

Every year as the snow birds return we find that some friend or acquaintance didn't make it back and in case after case, it was because of lung cancer, emphysema, chronic bronchitis, or heart disease, all caused by cigarette smoking. Three hundred thousand die needlessly each year and there is no longer any controversy, all major medical and health authorities are in agreement, cigarette smoking is the 'killer'. Most seniors still around have quit smoking, but one million teenagers (your grandchildren) are taking it up each year. So, here are a few very serious things to consider.

Smoking 2 packs a day cuts the oxygen intake 40 percent; and only a few puffs slows down the action of the cilia that keep germs and dirt from lungs; 85 percent of compounds inhaled remain in lungs; nicotine contracts blood vessels making heart work too hard; tar dmages lung tissue causing cancer; carbon monoxide robs the blood of life-giving oxygen. And, so it goes, every puff, some say, reducing your life one minute.

Then, you the non-smoker had better watch out, for now it has been proven, that second hand smoke is very detrimental, too. It makes the heart beat faster, there is more cadmium in burning tip than in inhaled smoke and the cadmium causes the hypertension, emphysema and chronic bronchitis, there is double the normal amount of carbon monoxide in a smoke filled room, children of smokers have twice the normal amount of common illnesses; 2,000,000 Americans each year have asthma attacks from second hand smoke. Non-smokers should have the right to breath clean air in all public places.

Seniors, can't do too much about the problem; as long as Federal Government subsidizes farmers to grow tobacco, but at every chance they should tell their grand kids and above all set the good non-smoking example.

Martin County Health Dept. Blood Pressure Clinic last Friday at Langford Field was almost back to winter time attendance with 59 customers, of which 17 were newcomers. There is also nutrition counseling, always on the third Friday of each month, 9 to 11 a.m. Many seniors over 65 yrs. are getting their FREE FLU SHOTS, at the Health Dept. in Stuart, Mon-Fri 1-4 p.m. For info call Nurse, Mrs. Gen MacManoman, 287-2277.

CHAPTER EVENTS

Season's first member meeting with 150 attending was held Thur. Oct. 18 at the First Presbyterian Church. Pres. "CMac" Maclntyre rolled the meeting along in great style (see AARP Bulletin for details). However, here are a few items of general interest.

Al Tucker, as Membership Chm. reported that membership is back at 694 after a low of about 600, when the delinquents were dropped in July.

"CMac" said the Health movie programs were all set for 9:30 a.m. on each picnic day. The first will be on Cardiovascular diseases.

Wendy Morris presented a nomination list for the 1980 year, as follows: Pres. "CMac" Maclntyre; 1st V.P. Frank Edwardson (Tempi; 2nd V.P. Wendy Morris; 3rd V.P. Ruth Woodruff; Secretary, Betty Taylor; Treasurer, Doris Case and new directors: Lyle Burden, Herb Hiers, Pearl Wyse, Josephine Bell, Mildred Capanna, Robert Mauer and Ben Gardner. Nominations were closed and election will be held at next meeting.

Mr. Bruce Ferguson, Field Representative for Social Security was the speaker and a very interesting one.

Kiwanis regroups for new season

The Jensen Beach Kiwania Club is starting anew, regrouping for a new season in the effort to save the faltering luncheon club, according to Hugh Curren, new president.

Curren said the club plans to renew luncheon meetings at Holiday Inn Oceanside every Monday at noon, featuring a speaker and all the formalities of Kiwanis International. He also plans a membership drive to rebuild the club.

The Jensen Kiwanians plan to move their luncheon meeting place to the Foxfire Restaurant as soon as it can be arranged.

Potential members and visiting Kiwanians are invited by Curren to attend Monday noon meetings at the Holiday Inn Oceanside.

Halloween fest Saturday

To put everyone in a proper Halloween mood, the Jensen Beach Elementary School Parent Teachers' Association is staging its annual Halloween Festival this Saturday, at the school on Savanna Road.

There'll be spooks aplenty, with food, fun and games for people of all ages. Again this year, the main attraction will be the Spook House, where ghosties and goblins will scare you delightfully out of your wits.

A costume parade, for all children of school age, will begin at noon. Prizes will be awarded to the scariest, funniest and most unusual.

Jody (Mrs. Delbert) Bond is this year's chairman. She says door prizes will be given away during the afternoon.

The festival is the PTA's one major fund-raising project. Proceeds will be used to buy classroom equipment not budgeted by the school system.

Redeemer plans dinner Oct. 24

The Redeemer Lutheran Church will sponsor a meat loaf dinner on Oct. 24, from 4:30 to 7 p.m. The church is located at 2450 SE Ocean Blvd.

Children's meals will be offered at half price. People may call for information and reservations at 286-0911 or 287-0434. Customers may either eat at the church or take them out.

A REPORT TO OUR CUSTOMERS BY FLORIDA POWER & LIGHT COMPANY

FIRST OIL CRISIS HAS FAMILIAR RING
The time: 1850. The problem: a whale-oil crisis. Whale-oil for lamps and sperm-oil for candles was in short supply because of the decline in whaling. The price of sperm-oil was soaring.
The U.S. Department of Agriculture reported: As a consequence the United States is becoming dangerously dependent on foreign sources.
Sound familiar?
Then, as now, politicians called for tax incentives and governmental programming. Fortunately, however, 129 years ago cooler heads prevailed and America used its technology and resources to resolve the crisis.

FLORIDIANS COULD FACE ENERGY ECONOMIC STING
If Florida's electric utility industry must reduce its oil consumption 50% by 1990 – as proposed by the Administration – then a heavy economic penalty will be borne by Floridians out of proportion to that of the rest of the nation.
Presently, Florida utilities produce 65% of your electric needs with oil and natural gas. Gas must be replaced by 1990, according to existing law.
Replacing oil usage 50% by converting to coal or converting to nuclear would require an expenditure approaching $20 billion! Other options, such as liquefied or gasified coal, solar power, etc., simply aren't available to fuel our electrical needs in the time frame to 1990.
And if the utilities can't convert? It's "Catch-22" time again. There is a penalty payment on oil usage starting at $12.50 per barrel (1979 dollars) which could be $25.00 per barrel in 1990 (allowing for inflation). That would be a $1.3 billion per year penalty beginning in 1990.
Why should Florida consumers be singled out for such a painful economic burden? Let your elected officials know how you feel.

GOVERNMENT PAPERWORK IS FOREVER...
The King, in Lewis Carroll's unforgettable "Through the Looking Glass" once shouted about the horror of something that he would "never, never forget!"
"You will, though," the Queen said, "if you don't make a memorandum of it."

IS THERE SOMETHING NEW UNDER THE SUN?
The Electric Power Research Institute reports that more than 1500 residential and commercial solar applications are now being tested throughout the country by electric utilities at a total cost of $18-$20 million. And the Institute itself will fund an additional $24 million in solar research over the next five years!

UNCLE SAM'S BIG FINANCING PACKAGE FOR INVESTORS

QUESTION: Is it true that the Federal Government has established a lending program for apartment house owners like myself? I own a property with 50 apartments and my biggest problem is that I have three mortgages on the property. One of the mortgages is due next year and I am concerned about obtaining financing so that I may consolidate all of these loans. If there is a program such as the one I mentioned, what are the lending guidelines and how do I go about obtaining such a loan?

ANSWER: You heard right. There is a lending program which is, in effect, backed by the credit of the Federal Government through Ginny Mae Securities. In trade circles the program is referred to as the "223-F" program, and because of guarantees involved, the terms available are quite favorable. Apartment properties of eight or more units which are at least three years old are among the properties eligible for 223-F-type loans.

The lender is able to lend up to 85 percent of the sales price of the property, or up to 85 percent of the appraised value, whichever is less. It is not necessary for the property to be sold in order to obtain a loan, and you may refinance your existing property and obtain a loan within the range set forth above. The proceeds of the loan are available to repay existing debts and to effect certain improvements which may be desirable on your property.

Because the loans are written for a term of up to 35 years and are self-amortizing, the repayment rates generally are conducive to generating a favorable cash flow. In addition, because of the nature of the backing for these loans, rates are generally lower than conventional market rates.

I would be happy to discuss this program with you, or answer any other investment or financing question you may have.

Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 234-6747, or stop by:

Al Walker holds record: 25 years perfect attendance

Al Walker, well-known and loved member of the community for the past 30 years, holds a singular distinction in the Jensen Beach Lions Club. In his 25 years as a Lion, he boasts a perfect attendance record.

Al started strong when the new club was born, and he shows no signs of letting down. He was the first charter third vice president; he service as president of the club in 1967, and since has held important offices at the district level.

He has been zone chairman, deputy district governor, and was secretary to Bill Weiss when the latter served as district governor.

To many, Al Walker is "Mr. Pancake." He has been chairman of the now-famous Pancake Day breakfasts which the Jensen Lions stage twice a year, taking turns with Lion Virgil Wilson to head up the massive feasts held in early December and in the spring. The job involves getting every member of the club into the act, schools workers, chefs for the spread which hundreds of area residents have enjoyed.

Al also served for two years as chairman of the Leo Club, a youth organization sponsored nationwide by the Lions. The Jensen Leo Club was the first one in the state, and the 14th internationally.

Walker and his first wife Lillie came to this area from Long Island, where he was with a bakery company. World War II interrupted his career, and he saw four years of service with the military policy in this country and England.

After the war, they decided to make Florida their home. They bought a store and gas station in Rio, which they ran until 1958. The first Mrs. Walker died, and in 1975, he married his present wife, Jacqueline.

Al has been active in many civic projects. He is the only remaining charter member of the Rio Civic Club, which he helped found, and he is an honorary member of the Chamber of Commerce.

He is also a past president and vice president of the Jensen Beach Business Men's Association; a past president of the Langford Park Association; a charter member of the Jensen Area Samaritans, and charter director of the Jensen Beach-Rio United Fund Association.

A former Martin County Schools trustee, he is a member of Acacia Masonic Lodge 193 of Stuart, and at one time served as chief of the Rio Volunteer Fire Department.

Al is a dedicated member of All Saints Episcopal Church. Last year, he served as senior warden, and this year is junior warden. He has been a spearhead in the church building fund, and gives a generous amount of his time to doing anything that needs doing for the church.

Al has one son, Tom, of whom he is justifiably proud. Tom, a dean's list student, just graduated from the Picken County Vocational and Technical School in Georgia. He is 21.

Officers -- then and now

Many capable and faithful leaders have served the Jensen Beach Lions Club during its 25 years of existence. Neither age nor pressure of business have kept them from doing their utmost to help the club grow and thrive.

The charter president, in 1954, was Thomas Crooks. Since that start, they have been: J.B. Svec, 1955; Harry Hennings (also holder of a perfect attendance record) 1956 and '57; Elmer DeWitt, 1958; James Lovvorn, 1959; William Weiss, 1960; Wallace Fletcher, 1961; Chester Homan, 1962; James Dean, 1963; Ed Schmidt, 1964; Harry Heritage, 1965; Al Walker, 1966; Edwin Miller, 1967; Carl E. Tyroff, 1968; Pat Ward, 1969; Anthony C. Rebeiser, 1970; Elwyn Burnett, 1971; David McConnell, 1972; Virgil Wilson, 1973; Arthur E. Riley, 1974; Harvey Schlemmer, 1975; Tim Weiss, 1976; Gerald Wilkinson, 1977; and Arley Johnson, 1978. The president is George Mack.

Other officers, in that charter year of 1954, were: L. Macy Parkman, first vice president; William Bessemer, second vice president; Al Walker, third vice president; Wally Gardner, secretary; Joseph Svec, treasurer; Louis Gideon, Lion Tamer, Charles Porter, Tail Twister; Howard McCormick and Harry Jennings, directors.

Other officers who have been serving during the current year are: Robert McKinley, first vice president; Sam Johnson, second vice president; Lyall Bowen, third vice president; Bob Wilson, secretary; Don Redit, treasurer; Bob Phillips, Tail Twister; Art Riley, Lion Tamer, Walter Redit, bulletin editor; Bob Knudsen, Wyndham Barnes, John Crawford, and Ed Keeling, directors.

JB Lions celebrate 25th birthday

The Jensen Beach Lions Club, one of the "roaringest" units in the state, is this month marking a major landmark. It is the club's 25th birthday.

The club, now numbering some 60 members, began life with 24 charter members. It was formed under the impetus of Frank Wacha, now chairman of the Martin County Commission, who then was a zone chairman for Lions International.

Wacha noted that many members of the Stuart Lions Club, to which he belonged, resided in the Jensen-Rio area. It was time, he suggested, to give birth to a separate club to serve this area.

The job of organizing such a club took a little recruiting, because the international regulations made it necessary to have 24 new members to get a charter. Transfer members were not to be counted.

The organizing Lions literally beat the bushes for eligible and desirable candidates for membership. Jensen Beach, in 1954 had a one room post office, no banks, no doctors, and a one lane wooden bridge crossing over to Hutchinson Island which then was practically uninhabited.

But 24 good men were found to sign on, and a charter was duly granted to the club, which was under sponsorship of the Stuart unit. Charter members included William Bessemer, Cecil Branford, Thomas Crooks, Reg. Darvill, Wally Gardner, Rocco Giordano, Louis Gideon, Gene Giffen, Carl Henrikson, Harry Jennings, John Larson, Howard McCormick, A.A McLarty, L. Macy Parkman, Allen Pitchford, Charles A. Porter, Langley Robertson, Joseph Svec, Gordon Swarthout, Ralph W. Ward, Albert Walker, Walter Waren, Albert Willeke, and Harry Wood.

Today, special honors go to Al Walker and Harry Jennings. Both have perfect attendance records at the meetings, wherever they were held.

Many of the original group have since died or dropped out because of ill health. But others have joined to take their places. At one time, membership reached 90, but has now leveled off to 60.

The club began its business-social luncheons, held twice a month, first met a Seymours, in those days considered THE place to meet for most organizations. They recall that the food was excellent and reasonable. (You could get a steak and all the trimmings for $1.50.) They moved from Seymours, after it stopped serving meals, to Frank and Velma's Crow's Nest in Rio, then to the Sheraton Inn on Hutchinson Island. Meetings are now held at the Village Corner.

Bailey wears three important hats

Nobody in the residence at 1821 N.E. 22nd. Ave. is likely to ask the musical question: "Bill Bailey Won't you please come home," because Lion Bill Bailey and his energetic wife Maxine are two of the "comingest and goingest" people in town.

Bill is the clearing house for three of the Jensen Lions' most important functions, as chairman for the collection of eyeglasses and hearing aids for the needy, the club's screening clinics and collection of eye-doner cards, and investigating all applications for help in any eye and ear-related disability. He is also white-cane chairman, and distributes the significantly colored canes to all visually handicapped people who need them.

Lioness Maxine is president of the Jensen Area Samaritans, the volunteer ambulance service which the local Lions helped found. Both of the Baileys are on the run much of the time answering ambulance calls--she as an Emergency Medical Technician and he as a driver.

A native of a little West Virginia town with the improbable name of Jane Lou (near Clarksburg) Bill spent 27 years with the Albrecht Grocers of Akron, Ohio. During those years, Maxine put in 15 years as a private detective, at that time an unusual job for a woman. They chose Jensen Beach as their retirement home, and Bill transferred his Lions membership from the Goodyear Heights chapter in Akron to the local club. He has been a Lion for 12 years.

For the Baileys, its a family affair. Their daughter Joan is wife of Harvey Schlemmer, past president of the Jensen club and one of its hardest workers. Their other daughter, Sue Mozzell, is director of foods for the Children's Hospital in Akron. Bill and Maxine are understandably proud of both of their children.

In his capacity as a chairman for eye and ear victims among the needy, Bill's job is an arduous one. With each application, he goes into the home for a thorough interview, with the parents if it is a child involved, checks it through with the doctor, and makes his recommendation to the Lions board of directors.

In most cases, the victim of the disease is financed by the local club.

"If we can't handle it all, we apply for help from the Lions Foundation," he explained.

The Foundation is a state-wide organization to which all the Lions Clubs in Florida contribute annually. The funds are pooled and redistributed according to the local needs.

"And there are plenty of applicants. "This year, we've processed between 20 and 25 cases, both children and adults," he said.

One of the most touching and fulfilling cases helped by the local club was a little girl who at six months was totally deaf.

"We sent her to a doctor in Miami, and fitted her with two hearing aids," Bailey said. "Now she can understand, and can say quite a few words."

They also help cataract victims with money for necessary operations. One recent case aided by the club was a woman who had to have cataracts operations on both eyes. This operation is one of the most expensive, ranging around $2,000 per eye.

"The Foundation helped with $700 of the cost," Bailey said.

All of the area eye specialists, from surgeons to the technicians who make glasses, are aware of the Lions' fine work with the visually handicapped, Bisley said. They cut their prices considerably, as much as 50 percent, for patients who come to them through the Lions program.

Both Maxine and Bill Bailey are finding themselves working harder than they did when they were actively employed.

"I just get to sleep a little longer," Bill grinned.

Lions Remember

Ray Bates, former member of the New York Daily News sports staff, was spruker for the Jensen Lions in 1976, giving a history of the Golden Gloves and its importance to the youth of the country.

The Jensen Lions received a gift of $1,000 from an anonymous donor for its many charitable works in 1978. The check was presented by Lion Carl Schmidt, who said the money was to be divided between the Lions Foundation and the Leader Dog program.

Wacha: JB Lions' 'Founding Father'

Frank Wacha, now Martin County Commission chairman, has over and again proven his initiative in setting wheels rolling for the Jensen Beach-Rio area. And the Lions are particularly aware of his get-'em-done talents. It is he who is credited with giving birth to the Jensen Beach Lions Club.

Wacha, a Lion of long standing, was a member of the Stuart Club, and in 1954 was Zone Chairman, responsible for development of clubs in the area extending from Indian River County to West Palm Beach, and west to Belle Glade.

"I suggested there was room for a Jensen Beach and Jupiter chapter," he told The Mirror.

At the time, 18 members of the Stuart Club lived in the Jensen-Rio area. To charter a new club required 21 new members. It didn't take long to recruit the necessary number, and the 16 members transferred immediately to the new club, giving Jensen what is now one of the most effectively active units in the state.

Wacha, a native of Teanack, N. J., decided that this particular part of heaven in Florida should become his permanent home when he was stationed at Camp Murphy during World War II. (The former Camp Murphy is now Jonathan Dickinson State Park.)

The young Wacha entered the U.S. Army right out of high school seeing service in Italy and Africa. When he was discharged, he entered the University of Florida, where he graduated as a Certified Public Accountant in 1948. He has been practicing CPA in the Jensen-Stuart area since 1950.

He discovered early that he had a penchant for politics. In 1956, he ran for State Representative, unsuccessfully. But in 1960, his bid for a seat on the Martin County Commission put him into the political act. He served for four terms -- 12 years.

He then took a hiatus to try another shot at a state seat -- the senate this time. Again, he didn't quite make it, so in 1976 he ran again for County Commission. He went in unopposed.

In his role as a Lion, he helped found the Stuart Club's first Little League team, one of his favorite projects. He managed the first championship team, and coached them from 1954 to 1970.

As nearly everyone knows, Frank Wacha is one very busy man, and has been since choosing the Jensen area as his home. He is a past president of the Jensen Chamber of Commerce, finance officer for the American Legion Post 126; has served as a director for Martin Memorial Hospital, and as a trustee on the Martin County Library Board. He was recently appointed by the governor to the State Veterans' Advisory Council, an organization that plays watchdog on any legislation affecting veterans. He is also a life member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 10166.

Wacha, a sports-minded health advocate, was instrumental in establishing the Parcours at Langford Park, an exercise workout track financed by the Palm Beach Area Heart Association. The course was laid and is maintained by the county.

He was also a spearhead in getting the causeway built to replace the old wooden bridge over the Indian River. The main bridge was named in his honor.

Understandably, with all his other duties, he has avoided taking any office in the Jensen Beach Lions Club of late. But he is permanently on record as one of its founding fathers.

Lions Remember

At the Jensen Lions Charter Night banquet, held Sept. 15, 1954 at Seymour's Inn, the new-born club ate roast turkey with dressing, mashed potatoes and gravy, peas, chef's salad, and ice cream cake. Robert Peck, then president of the Stuart Lions Club emceed the event, with Charles Peckells as toastmaster. They danced to the music of Jackie Collins and the Hot Shots, and "founding father" Frank Wacha introduced the guests. Charter President Thomas Crooks accepted the charter.

BLOOD BANK BENEFACTORS—The Palm Beach Area Blood Bank in Stuart receives double benefits from the Jensen Beach Lions, with gifts of both blood and money. HERE KITTY—The Jensen Beach Lions' mascot turns a coy look toward Arley Johnson, president for the past year of the club. Arley will take part in the celebration of the 25th anniversary on Oct. 19 at the Stuart Elks Club.

A BIG UNCLE—Lion Harvey Schlemmer went to great length to be Uncle Sam for the gala which included the Jensen Area Samaritans. The Jensen Lions were instrumental in the founding of the excellent volunteer ambulance service which serves the entire Jensen area. The beard, incidentally, was authentic. Harvey grew it especially for the occasion, though he had to convert it from black to white.

President Mack a latecomer --but lively

George Mack, who was seated as president of the Jensen Beach Lions Club in June, is claimed by his fellow clubbers "the oldest known Lions president."

If so, chronological age has very little to do with the output and dedication of a man--at least of a Lion. At 82, Mack is up to his neck in the many-faceted work the club which is celebrating its 25th anniversary Oct. 19.

If any one of the club's activities could be singled out as of prime interest to the venerable president, it is the semi-annual pancake days. It was Mack who instigated the idea of holding the sumptuous breakfasts as money-making projects.

"At the first one, we served 400, and we thought that was pretty good," he told the Mirror. "Now it's between 1,300 and 1,400."a

They're going to have to raise the price this year, he bemoaned, because of the high price of the ingredients.

"We have to pay $1.75 a pound for sausage," he said. "At that price, 500 pounds of sausage is alot of money. But we're going to stick to the good pork sausage."

That's what the customers like, and that's what they'll get. Mack is sure people will understand the need for a jump in price of a ticket, and it won't deter them from coming.

The pancake day is a full scale two day project, Mack said.

"It keeps at 20 people working on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., and on Sunday, every member is there to work at least part of the time," he commented.

"Our motto is 'We Serve,' and we really do," he said.

The next one is the first Sunday in December.

Mack is a comparative late-comer to Lionism. A Jensenite since the early 50's, he first became a Lion in 1963. When his first wife died, he dropped out for some time, but re-activated in 1972. Since that time, he has been a director and first vice president, prior to taking over the presidency.

A Chicago native, Mack is a veteran of World War I. His career was as an electrotyper.

"We made plates for practically every magazine in the country," he recalled.

It is a dying art, he said ruefully. What with the arrival of "cold type," or photo-offset, the call for electroplate for magazines is growing smaller and smaller.

The Mack family's ties began coming to Florida on vacations in 1946, and were already in love with the state, but not with the water.

"We decided we were going to explore everything from Fort Myers to Canaveral," he said. "We stopped here for a night at the Royal Poinciana, then one of only tourist places in town. I asked the manager for a drink of water, saying I hadn't had any good water since we left Illinois. He handed me a bottle out of the icebot, and I think I drank the whole bottle. We stayed another night, and decided Jensen was it."

At that time, he recalled, "they said the population was 100, and they were bragging."

"We looked around, and I was

offered a piece of land running from the river to the ocean, at $600 a foot," he said.

Their first home was on Path Street. He and his present wife now live in a charming airy house sitting half-way up the hill on Center Street. George's much-used desk is in the corner of a window-lined room overlooking the river.

Much of the welter of working material on that desk relates to his job with the Lions.

"It costs a lot of money to be a Lion," he observed. "We go to all the meetings and conventions, and of course we pay our own way--that gets expensive."

He worries a little that the community may weary of the club's constant rounds of fund-raising projects, but the needs to be met are great.

He cited one example the scope of work done by Bill Bailey, sight chairman.

"Bill Bailey always has someone in the line for glasses," Mack said. He also heads the projects of providing hearing aids as well ag glasses for the needy, and of conducting eye screening clinics in the schools.

Mack gives credit to many of his members for the unselfish dedication they give to the work of the Lions Club--especially to Tony Rehseiser, who is "our unsung hero," who works for Grummman Aerospace, but still finds time to serve with the Jensen Area Samaritans which the Lions helped found, and to do any job in the club he is called on to do; to Al Walker, who is "my good right arm," and to Harvey Schlemmer, another "right arm."

These people and many others make meaningful the club's motto: "We Serve."

Jennings, charter Lion, is native of Martin

Harry Jennings, Jensen Realtor, holds a double distinction in the Jensen Beach Lions Club. He is one of only two remaining active charter members, and he is the only one in the club who is a native of Martin County.

In Lionism, Jennings and his wife Emily were pioneers in the Exchange Student program, which was his "baby" for a number of years. The Jensen Lions, now 25 years old, first adopted the student exchange in 1960.

"We began with a boy from Denmark," he told The Mirror. "I don't believe any textbook in the world can teach human understanding like going to another country and getting to know the people on a personal basis."

He knows from first hand experience. The Jennings had several exchange young people in their home as temporary family, and their daughter Linda (Mrs. Dick) Grimes spent part of a summer in Japan with a family there. It was an educational and enlightening experience for her, the proud father said.

Harry has given much of his time to Lionism over the years, since the club was born in 1954. He was a charter director, and he served for two years as president, in 1956 and '57.

Harry Jennings has been a first-hand observer of the vast growth of the supper county area through his lifetime. His grandparents moved to Stuart from Nebraska, and his mother was born here. His father's family migrated from Harrisburg, Pa., and the two met and married in Stuart.

A graduate of the University of Florida, Harry did post graduate work at Florida State University. For several years he was with the state employment service, five years here and five more in Tallahassee.

He now has two real estate offices, one on Indian River Drive in Jensen and the second in Fort Pierce. He divides his time between the two operations. He is also active in the St. Lucie County Democratic Executive Committee.

In addition to Linda, the Jennings have two other children, Dr. Lane Jennings, a practicing physician in Daytona Beach, and Mrs. Lee Bush, who lives in White City. Linda, a medical laboratory technician, has returned to school to get her degree in nursing.

Harry is especially proud of his wife. "Emily is the only living charter wife," he said. "She's been making arrangements for the club for the past 25 years."

Among those pictured enjoying the occasion were Bill and Mary Falkon, Jim and Jackie Reisner, Leonard Frost, Barbara Malan, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wacha, Helen Overbey, Wally Redt, Robert Bradley, Lynn and Bill Bushman, Owen and Ruth O'Hare, Jim and alsee Matas, Vi and Ed Singer.

Blind Lion Joe Foley and Vincent Vanacore were in charge of a project sending blind Jane Woodard to Rochester, Mich., where she got a leader dog and training to work with the animal. Jane was receptionist at the Pioneer Occupational Center for the Handicapped. The trip was paid for by the Jensen and Stuart Lions Clubs.

Joe Foley is blind ambassador for Lions

Joe Foley, member of the Jensen Beach Lions Club, is a walking testament to the important work Lions around the world do for the visually handicapped.

YOU'll find Joe at every Lions function. You will also find with him his "eyes," leader dog Mr. Jones.

Joe Foley is blind. But thanks to the help of the Lions and the benevolence of a prominent local woman, Martha Moore, Joe is able to be his own man.

Five days a week, he helps teach ceramics at the Tri-County Rehabilitation Center. And around the calendar, he is off in every direction throughout the state to address schools and clubs, demonstrating the capabilities of the visually handicapped with the help of a leader dog.

Joe is the official "Ambassador" for the Jensen Lions Club, taking every opportunity to spread the good work where it is needed. He feels it is his mission, his way of saying thanks to the Lions.

"The Lions gave me my most precious gift, my sight," he told The Mirror, pointing to the alert yellow Labrador Retriever at his feet.

Leader dogs don't come cheap. The price tag on the dog plus the training necessary for melding the two personalities is $5,000.

"Martha Moore sat down and wrote a $5,000 check," Joe said. "She made it possible."

Mr. Jones is Joe's third leader dog. The first one, Eric, and the second, Mr. Gunter, were "retired" when their capacity to function fully dimmed. The essential with a leader dog is that its owner put total reliance on that animal. In walking along city streets or anywhere else, the dog's decision can be a matter of life or death. When that relationship diminishes, it's time for another animal.

Twenty-five years ago, Joe Foley was a well-to-do subcontractor in Long Island, N.Y. He had a house, two cars, and life looked rosy. Then he began losing his eyesight.

"I wanted to fight," he is quoted in the Lions Magazine as saying, "but I kept walking into walls."

He and his wife sold their home and retired to Stuart. For ten years, he depended on his wife and his white cane to get around, but he was able to do little except work around the yard. His wife got a job with Sears Roebuck, to eke out a living with his Social Security check.

Then he was discovered and taken on as a project by the Jensen Beach Lions. They quite literally brought him back into the mainstream of life.

He takes his ambassadorship seriously, spreading the good news of the Leader Dog program at every possible chance.

One of his "converts" was an Episcopal priest, who was blinded and lost one leg to diabetes.

"At first he said 'I don't need a dog. I have my wife,'" Foley related. But after hearing Foley out, and learning of the independence the blind Lion had achieved with the help of leader dogs, the priest changed his mind. He has now found the new freedom the highly trained dog makes possible.

In another case, Joe took his message to Spring Lake, a convalescent home. One of the residents, Earl Minus, was also handicapped by blindness. He, too, has now embraced the Leader Dog program.

Joe is highly empathetic with all handicapped people, and does everything he can to promote positive attitudes among those who approach him.

"One day a gentleman was in here, pouring out his troubles to me," Joe said. "Then a little girl in a wheelchair passed by, smiling. He didn't have another thing to say."

15th ANNIVERSARY—Georgia and Wally Fletcher pay the tariff as they enter the 15th anniversary luncheon of the Jensen Beach Lions. Taking the money, seated, are John Larson and Curl Tyroff.

Lions' Main Emphasis

The Lions Club, both locally and internationally, has one major dedication: helping the blind and the visually handicapped.

And the Jensen Lions throw themselves into this worthy cause whole-heartedly, the year round. Literally thousands of hearty appetites have made the club's semi annual pancake breakfasts a must on their culinary lists, eating the delicious food in the full knowledge that their price of admission will be well used for such efforts as the leader dog program, providing eyeglasses for the needy, or sending a visually handicapped person to summer camp.

These are but a few of the club's eye-oriented projects. If you drop by the post office, you'll find a box for collecting old eye glasses. And each year, you'll be called on by a Lion, selling light bulbs with the proceeds to help brighten the lives of the blind in many ways. These constantly busy men also have an annual sale of brooms which are made by the blind, and candy sales with the same monetary goal.

In other eye related projects, the Jensen Beach Lions helped organize the taping for the blind studio, which recently moved to Jensen Beach. It also supplies white canes for the blind, provides them with Braille books, playing cards and radios with Braille knobs.

Some of their money helps to purchase an invaluable $25,000 lazer beam machine for eye surgery at the local hospital, and helps pay for much needed eye operations for those who could otherwise not afford it.

Statewide, the local group contributes to the Florida Lions Eye bank, and issues eye donor cards; donates to the Lions International foundation and to the Florida foundation for the blind. They also frequently buy eye glasses and hearing aids for those unable to afford them. They are benefactors for the Leader Dog program for blind people.

As if all these weren't enough, the local Lions work with the fire department at the July 4 displays; with the United Fund, the annual Turtle Watch, halloween carnivals, and for years have conducted Easter egg hunts.

They also worked on the construction of Langford Park, and ran the concession stand there. They sponsor a Girl Scout and Boy Scout troop and Little League teams; they host and sponsor exchange students in the international program; take part in the Good and Country Day ceremony, and collect old newspaper for the Free Energy Inc.

Each year, they prepare Christmas baskets for the needy; donate to the CARE program, and can be seen in all the local parades. To be a Lion means total commitment to the community and its needs.

Other fund raising projects include a golf club raffle, a Christmas basket raffle, car washes, a turkey shoot, and selling flags.

AWARD PRESENTATION—The Jensen Beach Lions Club's active contributions to the community got Wallace Gardner a plaque expressing appreciation for his work in 1955. Taking part in the ceremony, from left, are [illegible] Gamble, Bill Porter, Gardner, secretary, president [illegible] Svec, and Mary Parkman.

A FLING ABROAD—Dottie Weiss, late wife of Past District Governor Bill Weiss, went oriental at the Woman's Club International Bazaar held in March 1972 in Tokyo. She was an active member of the local Lionesses.

Lions' 'student swap' gives insight

The Lions International Exchange Program probably does more in promoting mutual understanding and love between people of different countries than any other one effort on the part of nations or organizations.

The Jensen Beach Club has been particularly active in this endeavor, both in hosting foreign students and in sending local young people into homes abroad.

The Jensen Club, under the chairmanship of Harry Jennings, a charter member of the local unit, Art Riley, and Tony reheiser, has concentrated their efforts in past years on Japan and Finland.

In 1974, Mr. and Mrs. Jennings set the pace by taking five Japanese exchange-ites into their Indian River Drive home. The guests were Kumiko Yumoto, Sonoe Matsui, Keiko Sato, Kenichi Nagaoka and Shigeyuki. Helping to make them at home were Nellie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chuck More and the Jennings' daughter Linda, both of whom were in the program two years before.

In 1975, the Art Rileys hosted Yoko Tsuji of Yokohama, Izumi Kizaki of Komoronagano, and Yoshimichi Ouhata of Saitana. In the same year, Kathy Riley went to Japan to learn about life with a Japanese family. Also, in that year, the Richard Pinskis took Japanese Nasaposki Ogaa into their home.

In 1976, the Art Rileys hosted Izumi Kizaki and Yoshimichi Ouhata of Japan, and Jensen's Girard Rehsiser had the fun of visiting a Japanese family.

The 1977 exchange students came from both sides of the globe. The Robert McKloeys played host to Miss Kaisa Peuralahti of Finland. From Japan came Takashi Same Shima sponsored by the Kagashimo Lions Club, who stayed with the Arley Johnsons, while Judy Riley, Donald Wilson and Karen Johnson got the trip to Japan.

Donald and Blanche Redit were host and hostess to the 1978 visitors, Miss Leena Haiva and Miss Tiina Moilanen.

And this year, Virgil and Shirley Wilson took two Japanese young people, Koki Yamashita and Masahiro Tsujimoto into their home. In return, Curtis Wilson of Jensen stayed with a German family in Emden.

The exchange gives the young people involved more than just a bird's eye view of their country and ours. The students generally arrive as a group, from all parts of the countries involved. They spend an allotted amount of time with the hospitable families who have chosen them, then they get together and go by bus on a tour of important points throughout the nation before returning home.

Through the Lions, it is a breeding ground of hope for the future of peace throughout the world.

EXCHANGE STUDENT HONORED—Walter Woods, exchange student who went to Japan in 1974 under the aegis of the Jensen Beach Lions Club, is presented with the Lions pennant to be exchanged in the orient through Lions International. Walker's mother, Mrs. Ruth Woods, participates in the ceremony conducted by Al Walker, right.

Lions come from every walk of life

The democratic nature of the Jensen Beach Lions Club is like a slice of life in America.

Members represent every type of business and profession from optometrists to truckers, and from carpenters to engineers. It is an example of Americanism at work.

A score of them are retired, from all walks of life, and from all parts of the country. These men are now finding themselves as busy as they ever were, but on a volunteer basis, ploughing back into society the good they derived from it as breadwinners.

The retirees in the club include Bill Bailey; Director William Barnes; third Vice President Lyall F. Bowen; Joe Foley, Regional Leader Dog Ambassador; Harold Gardner, a life member; Earl Grant; James E. Gum; Chester Homan; Floyd S. Jones; Albert J. Kerner; Director Edmund Kisling; Director Robert Knudsen; Martin Knitzach; Fred L. Lademann, Jr.; President George Mack; Bruce Merris; Edwin D. Miller; Paul Ness; Walter Parker; Bulletin Editor Walter Redit; Russell Speck; Al Walker (who "retired" into a busy plumbing business); Robert Ward Jr.; William J. Weiss, state chairman for CARE, a director of District 35L and Past District Governor; Secretary Robert M. Wilson; and Vincent Vanacore.

Among the still-at-work members are Stephen Allison, an optometrist; Joseph Bevis, with the Armellini Trucking concern; Matthew Butteri, owner of the Village Corner where the club has its luncheon meetings; Charles Carnachi, owner of the Fantasties Shop; Director John Crawford of the Snug Nook; Harry Jennings, owner of Jennings Realty Inc.;

Also, District Chairman of extension and past President Arley Johnson, of Arlington Estates; Second Vice President Samuel Johnson, who is with the Martin County Road Department; Tom [illegible] Kaminshiner, with the Florida Institute of Technology marine department; Nick Manim, with [illegible] in Aerospace; David [illegible] Powell, a carpenter; Vice President Robert McKinley, partner in the firm of the Lauber [illegible] Software Company; Calvin Nichols, business agent with the Carpenters' Union; Terry A. Olsen, a carpenter; Tail Twister Robert E. Phillips, owner of Tilewetters; Richard Pinsky, optician; Treasurer Dan Reehl and Frank Walton Jr., both with Grumman Aerospace; Lion Tamer Arthur Riley, owner of Art Riley Services; Ferdinand (Pete) Rule, owner of the Greek Liquor store; Albert Schreiber, owner of Guido-a-Home; [illegible] Vice Chairman of Sight Conservation Harry Schlemmer, also a past president, with Handy Insulation; Albert Theobald, with Grummans; Frank Torow, owner of Torow Construction; Frank Wachs, Chairman of the Martin County Commission and a Certified Public Accountant; Garry Wilkinson, with Sears Roebuck in Fort Pierce; and Virgil Wilson, owner of Virgil's Barber Shop.

50th anniversary

Mr and Mrs Albert E Goodwin marked their Golden Wedding anniversary last week, with a dinner party at their home at 4363 Skyline Dr.

Some 30 guests attended the affair, including their daughter Margaret Lashbrook, who came down from Paoli, Pa. to honor her parents on the important landmark in their lives. Mrs Lashbrook is a registered nurse.

The Goodwins also have a son Edward, who is director of school meals for the county school system in Sylvania, Ohio. Edward was unable to make the party.

"His father in law died the same night," Mrs Goodwin said. "He was where he was needed most."

The former Erma Erickson and Albert Goodwin said their wedding vows on Oct. 12, 1929 in Highland Park, Mich. He was an engineer for Chevrolet in Detroit, and she was a secretary for the Pennsylvania Railroad.

"We lived in the same house from the time we were married until we came here," Mrs. Goodwin recalls.

They moved to Jensen Beach in 1970, and have been active members of the Community Church.

The anniversary dinner party was catered by Charly Byers. Part of the decoration included the more than 50 cards from friends and relatives.

Party completes restoration for House of Refuge

There will be a launching early in 1980 at the Gilbert's Bar House of Refuge to mark the completion of the landmark's restoration, when its very own rescue boat takes to the water. Funds raised at the Martin County Historical Society's annual benefit have been earmarked for this project, according to President R. H. Philbrick, who appointed Mrs. James H. Rowe committee chairman.

The public is invited to attend the November 9 event. Tickets may be reserved by calling the secretary at 225-1961, or purchased at the Elliott Museum, which is open every day from 1 to 5 p.m.

For the third year, the museum's ice cream parlor will be in operation during the cocktail party, from 5:30 to 7:30, with members Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Childs dispensing sodas and sundaes in the usual popular flavors: chocolate and vanilla.

The proprietors will wear period costumes from the museum collection, and a team of members will be on hand to assist patrons who can't decide whether to have nuts on their sundaes or just a cherry, or to lend a helping hand when - - as is likely to happen - - the second scoopful topples off an ice cream cone.

Construction of the House of Refuge boat will start as soon as the antique automobiles are moved into the new wing of the Elliott Museum. Using plans brought from New England by John R. Bumstead, a winter resident who volunteers at both museums, Patrick G. Kenny of Ft. Pierce, an old hand at small boat building, will set up shop.

Known locally as the marine artist responsible for the "official portrait" of the House of Refuge, which hangs in the boathouse and appears on the cover of the historical society's History of Martin County, Pat Kenny started watching boat builders at work when he was something less than five years old - - making, himself inconspicuous at the boatyard of his maternal grandfather, Patrick Fitzgerald, near his saltwater farm home in Waterford, Prince Edward Island. Here he saw dories and fishing boats created from local cedar planking, sturdy enough to withstand the chilly waters of the North Atlantic which are, by Florida measuring, "cold in summer and frigid the rest of the year."

Each boat was individual, Kenny says, although to the casual observer they might look like peas from the same pod. "But it isn't like that. By the time I was 15 and allowed to work after school and through the summer, I knew that it was the thrill of seeing the creating of a new being - - a boat with its own character, personality, and beauty that fascinated me, rather than curiosity about the many shop tools on Grandfather's bench, or the tantalizing smell of the cedar planking coming from the steam-box. I know this because in the late fall and winter, when the same men were busy building sleds, I never went near the place."

Kenny's first boats were made from the diamond-shaped cork floats he helped himself to from herring nets. "Rigged with three or four goose feathers for masts and sails, I had every puddle filled with them - - and they sailed, too."

When Pat grew out of the cork float fleet, and wasn't actually working on boats under his grandfather's supervision, he was sketching boats in every possible position, size, and shape. Right now, he is busy preparing paintings for a one man show at the Elliott Museum next February. "Mostly," he admits, "they'll have something to do with the sea." Once in a while, Pat paints a few flowers or a lobster.

The House of Refuge boat will be 25' long, 8' wide, and be fitted with three sets of oars. She'll be clinker-built, lap-strake, topsides and seats varnished, and the hull painted white* to resist more heat.

It's Showdown Time

Saints ready for Indiantown rematch

It is what they have been pointing toward all football season. Ever since a first-week loss to the Indiantown Firebirds, the Port St. Lucie Upper Division Saints of the Martin County Junior Football League have been waiting for the rematch.

And now they've got it.

The Saints cruised past Port Salerno, 26-0, last week, improving their record to 4-1 in the Upper Division's National Conference. But that record is good only for second place behind Indiantown, which is perfect at 5-0.

When the two teams collided the first time, in the mud of Indiantown, the Firebirds retained their status as the power of the league, but just barely, 12-6, and this time, Port St. Lucie coach Jim Evans thinks it will be different.

"If you play to beat Indiantown, that's the ballgame," said Evans, whose "prepare for Indiantown only" quote of three weeks ago nearly backfired against Jensen Beach. But when challenged, the Saints have only responded with more strength, and Evans knows that it is this will to win that will decide Saturday night's struggle.

"The team that wants to win the baddest will win it," he said, though noting the unique position his squad is in after their six-point loss in the first game with the Firebirds.

"We have to win this game by at least seven points," he stated, "because if we win, the teams will be tied in the standings. If both win or both lose next week (the final week), then the team that scored the most points in our head-to-head match-up will be the conference champions."

Last week's game illustrates the gap between conferences.

The Panthers (now 3-2) and the Saints fought fairly evenly, though at no time did Port Salerno mount a serious drive. Curtis Wilson edged the Saints ahead with runs of four yards in both the first and second periods, and quarterback Jim Hardison made one of the two extra-point attempts good with a pass to Spur Shepard, giving the homestandings St. Lucians a 13-0 halftime bulge.

After a scoreless third period, Jerry Roberts stormed into the end zone from six yards out, making it 20-0, and Hardison completed the scoring with a 14-yard dash late in the game.

It was not a case of Port Salerno being out-talented as it was their being outmanned.

"If he (Panther coach Johnny Dotson) had more kids out there, he'd really had a tough team," remarked Evans. "That was the hardest hitting 13 kids we've ever faced, but I've got to believe they just ran out of gas."

Wilson led all rushers in the game with 113 yards on 11 carries, while Roberts added 101 on 15 efforts. In all, the Saints' running game has been the team's strength.

Evans gives much of the credit for his fine season effort to his assistant coaches.

"Except for one touchdown by Jensen Beach, nobody has scored on our defense but Indiantown," he bragged. "And that is mainly due to Mark Zarello, our Defensive Coach. We like to call him 'Zero Zarello' around here."

Evans added that his Offensive Coach, Walt Wilson, "is good enough to be the Head Coach. He's done a wonderful job keeping the things I can't worry about organized.

"In this program, we continued, "every kid plays. When we get a touchdowns ahead, everybody gets to play. We don't run up the score on anyone. We like to give each individual a chance to do well."

Game time is 8pm, or immediately following the completion of the Lower Division game. All games are played at Sportsman's Park.

CAN'T WAIT-Fort Pierce Central quarterback Peter Barriner may not look ill the best of moods, but it's probably more nervousness than anything else - his Cobras must face AAAA top-ranked Merritt Island Firday night. The expected crowd at Lawnwood Complex is 10,000 - 12,000. The Cobras beat MI in 1971, 27-25, then lost 42-6 in 1972. They rebounded for a 10-7 win in 1973, but the rivalry was soon cancelled. Only the new District 10-AAAA alignment brought these fierce reival back together again.

Cobras face number one Merritt Island

BY DONNIE WILKIE

When the high school football season was barely born, in the first few weeks of September, pigskin prognosticators were sure of only one thing — somehow, some way, Merritt Island would face either Martin County or Fort Pierce Central for the District 10-AAAA championship, and the winner would rate as a favorite in the early rounds of the state playoffs.

Since the Martin County Tigers have stumbled to a 3-3 mark, the Cobras have taken over the block, their 34-7 thumping of the Martin Countians having proven that point, and now look toward the almighty Mustangs.

A crowd of some 10,000-12,000 fans will pack Lawnwood Complex Friday night to see what could easily turn into the state's best regular season game, as the Cobras, 6-0 and coming off a 41-7 plastering of hapless West Palm Beach-Twin Lakes, try to derail the defending state champion Mustangs, who dismantled a tough AAA Cocoa squad last week, 34-21.

"What's happening to us now is because of each and every game we've played," said Phil Farinella, the Head Coach of the Cobras, when asked if the lopsided win over Twin Lakes really meant anything. "If we were 2-4 right now, no one would even notice us."

Indeed, many folks have been taking notice of the Cobras. Since their climb into the top ten AAAA schools three weeks ago, they have rated tenth, seventh and fifth, and a victory over the Mustangs, who haven't lost in 20 outings, would certainly improve that standing.

But still, Farinella is cautious.

"This still wouldn't win the district for us. We'd still have to beat Vero Beach at the end of the season in order to avoid a three-way tie (forcing a vote of the district's principals, whiche almost certainly would favor Merritt Island).

"But I don't really think that our kids could let a Vero Beach rise up and beat us safter we beat someone like Merritt Island."

"We can't beat ourselves," said Farinella. "We just can't make it easy for their offense to score on us. I'm sure they'll show us some new wrinkle — everybody saves something for the big games, but the whole ballgame rests on how well each team adjusts to what the other is doing."

Farinella was asked if Merritt Island had any one weakness.

"Maybe their halftime show."

"Neither team has given up many points or yards," added the coach, "so it's hard to say whether it will be an offensive or a defensive game. you never really can tell what will happen in a game like this. I just hope it lives up to its billing."

On offense, the Cobras line up with Peter Barriner at Quarterback, while brother Stoney and Winston Franklin are the starters at the running back slots. But with Ron Lee and assorted others, the Cobras often can throw (and do) as many as six backs at their opponents. On the passing end of Barriner's bullets are wide receivers Luther Sandifer and Victor Phillips.

The Mustangs (also 6-0) feature sophomore quarterback Jeff Wickersham, a fill-in for the injured Steve Childers. But Wickersham has done as well as any leader on the Sapce Coast for the entire East Coast, for that matter!

Behind him are runners Keith Edwards and the dangerous Walter Battle, while Wickersham's favorite air targets include split end Carl Armstrong and tight end Henry Davis.

"I don't care if we're rated 200th, the district is what counts," asserted Farinella, and the math is simple enough for a third-grader. If the Cobras lose, they could go 9-1 and still not win the district.

Powder Puff: A look at this year's version of the MCHS tradition

Quarterback Miles looks for Junior breakthrough

BY DONNIE WILKIE

It was a scene borrowed directly from a Hollywood script.

Picture this: A young, aspiring quarterback, who after going unnoticed through the initial phase of preparation for "the big game," is finally spotted and thrown into the role of starting signal-caller. Everyone lives happily ever after.

Well, believe it or not, that is about what happened at Martin County High School, where dozens of young women are working hard to prepare themselves for their "big game," the annual Powder Puff Football Classic, scheduled for Saturday night at Tiger Stadium.

Jensen Bleach's 15-year old Rose Miles was the star of this particular script, which, at last check was progressing on cue, with Jim Hogan, the coach of the Juniors (Class of '81), proclaiming her as the starting quarterback for the Junior-Senior clash.

"It was the last day for deciding positions," Miles said, "and I was playing offensive end. I started throwing a football with Sherman Conrad (the MCHS varsity receiver who is out for the year with a knee injury). Before long, he walked up to (Assistant Coach Ron) Ashley and said 'There is your quarterback.'

"After that, I played quarterback."

Miles, however, in the tradition of Powder Puff football, will have to share her duties with perhaps as many as two other members of the speedy squad, including Carolyn Knott.

"She's the starting quarterback," flatly stated Hogan. "She can throw the ball, but she's not a pure passer. Rose will be our running quarterback, and Carolyn will be the passer."

Of course, each can fulfill both roles. "In the clutch, Rose can throw well."

Indeed, one look at the slightly smallish Jensenite would indicate a role as a runner, but once Miles puts the ball in the air, one is firead to blink and make sure they are not dreaming.

The secret behind her strong, and accurate, arm can be found in her favorite sport — tennis, in which she rates as one of the area's top junior players. With her arm properly developed to stroke a tennis ball, Miles has no trouble when it comes to tossing 25 and 30-yard passes.

"The Seniors have more experience, but I think it will be a good football game," she said when asked about her team's chances. "There are always rumors around school about how the game is fixed, but I think we have a good chance to win."

Speed seems to be the theme of the Junior effort, with Gloria McIntyre, Ametha Summers and Heather Flinn making the backfield one of the fastest in Powder Puff history.

"We're fast!" smiled Miles. "Gloria is one of the fastest girls I've ever seen!"

But most importantly, Miles likes the whole idea of playing Powder Puff.

"I like it. I think the girls around school have to do something, so the guys don't think they're that much superior to us."

Though her stint as quarterback may continue when this year's Juniors become next year's Seniors, Miles' long range plans center around tennis. She plays on the MCHS tennis squad, and hopes to make a living out of the game.

"The only other sport I would play would be softball," she added, "but it conflicts with the tennis season. I hope to go to college and play, then trun pro someday."

The game evokes some of the weirdest spirit possible at Martin County, with the guys serving as cheerleaders, and dressing up like their female counterparts. The Juniors, though possessing all their speed, have to be rated as the under dogs, in that no Junior squad has won the game in 13 years.

But who knows? Maybe that Hollywood script will, for Miles and the Juniors, end with everyone living happily ever after.

ROSE MILES PREPARES TO TAKE SNAP DURING PRACTICE

Juniors hope to break 'The Jinx'

There are a lot of ways to lose a football game, but one asset can overcome a lot of mistakes.

Speed.

That seems to be the one quality present in the Juniors' offensive backfield, as the squad prepares for the 1979 Powder Puff football game at Tiger Stadium October 27.

"If we can break some plays loose, we'll be devastating," commented Coach Jim Hogan, who hopes to break the "Senior Jinx," a string of victories by the older, more experienced opponents that now totals 13.

"It's more a matter of getting them all in the positions that best fit their talents," he added. "We are loaded with talent. If we can put it all together, we'll win the football game."

Jensen Beach product Rose Miles (see feature story) will probably get the nod as the starting quarterback, with Carolyn Knott seeing lots of action as well.

Behind the quarterbacks will be a trio of running backs who, said one of the team's assistant coaches, "are so fast they could shoot a gun at a building and catch the bullet before it hit the wall."

That's fast.

Gloria McIntyre is probably the fastest, but Arnetha Summers and Heather Flinn are almost as quick. In fact, the offensive depth that Hogan's Heroes possess is most evident in the backfield.

"Actually, I've got about ten runners just as fast as each other," he said. But even the greatest runner needs an offensive line, and Hogan was asked if he had one that could do the job.

"Somewhere out there," he pointed to a group of about 50 girls, "I've got one of the best centers I've ever seen in Powder Puff. Lavonia Mitchell, but the rest of the line isn't settled yet."

On defense, the Juniors possess what Defensive Coordinator Ron Ashley fondly calls "The Hungry Woman Defense. That means they eat up anything that comes in their direction."

Noseguard Stephanie Diglio anchors the crew, and no one has impressed Ashley and Hogan more than her.

"She's so tough that Coach Chase (the varsity boys' coach) wants her," bragged Ashley. She just enjoys punishing people."

The game is scheduled for next Saturday night, October 27 at Tiger Stadium. Kickoff is set for 7:30 p.m.

Seniors learn from last year, hope for win

BY DONNIE WILKIE

Gary Kirsch will learn a lot this week from the Martin County High School varsity football team.

You see, the Tigers lost last week to Fort Pierce Central, their biggest rival, 34-8, and Kirsch, the Head Coach of the Seniors for this week's Powder Puff game, is coming off a loss last year to his team's ONLY rival, the opponent in the annual Powder Puff event, 34-8.

Last year, his team, then the Juniors, lost to the Seniors, the "Class of '79." This year, though, armed with a season's experience, they face the "Class of '81," this year's Juniors.

"Experience is the biggest factor," claimed Kirsch. "The girls got lots of experience in losing last year."

"Personally, I got sick of losing," he joked.

The Seniors hope to change all that this year, using their experience to rattle the younger, but faster, Juniors.

Offensively, Kirsch sees few tricks from his squad as they count down toward the Powder Puff game October 27 at Tiger Stadium. "Last year, we got very tricky and made a lot of mistakes. But this time, we cut out some of the tricks, and tried to play basic, sound football.

While the Juniors will run two, maybe three quarterbacks out of their speed-oriented backfield, the Seniors are fairly set at the signal-calling position, with Laurie Rinker back to lead the squad.

Meanwhile, Stephanie and Carolyn Rock will join Jennifer Bush, Paula Roger, Heidi Mills and Colleen Horrigan in a backfield that will try to outrun the Juniors' lightning-fast backs.

Mills will probably be the best pass receiver out of the backfield, in that Kirsch says she "has good hands, she can catch anything in her direction, and she's a real bright girl."

Julie Acquino heads the defensive effort from her middle linebacker position, but most of the defenders have not been determined, as of press time.

"We're basing a lot of what we're doing on our experiences last year," remarked Kirsch. "One of the biggest factors for us will be how much dedication the girls show in the next week and a half.

"The Juniors do have the speed and the talent," he admitted. "It should be more of a game than it was last year. In fact, it could be one of the closest Powder Puff games in a long, long time."

HEAVY PASS RUSH-Forest Hill quarterback John Lopes is under the gun, as he attempts to pass against Martin County in their clash last Friday night. Lopes got the pass away, but much against the wishes of the Tigers' pass rushers. Martin County faces Eau Gallie this Friday in Stuart. Kickoff is set for 8 p.m.

Tigers even, thump Forest Hill

BY DONNIE WILKIE

It wasn't the world's most artistic game; it wasn't the prettiest; it wasn't what some might call an aerial show; it wasn't; it wasn't

But it was a 20-0 victory for Martin County.

Though tossing only ten passes on the night, quarterback David McCaughey directed his eleven to perfection, launching three scoring drives, then taking the rest of the evening off, as Martin County evened its record at 3-3 with a 20-0 shutout of Forest Hill.

Granted, the hapless Falcons are, well, the hapless Falcons, with not a single victory in their six outings in 1979. But at this point, with criticism coming from almost every listening post, Tiger Head Coach Fred Chase must be willing to take any victory.

L. C. Mitchell capped the surge with a one yard plunge, scoring with 3:23 remaining in the first quarter. On their next possession, the Tigers galloped 57 yards, using two pass plays to David Jensen for a combined 38 yards to score their second touchdown. Eddie Davis scored on a one yard run, but when Cliff Beakes, who had converted the first extra point, failed with a kick that sailed wide of the uprights, the score remained 13-0.

At the start of the second half, McCaughey showed why many area fans and coaches considered him as one of the finest quarterbacks when the season began. The senior, who connected on 10 of 17 for 146 yards and a touchdown, completed consecutive passes to Jensen (11 yards), Ricky McHardy (20 yards) and Jensen again, this time for 26 yards and the game's final touchdown. Beakes' kick rounded off the scoring.

In other area action last week:

Jeff Wickersham passed for 173 yards and three touchdowns, leading undefeated and top-ranked AAAA Merritt Island to a 34-21 thumping of highly-touted AAA Cocoa, before 7,000 fans at McLarty Field in Cocoa Titusville-Astronaut got its act together after struggling through the first part of the season, Mark Headlough rushing for 151 yards and two touchdowns as the War Eagles ("Ugly/Nasty, Inc.") derailed the second-rated AAA Rams of Gainsville-Eastside Tailback Marvin McClennon galloped for 160 yards and three touchdowns, leading Oviedo to a 33-0 whitewash of Melbourne-Central Catholic St. Cloud outgained Cocoa Beach 230-96 in total yards, and used two touchdowns by wingback Dwayne Simmons to dismantle the Minuteman 34-8 Suddenly red-hot Satellite raised its record to 2-5 with its second win in two weeks, a 13-7 squeaker over Melbourne Tailback Greg Owens plowed eight yards up the middle with 1:49 to play, giving Vero Beach a 28-21 upset win over Palm Bay of Melbourne at the Citrus Bowl.

Fort Pierce Central used two touchdowns scored by the defense in just eight seconds (11:00 and 10:52 of the second quarter, a school record) to get untracked, and the Cobras proceeded to plow the Twin Lakes Rams, 41-7. Leonard Cannel passed for 136 yards and Greg Bain added another 92 on the ground to pace Glades Central to a 15-0 victory over Lake Worth William Potts intercepted two passes in the fourth quarter, and Rickey Stubbs scored the winning touchdown on a four-yard run, as Atlantic edged Boca Raton, 22-16. Terrence McGrill scored on a one-yard sneak with just five minutes to play to close the book on the year's most interesting upset, as the up-and-down Panthers were up enough to knock off third-ranked AAA Pahokee, 7-0. Callis Jones scored on an 88-yard pass and teammate Brian Smith followed with a 60-yarder, all in the fourth quarter, as Sarasota came from behind to edge Lake Worth-Leonard, 14-7. Johnny Jackson scored two touchdowns as Clewiston smacked Moore Haven, 27-3.

Finally, St. Andrews whipped Ransom-Everglades, 17-0; Glades Day nipped Fort Pierce-John Carroll, 13-6, and Cardinal Newman blasted Miami Curley, 35-16.

Here are Wilkie's Winners for this week:

(Thursday) — Titusville over Melbourne by 14.

(Friday) — Titusville-Astronaut over Cocoa by 2; Palm Bay over Rockledge by 16; Vero Beach over Satellite by 5; Martin County over Eau Gallie by 4; Merritt Island over Fort Pierce Central by 1 (WOW!); Atlantic over North Shore by 13; Boca Raton over Leonard by 3; Lake Worth over Forest Hill by 19; Fort Pierce Westwood over at the Central game, because who won't be?; Glades Central over Suncoast by 8; Cardinal Newman over Jupiter by 5; PB Gardens over Twin Lakes by 1.

(Saturday) — John Carroll over LaBelle by 1.

Record - Last week: 12-2; Season: 74 right, 24 close, .755 Pct.

A look at MCHS-FH through the eyes of New Zealanders

BY DONNIE WILKIE

The chances are that you did not attend Martin County High School's game in West Palm Beach last Friday night, since it was one of the most poorly-attended games this season. It seemed that few would make the trip to watch the struggling Tigers take on the winless Falcons.

But somewhere in the largely vacant grandstands sat a pair of spectators who were too entranced by the game to notice its relative dullness. They wouldn't have cared if the world was ending after the third quarter--they still would have waited patiently for the final 12 minutes.

The two "super" fans were Chris and Rae Walker, both 25, of Waipukurau, Hawkes Bay, New Zealand. It didn't matter to them that neither of the high school teams they were watching is going anywhere once the regular season ends (both are eliminated in Conference and District standings). They were experiencing their first American football game.

"We're just overwhelmed," agreed the pair after Martin County handed the Falcons their sixth straight loss, 20-0. "This has been the highlight of our trip--even better than Cape Canaveral," smiled Chris.

Perhaps their story should be explained first.

"We've been all over the world in the last four years," said Chris. "We like to stay in one place for awhile. We'll get jobs, and help raise money for our trip."

It's like a cycle. The couple, with this method of vacationing, has been to South Africa, London, Norway, and, in the United States, New York, Buffalo, San Francisco, the Grand Canyon, and Jensen Beach, among other places.

Jensen Beach? Ah!

That's right. The couple spent most of last Friday afternoon in Jensen Beach, waiting for their trip to West Palm Beach and the MCHS Forest Hill game. After the game, they found a camping site at John Prince Park in Lake Worth, but had no idea exactly where they were going after that.

"We sat by the river (Indian) and talked to some of the local people," revealed Chris. "We found out where the mullet were jumping, had a beer, and then got ready for the game."

Once at the game, they wasted no time in showing their amazement. Perhaps the first thing that struck them was the tremendous number of players on the field.

"I thought there would be maybe 20 players to a side, but not 70," said a surprised Chris. "In Rugby Union (the only comparable sport in New Zealand) they have perhaps 15, with two or three substitutes. But this was amazing."

Once the game began, the two followed the movement of the pigskin just a bit better than a totally unoriented fan, since they were briefed before the game by The Mirror's sports writer on hand as to the basic scoring methods and plays.

"Sometimes it was difficult to keep up," commented Chris. "We didn't have the trained eye. Sometimes we'd be looking at the quarterback on the field, and then see the man with the ball being tackled on the right," an obvious compliment to the talking of the two signal-callers in the game. "We had a pretty good idea of what to expect on the field. It's what happened off it that really amazed us."

They were talking about the cheerleaders and the band. (Martin County's band was at a competition, and therefore, only Forest Hill had a band at the game), who often put on a show of their own on the sidelines.

"The cheerleaders were brilliant," observed Rae. "They knew so many different routines, and they did them all so well. And they never repeated themselves."

Chris' views were more like those of American men. He felt that "perhaps if we had sat farther away from the cheerleaders and the band, we could have concentrated on the game a bit more."

Another thing that impressed the New Zealanders was the spirit involved in the game, both on the field and on the sidelines.

There were so many congratulations among the players," said Chris. "Lots of love and affection. There isn't that much in Rugby Union, though in English football (soccer), when a player scores a goal, he is mobbed with hugs and kisses from everyone."

"It's almost gushy."

"The kids have no school spirit back home," he added. "They seem to go their own way. You have some schools that are better than others, of course, but nothing like this."

"If there was no football, we could have been entertained by the cheerleaders and the band."

Rae said she was impressed by the number of parents at the game, as well as the number of women.

"It was something to see all those women," she added. "At Rugby Union, the men all come on Saturday and leave their wives at home."

"I'd definitely benefit from seeing another game. Half of the time tonight, I was lost."

During their trip, the couple has spent two years (two visits combined) in England, where Chris drove a truck delivering antiques, then was the Administrative Manager of a cleaning company. They have also been in Norway for two months, where they both worked on a farm, and in South Africa.

There, Chris was the Assistant Manager of a hotel, while Rae worked as a switchboard operator at a rival hotel. She also worked as a waitress, and that's where economics came into the talk.

"I worked for one dollar per hour, with no tips," she said.

In New Zealand, the Americans' "short" supply of gas would look like a tidal wave. An Imperial gallon goes for $1.75, while it's $2.50 in England. To adjust to the American gallon, they said, you would substract about ten cents from the price.

Add to that a law which prohibits the sale or purchase of gasoline from 7pm-Friday to 7am-Monday, and you'll begin to appreciate the Americans' situation.

Although they said they had no idea what the future would bring for them, they didn't really seem concerned. They are enjoying one of the nicest possible "vacations," and Friday night's football game was another wonderful addition to that trip.

"It's bloody amazing," concluded Chris.

After all, how many of the Walkers' friends can brag that they have seen a Martin County High School football game?

Stuart wins conference title with 12-2 win over T-Birds

Sam Wesley scored one touchdown and passed for another Saturday night, as the Stuart Hornets Lower Division football team smacked Indiantown, 12-2, clinching the National Conference championship for the winners.

It marked the first time in four years that the Thunderbirds failed to win the Martin County Junior Football League championship.

It was also Stuart's second consecutive victory over Indiantown this season, and their fifth in a row overall. They still must play two games, but hold a two-game bulge over the T-Birds (3-2) and would automatically win in the event of a conference tie.

Wesley took advantage of a relaxing Indiantown defense just a minute before halftime, scampering around the end for 48 yards and the game's first touchdown. The extra point failed, but the Hornets, who defeated Indiantown 6-0 on a Wesley run earlier in the year, led 6-0 at halftime.

Indiantown stormed out after the half, determined to get the points back, but their quick drive was halted at the Stuart five-yard line when Steve Power recovered a Jeff Wilkins fumble.

"We knew turnovers would be a big part of this game," said Merle Cox, the T-Birds' Head Coach, after the loss. "I think that maybe our guys were a little intimidated by Stuart. I'm really surprised that we have done as well as we have all year, in that this is our smallest team ever (only 25 players)."

Indiantown did manage some points out of the drive, though they didn't come until Stuart recovered the fumble. Momentum later Wesley was clobbered in the end zone by Jimmy Smiley and Jimmy Pethybridge, giving the T-Birds a two-point safety.

But after Indiantown lost possession again on a fumble midway through the fourth quarter, the outcome was never in doubt. After the Hornets stopped the Birds on downs at the Indiantown 24, Wesley passed 19 yards to the five, then scored on an end sweep around the right side. There remained only 2:30 in the game.

"I thought this might be the year for someone to come up and take the title away from us," reminded Cox. "Stuart is obviously a better team than we are. It's good for the league when someone else wins it for a change. But we've got some good boys and we've had a good record. We'd like to win our last two games and make it 5-2."

Stuart will play the American Conference winner in the MC-JFL championship game in three weeks. Palm City currently leads that conference with a 3-2 mark.

Junior tennis championship to be played October 27-28

The first annual Tri-County Junior Tennis Championships will be contested Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 27-28 at Indian River Plantation. It was announced by Tom Falkenburg, tennis director at the resort.

Falkenburg said there would be singles and doubles competition for boys and girls in age divisions of 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18 as well as an Open Division for players with more tournament experience. He said there would also be consolation rounds for first round losers in each age groups.

The two-day event is sponsored by the recently formed Tri County Tennis Club Association consisting of eight clubs in Martin, St. Lucie and Indian River counties. Allen Quay of Sandalwood T.C. in Fort Pierce is president of the association, with Heiko Voges of the North River Shores T.C. in Stuart vice president and Falkenburg secretary. Other clubs expected to enter their juniors in the tournament include Mariner Sands and Crane Creek of Stuart, the John's Island Tennis Club, West Side Racquet Club and Twin Oaks Tennis Club, all of Vero Beach.

An entry fee of $5.00 per player and $8.00 per team for doubles will be charged, according to Falkenburg, who said the deadline for entering is 6 p.m. Oct 25. Entries should be sent to Falkenburg at Indian River Plantation, 385 N.E. Plantation Road, Stuart, Fl 33494.

At Publix, every apple is the apple of our eye.

Apples are so delicious and so nutritious they deserve special attention. And at the Place for Produce they get it. When it's harvest time, Publix produce people make sure you get only the best to choose from. And we know a good Delicious, Rome or McIntosh when we see one.

Our produce people also see that our apples get special handling and treatment to protect their unique quality and freshness. At the Place for Produce, we start with the best fruits and vegetables, and then make sure they stay that way.

We do it by keeping a close eye on things. Especially our apples.

Mirror Magic Menu

by Lee Hicks of Lucieland

Virginia Kiehne shows her recipe creations

Here's a couple of company favorites that take the limelight when dining with Bob and Ginny Kiehne, 1731 SE Canora Road, South Port St. Lucie. This tempting "Oven Simmered Beef Stew" will be baking while golfing, fishing and boating will be the conversational topics. Bob and Ginny, originally from Cleveland and Dayton, Ohio, so enjoy our unique beautiful area and join in the many numerous activities available, such as the St. Lucie Power Squadron. Besides the Port St. Lucie Woman's Club, Ginny meets monthly for luncheon with another great group, the Christian Woman's Club, where women from all denominations gather for fellowship and informational idea exchanges. Ginny states that these are very meaningful social and service functions.

This attractive couple have re-established their real estate careers, so look for them — out in their career apparel — working well together!

A rich and creamy Cheese Cake is a menu brightener we're sure guests will enjoy and Ginny says "this makes a simply delicious and large cheese cake"!

Place beef in 3 qt. casserole with tight cover. Combine soup mixes, salt, pepper, wine & water & pour over beef. Cover & bake 1 hr. 350 degrees. Remove casserole, stir in carrots, potatoes, mushrooms, cover & bake 1½ hrs. until tender. Sprinkle with parsley when serving.

GINNY'S "DELICIOUS" CHEESE CAKE

- 1 lb. cottage cheese
- 1 lb. cream cheese (blend well with cottage cheese)
- 1½ cups sugar
- 4 eggs, slightly beaten
- 1 Tbsp. lemon juice
- 2 Tbsp. vanilla
- 3 Tbsp. corn starch
- 3 Tbsp. flour
- ½ lb. melted butter

Fold in 1 pint sour cream, pour into 9" spring pan & bake 1 hr. 350 degrees. Turn off & leave in oven for additional 2 hrs. Remove & place in refrigerator.

A new Watt-Wise Living™ home can save you up to 25% on electricity. That's up to 25% more than homes that meet all the requirements of Florida's new Energy-Efficiency Building Code.

How come Watt-Wise Living homes save so much in electricity? Because they're built according to FPL's energy-saving standards. Sure, a Watt-Wise home costs a little more in the beginning. But you'll get a payoff in extra savings on your electric bills for years to come from the very first month.

FPL's money-saving Watt-Wise homes have features like extra ceiling and wall insulation, solar and heat-recovery units for water heating, a higher-efficiency air conditioner or heat pump, power savers like fluorescent lighting and a microwave oven, and thermally efficient windows and doors, (with glass areas planned to minimize heat build-up).

So before you buy or construct a new home, ask your builder about FPL's Watt-Wise Living Program. Or, stop by your local FPL office and pick up a free information brochure.

The Watt-Wise Living home. It costs a little more now, but in the long run it costs a whole lot less.

Artists of the month named for November

Art Associates of Martin County announce the "Artists of the Month" at area businesses for the month of November.

Jan Kozel is showing oil paintings of landscapes from the Southern Indiana area and florals at the First Federal Savings & Loan of Martin County in Jensen Beach. Ms. Kozel has been working in oils and pastels for the past six years, and has studied with many of the area's most prominent teachers: Ed Praedinger, Ted Goerschner, Migs Elliott and Ed Stevenson. She has won awards for her work at the Martin County Fair and the Southern Bell Pioneer Hobby Show.

Sharing the exhibit at the First Federal of Martin County in Jensen Beach is Martin County native Janie Smith. Ms. Smith has also studied with many area teachers, including Ted Goerschner of Port St. Lucie and rockport, Mass., and is currently studying with Richard Prizzell at the Lighthouse Gallery in Tequesta. She teaches oil painting for the Martin County Adult Education Dept. Ms. Smith's exhibit includes landscapes, florals and impressionistic paintings in both oils and watercolors.

Elaine Coole's work is on exhibit at the First Federal Savings and Loan of Fort Pierce in the Monterey Plaza. Ms. Coole comes from a family of artists and works primarily in acrylics. She has done murals and theatre scenery, and has received awards for her work at the Martin County Fair. Ms. Coole is showing life near the sea and sunny woodlands scenes.

Anglers' Meet

The Martin County Anglers Club will meet Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the First Federal Savings and Loan building on Indian River Drive and Commercial Street in Jethen Beach. A speaker and a fishing film will be presented. Non members are welcome.

Samaritans get C-C blessings for enlargement of quarters

The Jensen Area Samaritans Inc. have petitioned the County Commission for permission to expand the emergency ambulance service's head quarters at 1250 NE Samaritan St.

The offer included the responsibility of financing the project.

The bid got a "big thank you" from County Commissioner Frank Wacha.

"God bless you, we're glad you are with us," was Wacha's message to the Samaritans.

The petition was made in a letter from Samaritans president Maxine Bailey, who wrote:

"Due to the rapid growth in our area and the large turnover of personnel that all volunteer squads have, we need the addition of two small squad rooms, an office, an additional supply storage area, and a shower for the use of our members.

"Much of the building's time is taken up with classes, and leaves no place for our crews to stay while on duty. Currently, Indian River Community College is conducting an Emergency Medical Technician course at the building on Tuesday and Thursday nights. We are also holding Standard First Aid classes on Monday and Friday nights.

"In addition, the building is used by the Florida Association of Emergency Medical Technicians, Martin County Ambulance Presidents' Association, and the Jensen Area Samaritans for meetings. On many nights, more than one activity is taking place, requiring the use of the garage for classes.

"When the duty crews have to compete with nightly classes for the use of the squad room, morale plummets and puts our free volunteer system in jeopardy.

"We are happy to say that due, to the great generosity of the good people of the Jensen Beach area, we have the funds available, and it would give us great pleasure to use the money for such a worthwhile project. We could request that the funds come from Special Taxing District A accounts, but in this time of inflation, we feel that we can use our own funds without imposing an additional tax burden on our citizens."

The project is expected to get underway in the near future, Mrs. Bailey indicated.

Schroeder becomes Eagle Scout

Kenneth Schroeder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Schroeder of Jensen Beach, was elevated to the rank of Eagle Scout, the highest point a Boy Scout can reach in the escalating program, in ceremonies held last Wednesday at First Federal Savings and Loan meeting room.

Almost stealing the show from the "star" was young Michael Wegler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Wegler. Mike was called to the stage 14 times to receive merit badges he had worked for and earned during the summer.

Making the Eagle presentation was Bruce Garwood, district executive of the Sailfish Chapter of Scouting, which covers the area extending from Fort Pierce to the Palm Beaches.

In making the presentation, Garwood related an Indian allegory originated by Ernest Thompson Seaton, forerunner of Scouting in America. The tale was of three Indian youths, all bent on the traditional journey to manhood, by climbing the highest mountain. The youth who made it, Garwood said, was the one who, from the pinnacle, saw the vast sea beyond, and the greater distances he must travel through life as a man.

Present for the ceremony were Ken's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Schroeder and his parents, Steve and Joan.

Scout Edward Killer and Norris Tilton, chairman of the troop committee, opened the ceremony. Merit badges were presenjed by Fred Kahl, a veteran scouter and a past scoutmaster.

Michael Wegler's badges were for citizenship in the community, life saving, art, athletics, scholarship, personal management, electricity, archery, citizenship in the world, fishing, safety, reading, and dog care.

Other badges went to: Willie Kahl, for citizenship in the nation, communications, pioneering, and citizenship in the world; Ricky Bell, cooking and fishing; Tim Cote, first aid, salesmanship, canoeing and rowing; Edward Killer, canoeing and rowing; Michael Bell, fishing and first aid.

Elevations in rank went to: Tim Cote, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Cote, first class; Rickie and Mike Bell, sons of Mr. and Mrs. James Bell, first class; Mike Wegler, star class; Duane Myers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Myers, life class.

They were presented by scout master Harold Kemnitzer, to whom the program was dedicated. The scoutmaster performed the rite on crutches. He has been disabled by illness and a crippled foot.

Special medals were presented to Willie Kahl, and Mike Wegler, for the Loxahatchee run. In order to win the award, they had to canoe the full length of the river, and to write 300 word essays about their experiences.

Guests attending the Court of Honor were introduced by Don Pittman, assistant scoutmaster. Duane Myers preluded the Eagle ceremony by reciting the scout oath and laws, and lighting the candles illustrating them.

Bishop to dedicate All-Saints addition

Thursday, Nov. 1, will have double significance for members of All Saints' Episcopal parish. It is the celebration of All Saints' day in the church international, and a special occasion to dedicate the newly-enlarged church building.

Coming here to officiate at the dedication is The Rt. Rev. Calvin Schofield, Bishop Coadjutor of the Episcopal Diocese of Southeast Florida.

The Holy Eucharist will be celebrated in the church at 6 p.m., followed by a reception in Houg Parish Hall.

All Saints' Church, located atop the hill above the Crossroads, is the oldest Episcopal Church in the area, having its beginnings in the early 1890s. In recent months, a new organ and choir loft have been added, expanding the capacity of the building for services.

Bishop Schofield, who was chosen earlier in the year as successor for retiring Bishop James L. Duncan, was rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Miami prior to becoming Suffragan Bishop.

A native of Delhi, N.Y., he received his bachelor of arts degree from Hobart College in 1959, and his theological degree from Berkeley Seminary in 1962. For a time, he served as curate in St. Petersburg. He was vicar at St. Andrew's, Miami, from 1964 to 1969.

Always interested in the youth of the church, he was youth advisor to the Miami Deanery, and chaplain for the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve. He also was active with the Spanish speaking Americans. He and his wife lived for several weeks in honduras, so they could better understand the language and culture of the Latin Americans.

NRC team will visit nuclear plant

A team of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission Emergency Planning Task Force, which will visit every operating nuclear reactor site in the country to evaluate upgrading of the site's emergency planning since the Three Mile Island accident, will visit the Saint Lucie Station near Jensen Beach on November 5-9, 1979.

After visiting the site on November 5th, the Task Force Team will begin a Technical Review meeting with officials of Florida Power and Light Company at 9 a.m. on Tuesday, November 6 at Holiday Inn, Jensen Beach.

The meeting, which is open to observation by the public, will recess at 5 p.m. and resume at 9 a.m. each day. The meetings will conclude about 5 p.m. on November 8.

From 5 to 6 p.m., November 7, there will be a period for public comment only on the subject of emergency planning. Should time not permit all comments to be heard they may be submitted in writing to James R. Miller, Acting Assistant Director for Site and Safeguards, Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation, Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Washington, D.C., 20555.

Garden waiting for planter

The Jensen Beach Garden Club, which has been responsible for much of the beautification around the Jensen area, is getting itchy about the arch planter the County Commission promised to replace.

The planter at the Arch, which greets all comers to the community on Route 707, was first landscaped by the Garden Club for the Bi-Centennial celebration.

In 1977, the Arch fell victim to a fatal accident, which destroyed one side of the imposing structure. According to club spokesman Irene Stephenson, the county commission promised to replace the planter by October, the time of the annual return of members from the north. Thus far, however, nothing has been done about it.

"We are waiting to complete our job so that one spot can be attractive to people as they enter Jensen Beach," Mrs. Stephenson said. "We have the plants, and women waiting to work on this project."

County Commissioner Frank Wacha told The Mirror he is aware of the situation, and that plans are "in the process."

"But with the storm damage, and no water up there yet, it would be wasteful at this time," the commissioner said.

He indicated that work will begin on it as soon as it appears feasible.

Maggy Hurchalla: a first in Martin County politics

Maggy Hurchalla, "A nice quiet mother of four children" back in the early '70s, got upset about the lack of parks for public usage along the St. Lucie Inlet.

She began attending county commissions to make her frustrations heard, and wound up sitting on the bench as a commissioner. Last week, she became the first woman in Martin County history to serve as Chairman of the County Commission.

"I was the local loudmouth," she said. "I attended every meeting, and I finally decided I might as well be up there instead of sitting down in those hard chairs."

Maggy is a "first generation politician" in family, but she's not the only one. Her sister Janet Reno is state's attorney in Dade County. They both were running, and successfully, for office at the same time.

The two inherited their awareness of political issues and for the need of good government from their parents. Their father, Henry Reno, wrote for the Miami Herald for 30 years, and their mother, Jane Wood was a veteran writer for the Miami News.

Maggy is a native of Miami, but after her marriage they moved to Jupiter. Husband Jim is an engineer with Pratt Whitney Aircraft. They came to Martin County in 1968, to make their home in Port Salerno.

Maggy, whose prime concern for conservation and the proper use of county lands, has in her years since 1974 developed the title of "The Great Dissenter." But this she denies.

"I vote more often with the commission than against them," she contended in an interview with The Mirror. "I believe in acting by the law. Too often one person gets treated one way and another gets treated another way. And on each project, the commission is the judge and jury."

"The commission would be better off if it had the gumption to adopt a comprehensive plan," she added.

The work on such a plan has been lallygagging in the hands of commissions since the state passed a law requiring one of each county in the mid-'60s. In 1972, she recalled, the commission paid for and accepted a plan which cost the taxpayers $50,000. After it was accepted, it was shelved, and forgotten about.

"We did adopt one for Hutchinson Island, setting the profile and the density, and that's the law," she said.

The commission's reluctance to adopt a comprehensive plan lies in the fact that, once passed, "it takes away our flexibility."

"We talk about where we're going to put the roads, but we can't go ahead without a plan," she said. "We created East Ocean Boulevard (one of the most frustrating bottlenecks in the county because of the spotzoned commercial and professional centers.) It could happen again, anywhere in the county."

During her tenure as chairman, Mrs. Hurchalla said, she plans to push for adoption of a comprehensive plan, and for acquisition of beach frontage and dockage space.

The comprehensive plan, deadline for which was July 1 of this year, gained another year's moratorium from the state. Although the commission now has laws to cover and control most situations, it still makes room for decisions of special consideration.

With a master plan, the laws would be written not as guidelines but as standards, the new commission chairman said.

"An adopted masterplan can be changed, but it has to go through all the reasons — by law — why the changes are being made," she said.

Mrs. Hurchalla doesn't feel the county should rush into acceptance of the plan, but "what I am going to try to do as chairman is to set up a schedule of planning days and hearings, and lay out a timetable for all the actions we need to take."

A consultant firm has been hired to do the planning, "but they're not inventing the wheel — we've already put in a tremendous amount of work."

Maggy Hurchalla is a stickler for the law as it is written, and that is the major cause of most of her "dissention." She cited the case of buildings along the dune lines.

The law says that no building may be more than four stories tall or 40 feet in height.

"We nearly came to blows over a builder who wanted to measure from the top of the dune, and use the space underneath for parking," she said. "When we start varying our laws, we have no leg to stand on."

She is also worried about the ultimate decision on the wetland areas.

"They should be kept at very low density," she said. "And we're not talking about an acre or so, we're talking about hundreds of acres."

She is also greatly concerned about waterfront property.

"Providing boat ramps is one thing we can do," she said. "We must have a program that doesn't shut off the water to everyone. We need more beach strips, and we'll never be able to do it again. It's difficult — were on a tight budget — but if we don't buy now, they'll be gone."

Mrs. Hurchalla is finding that their children — Jimmy, 18 and in Indian River Community College, Bobby, 16, Jane, 14, and George, 13, all of high school age, are more aware of what's going on in the county because of her status as commissioner.

"They read the newspapers, and ask "why did you do that?" she said.

As to her political aspirations, Maggy says she has none beyond the county level.

"I have no ambitions whatever to go on to the state level," she said. "I'm interested in what's going on here at home."

She and her sister Janet are in no way competitive, politically, but "we have fun comparing notes."

"Janet's a big frog in a big puddle," Maggy says. "I'm a little frog in a little puddle."

Samaritans appeal for house numbers

The Jensen Beach Samaritans, speaking in behalf of the fire department and the Sheriff's Department as well as themselves, are making a plea to homeowners to be sure their house numbers are updated and displayed in an easily visible manner.

The recent change in house numbering by the county has caused the emergency services a great deal of confusion, a spokesman said, and such confusion can be a matter of life or death.

"Please be sure you have your dwelling number posted on the front of your home at eye level," the spokesman said. "Be sure it is your new number, or if you wish, have both the old and the new numbers."

The Samaritans suggest that newcomers to any given area familiarize themselves with the names of the streets, avenues and lanes in the vicinity, so that quick pinpointing can be made by the emergency personnel when calls come in.

"No one ever knows when they may need the services of an emergency vehicle," the spokesman said. "Time is of prime importance when an emergency arises. Someone who is ill may suddenly need help. A life may be saved only if help arrives in time."

The same holds true for the fire department. It takes little time for a smouldering rag or piece of paper to be fanned into a major fire, and it is essential for the firemen to know the exact location of the conflagration. Or a break-in may be taking place, and a deputy must know the exact location to get there in time to catch the culprit.

H-I Indian digs ancient civilization

A team of archeologists from the Florida Department of State is going back to Tallahassee with the fruits of a discovery which may prove the presence of an Indian civilization here as long as 3,000 years ago.

The digs, located on McArthur Boulevard not far from Indian River Plantation, is actually a follow-through on work done in 1972 for William Rudge of Jensen Beach and Robert Holman for the Martin County Historical Society, which unearthed a nearby Indian burial mound. Relics from that mound can be seen at Elliott Museum. The bones have been authenticated as being 3,000 years old, the time when the Pyramids of Egypt were built.

The actual time of an Indian tribe's existence at that spot is still under study, according to state field agent Harding Pope II. The artifacts will be taken to the state capital and tested with Carbon 14 to determine the age of relics unearthed at each level on which they were found.

The items uncovered thus far have been pendants, tools and pottery shards, mostly made of stone or shells. One tool, thought to have been used for building purposes, is probably of mastodon bone.

Like modern Americans, these ancient Indians appear to have been seasonal in their encampments on the island.

"They moved out during the summer," said one of the archeologists. "It was too hot, and there were too many mosquitoes."

These particular Indians, thought to have been of the same lineage as the Calossa tribe which inhabited Florida before the Seminoles, appear to have constituted a "trade area," the archeologist said. This theory is substantiated by the presence of items made of materials not originating in this part of Florida. One shard in particular was identified as of stone found only along the upper St. John River.

One of the most fascinating finds was the head of a giant turtle, which according to scale must have weighed 450 pounds, archeologist Jim Dunbar said. It is thought that the skull may have had some religious significance.

"We found plenty of fish," Dunbar said. "They didn't eat the fish — they seem to have eaten sharks."

Volunteers from the Martin County Historical Society have been helping with the arduous task of digging — among them Jane Dickenson and Shirley Culley. The digging is a painstaking task, because the layers of earth can't be allowed to slip and mingle with those beneath them.

Janet Hutchinson, director of Elliott Museum and the House of Refuge, is concerned about curiosity seekers intruding on the digs, mostly for this reason. Intruders, in their zeal to get "souvenirs," could cause dirt-slides and defeat or deter the painfully careful work put in for weeks by the scientists.

"It would be malicious vandalism," Mrs. Hutchinson said.

She gives much credit to the developer who has purchased the land for the purpose of constructing homes or condominiums.

"He (Avron Rifkin of Miami) has promised to build around and preserve the site," she said. "He has also said he will prosecute anyone interfering with it."

Florida Reading Conference draws interest from St Lucie

Over 1300 teachers, administrators, and parents from all over Florida attended the Florida State Reading Conference in Daytona Beach, Florida on October 18, 19 and 20. As a part of the conference people from various counties are asked to present their exemplary programs in special interest sessions. There were approximately 90 special interest sessions held during the conference. St. Lucie County was well represented this year with four of our classroom teachers presenting their exemplary programs.

Beth Gessner, third grade teacher at Port St. Lucie Elementary and Lois Watts, Primary Specialist at Lawnwood, discussed their topic "The Agonies and the Ecstasies of Creating a Student Produced Book" to a very interested group of teachers. Ms. Gessner and Ms. Watts gave an excellent presentation of the process used to produce a student created book from the teacher's objectives, to the student's actually writing to the advertising campaign and the method of sales. All the teachers present left with the eagerness to go back to their counties and attempt a similar project.

Sandra Marshall, third grade teacher at Port St. Lucie Elementary and Christine McIntire third grade teacher at Garden City Elementary presented "Roads to Environmental Education Through the Basics: Jack Island" an exemplary program they developed. The program has been developed to help meet the needs of St. Lucie County's environmental education programs and to relate Language Arts, Mathematics, and Science to the environment of Jack Island State Park.

They explained to the participants ways in which the materials that have been developed in St. Lucie County could be utilized in other counties, or adapted to meet their particular needs. All of the participants were interested in the many suggestions on implementation and motivational techniques that were discussed during the hour and a half session.

These four teachers did an excellent job in demonstrating just a few of the many exemplary programs occuring presently in St. Lucie County.

Jim Smith speaks out on drugs

BY CATHERINE FARAGO

Attorney General Jim Smith spoke before the public recently, to relate some of the problems faced by Floridians.

Of primary importance to many is the drug traffic that comes into the state each year. Smith stated that the single largest Florida business is drugs, which reportedly reaches the 5 billion mark annually. Unfortunately, this is a nominal figure when compared with the estimated 35 billion that is circulated Federally.

Because seventy per cent of the drugs arrive from Colombia, Attorney Smith along with Governor Graham made a recent trip to the country in an attempt to "attack the source rather than supply channels." Smith admitted that, upon his arrival to Colombia, he maintained a suspicious attitude, however, after speaking with government officials, he returned with a decidedly different attitude.

What he returned with was a proposal to step-up federal aid from the 7.8 million given last year to 16 million; a large portion to be earmarked to stop the flow of illegal drugs. Colombian officials are anxious to work with the U.S. in an attempt to stop the escalating problem since revenues from drug traffic now exceed those made from coffee; it's primary export. Additionally, lobster and fishing industries are all but extinct due to the fact that Colombians can realize maximum profits in dealing with drugs.

Smith went on to say that "it's not feasible for the government to solve 100 per cent of the problem," however because of the lack of national commitment towards the problem, a strain is put on Florida in its attempt to stop the heavy flow into the state. He stated that only 10% of the drugs are captured, however he anticipates that there will be a "lot of changes down the road."

Another problem Smith feels is paramount is the controversial death sentence. "We can't determine how effective capital punishment is with the long delays" that are being forced by eternal clemency hearings and granted stays. Smith proposes a campaign to pressure defense lawyers and force judges to "get on the ball." Additionally, he wants time parameters. "Everything is breaking down because decisions are being made." He ended by expressing his empathy towards that discouraged public, and stated that he hoped to implement needed amendments to the system.

Beware matching funds

About ten years ago, before the greatest portion of civil liberties were taken away from us by default, the people of Jensen Beach and Port St. Lucie rejected the idea of federal and state funding on principle.

The "we can do it ourselves" spirit of life was strong in this conservative area. The same was true throughout Martin County. That spirit has declined, again through default, and now the elected officials find out how much matching funds they can get before they even plan a project, much less budget it.

Then county commission chairman Frank Wacha complained that the state would set up a project, require matching funds from the cities and counties, and then, a few years later, when the project was in full gear, drop the state portion, making the local governments add taxes to keep it rolling.

It was true in schools, roads and recreation.

Now we find the same thing happening on a local level. It seems unimaginable, but the county school system has remigged on a promise to the Jensen Beach P.T.A. How about that for guts.

As background, the local PTA raised the money for a special reading laboratory to be at the school. If the money was raised, the school system would assign a reading teacher to the school.

The birth of the "Right to Read" program was hailed as a major step forward in a move to get back to basics.

Now, the school system pleads poor mouth, reassigns the special reading teacher to another grade, and cancels the project.

The reason the school system gives that the program is cancelled is that Jensen Beach is not a "Title One" school. Title One means that there are disadvantaged students at the school, and the ranking is determined by the number of free lunches given out at the school.

What a bunch of bull.

The children at Jensen Elementary have the right to have remedial reading if they are not making the grade.

No one on the school board has even suggested that the parents of Jensen Elementary school children, and all residents of Jensen Beach, might be willing to add a few cents to their tax bill in special district taxing if they want something special. They just say that Jensen is not Title One, as if that means God doesn't want special reading there.

No one has offered to refund the PTA money for the materials if the class is not held and the children offered that special course.

This comes at a time that the Jensen Beach Elementary School is again holding its annual fund-raising campaign through the Halloween Carnival...fund raising to buy something else for the school.

It is mind-boggling to think that the federal program dictates the quality of education each child receives.

It is even more mind-boggling that the educators of Florida do not even explore alternatives to reaching the goals of better education.

Every governmental body now has a specialist in federal and state funding. That specialist is designing programs to meet the funding requirements, not programs to meet the needs of the students.

A bridge is built because state and federal funds are available. An inlet to save lives is built in the same way.

It seems that all this is backward from what it should be.

We have been brainwashed for so long that we actually believe that all criteria should begin with availability of federal and state funding as to what is taught, not with what is to be taught and then the funding for the program.

The school system would immediately say that this is an idealistic view of a fiscally technical subject, not for the commoner. Bull.

Sometime we must stop looking at the balance sheet and start looking at youngsters who do not read up to par. Goals should be set for youngsters, not for federal and state funding.

Taken for granted

Many parents and the public in general take the youth activities at Langford and Sportsman's Parks for granted. They do not realize the amount of hard work that goes into the purely volunteer effort to produce those activities.

The Optimists of Jensen Beach and Port St. Lucie are the driving force behind the organization, fund raising planning and coaching of baseball, football, soccer, and other activities that abound at both parks.

By being taken for granted, the two organizations sometimes find it difficult to fund their enterprises. They want sponsors for teams to buy uniforms and equipment, donations for balls, bats and team-type gear.

We hope the community continues to support Optimists.

My dying was premature

On the second day of dieting, my true loves gave to me; a full fledged, front page article letting all who read the newspaper know that I had broken my diet and was to be scorned.

I wrote my column last week on "I may die from dieting," and let the world know that I had begun the Scarsdale diet that morning. It was rough, and I had doubts about myself.

Not so the staff.

I played tennis on Monday night about five after before we closed shop so see "Monday night football." All I drank was water.

The next morning, I weighed myself and found I had lost seven pounds, from 204 to 197. I went to the office exhilarated. I bounced to all of my great drop in weight. The "Scarsdale Diet" was working.

Salli told me that she would bring in my lunch, a quarter pound of sliced beef, and sliced tomatoes.

But, then temptation raised her wicked head in the person of Frederick and Ursula Brockman who invited Peg and me to lunch at, of all places, Chumley's. (Remember, I was going to change my lifestyle, not go to the places I usually go to so that such temptation did not arise.)

I tried to get out of it, but gave in at last to Peg Meissner's pleadings. She, Too, had joined Salli and myself on the diet.

We drank back coffee. Ursula and John respected the diet, and we had a nice talk.

When I got back to the office the staff had already prepared the news story for page one, referring to my column, and how I had broken on the second day of the diet.

The next morning, I weighed 196. Wednesday night I weakened, and had a drink. I awoke and gingerly stepped on the scale. I was 195.

A combination of things happened. I was heartened by the weight loss and resolved to keep up the good work. I ate the dry piece of ceiling tile toast, grapefruit and coffee each morning, and my stomach accepted all. The growling stopped.

Friday morning, I was 194. I had lunch again at Chumley's; black coffee, returned to the office to Salli's dubious look and ate her prepared diet meal.

We worked to 6:30 p.m., and Peg and I left the office. We had both lost weight to the point that we felt safe in the plan.

Saturday morning, I weighted myself 193 pounds.

I played tennis that morning, three sets of doubles with the Saturday morning gang of Don St. Onge, Bill Robson and Bryan Webb. I followed that with two sets of doubles in which Don and I defeated John Jochem and Jim Rowe in two sets, and then played two sets with St. Onge in singles. (I promised I wouldn't mention I won, or the 7-5, 6-0 score.)

When I got home at two p.m., I weighed myself, and was 190.5 pounds. Wow!

I knew the weight loss was just water from playing, and drank my water, coffee and ate the bland food Sunday morning I was back to 192, but held the one pound per day loss factor.

In one week twelve pounds had been stripped off my bod. I have begun exercising to tighten up the stomach, and now that they have the Par Course repaired at Langford Park, I'll start running again.

I'm not a nut about it, but I do feel better, my back has stopped hurting, and I am feeling better than I have in years. My lowest weight in the past twenty years was 194.

Let's say I've been right for the diet this time. It has all worked well, and I think it is one I can pick up on any time to get a few pounds off.

So, I'm going to stop bragging. There are some meals on the diet that I actually couldn't finish. The food has been good and filling, though bland. I don't even miss those hamburgers with mushrooms and sauce.

I recommend the Scarsdale Diet. Just pick up the book at any book store. It is a good one, and worth it if you stick to it.

Praise be-- Oct's. over

Whew! I finally (knock wood) made it through October.

For other people, October is a fun month. Kids in school are just getting happy about their classes and classmates, most of all their teachers.

Color nuts gleefully swarm to the Smoky Mountains in Tennessee or the Carolinas to wallow in the glory of the leaves as they turn to fiery reds, tawny oranges or golden yellows.

Foresighted folk begin stalking the stores for Christmas presents, over counters already suggestively begarbed in Santas, candy canes and tinsel.

But for me, October has been a month to be dreaded. Everything rotten that ever happened to me happened in October.

I was too young to be aware of the date, but it must have been in October that, smart kik I was at age two, I rocked my playpen off the front porch and clipped a muscle in my left eye. It hasn't been able to do a thing by itself since.

Also as a little tyke, in October I was still standing on the Windsor bench in the dining room window, squawling my head off because s-ster Ruth Anne could go to school and I couldn't. By November my passions had subsided and substituted for such pastimes as drawing pictures in crayon on the new wall paper in the living room and autographing all the books in our library. But October was awful.

In my teens, and freshly moved to St. Petersburg, it was in October that this lately-come northerner loudly fought the War Between the States across a history classroom, with a young blond Southern Gentlemen name of Charles E. Lee. From that point on, I was branded with the label of Least Liked Student in the class.

I admit I have boo-booed and fallen on my face in lots of other months, and gremlins have been totally democratic in stalking my path the year around. Like the August when the Important Date of My Life and I were to have gone from Lake Keuka, our summer home in New York, to the Grand Ball in Wellsboro, Pa. I agonized for weeks about just the right thing to wear, and practiced behaving like the lady I wasn't.

Then, the night before the dance, came the rains. Not just any old rain, but rain in buckets and barrels and tubs. The downrush of the water from the erstwhile enchanting grape-arbored hills washed out the road at every gully between our cottage and the home of Important Date. Needless to say, I cursed the gods of the skies for weeks to come.

But back to October. Something inside me wasn't working right, I knew. So I took my problems to a well-known physician in Oak Ridge who, I discovered later, worked on the assumption that anything a woman had wrong with her was all in her head.

It was only after several trips to him, leaving his office with the advice to sleep on a harder mattress, that late stepped in and took a hand. One of my hobbies was refinishing furniture, and I got a piece of steel wool embedded in my thumb.

A couple of days later, I got a little worried when black streaks began crawling up my arm. I took it to my doctor to see if he could cure this one with a hard mattress. He took one look and rushed me down the hall at Oak Ridge Hospital to a surgeon.

The surgeon had me in the operating room in a matter of minutes. It was blood poisoning. And in the course of my follow-up treatment, I told the new physician of my other ailments. He examined me, and again plunked me in the hospital, this time with what I was dead certain was a malignant tumor. It turned out to be benign, but the fears I went through were worse than the physical suffering.

And that was in October.

My marriage, after 20 years, dissolved in October. And a year later when my love life was looking all rosy again, the Love of My Life, the one I thought was for real and for good, married someone else. In October.

It's gotten to be a phobia. As September draws to a close, my strongest instinct is to go to bed and stay there until November.

Perhaps that's why Halloween has a special meaning for me. I welcome all those ghosts and goblins and witches that howl around my door. They are my October demons, exorcising themselves for good and all--until another October rolls around.

Last week I picked up my November Readers Digest, and lo, there I found a brush with fame. In the "laughter, the Best Medicine" anecdotes is my old friend Luther Massingill, fellow newsman from Chattanooga.

I don't believe the story, but then I don't think I'm supposed to. It's a true Luthertism.

Luther, to introduce you, is one of the nicest guys God ever made, and is everybody's friend in the Noogs listening area of station WDEF. Bald, straight-faced and sincere, Luther tells his listeners where the best fishing is, about the little girl who got lost on 10th Street, or where somebody's pet mutt can be located.

Luther is a very kind man. I know. When I went to the Tennessee city to join the staff of the new Chattanooga Post, Luther invited me on the air for an interview. I was scared stiff, and Luther knew I was. But with his homey person-to-person manner, he had me feeling as facile as Barbara Walters before the program was through.

Howdy, Luther. Nice to run into you again, even if its just in print.

Mountaineer keeps it local

The lead story in The Mountaineer is about an annual Baptist convention which is to be held soon in Haywood County.

Membership in the county's 59 Southern Baptist churches is on the upswing and the total number of Southern Baptists in the county is reported at 19,433. The story also includes an announcement of plans to build a Haywood Baptist Center.

A striking photo of several men gathered around gravestones in a fog-shrouded cemetery is placed above the fold on page one, and a feature story on a reunion of about 60 members of the Clan Ferguson appears above the paper's banner. Most of the Fergusons are local residents, but one came all the way from Scotland for the reunion.

The front page also contains two county government stories. One is about garbage collection woes and the other is about a possible settlement of a dispute county officials have had with federal officials for 37 years.

A story about a political forum to be held for the candidates running for alderman and mayor of Waynesville also appears on page one.

For those of you who missed my column last week and are wondering what The Mountaineer is and where Waynesville is, let me explain.

I'm on vacation in the North Carolina mountains in a little community about 30 miles west of Asheville. Waynesville is about 12 miles away from my parents' place and The Mountaineer is Waynesville's newspaper.

It's published three days a week, and the issue I'm writing about contains 32 pages. It boasts a circulation of 12,439.

I realize you probably don't care what's on the front page of The Mountaineer. Outside of the folks in Haywood County, I doubt if there are many people who would have reason to care what's in The Mountaineer.

My interest is twofold. For one thing, I'm interested to learn more about the people in the community my parents live in.

But the main reason for my interest in The Mountaineer is professional.

Anytime I see a paper I'm unfamiliar with, and especially a non-daily, I perk it up and begin making comparisons of it with The Mirror.

The Mountaineer is a good looking paper. Their reproduction of photos is outstanding and their lay-out is attractive. Those two factors alone are enough to make the paper stand out among others in the newsracks.

As The Mirror, I feel we're pretty strong on photos. In fact, I can't think of any other paper which carries full pages of photos on a given event as often as we do in The Mirror. And, I think our lay-out at The Mirror is a cut above most papers our size.

Eye catching photos and attractive lay-out can carry a paper pretty far, I suppose. In fact, I'd hate to try making a success of a paper without these two elements included.

But there is another factor common to The Mountaineer and The Mirror which I feel is a key to the success of the two papers. And that is that both papers carry local news, not only on page one, but throughout the papers. Nowhere in The Mirror will you find anything but local news, and the same holds true for The Mountaineer, except for some material on its editorial page.

In The Mountaineer and The Mirror, readers can learn what's brewing in local governmental chambers, can read about home town sports teams, and can learn what's going on in local civic and social organizations.

Both papers tell you who has died, who is getting married, how the fishing and weather has been, and inform you of upcoming cultural events.

The list of what we and The Mountaineer cover could continue for pages, but I think you get my idea.

At The Mirror, just as the folks at The Mountaineer do, we try to be as much a part of our community as possible. Neither paper concerns itself with state, national or international news unless that news has a very direct effect on the local community. And then, we report what that effect is. For instance, when the gas crunch hit, we told you what it meant to folks on Jensen Beach and Port St. Lucie. And when the Three Mile Island nuke plant went awry, we didn't tell you the details of that mishap, but did tell you what the chances were of it happening on Hutchinson Island.

You folks in Jensen and Port St. Lucie may not care one bit what's going on in Waynesville, N.C., and I imagine not many folks up here care about what's happening down there. That's the way we like it at The Mirror, and I'm sure the feeling is mutual at The Mountaineer.

Letter to the editor

The "Right to Read" in Jensen Beach Elementary School was once again addressed to the Martin County school system. On October 16, 1979, for the second time I went before the Martin County School Board and asked how Mr. Clark, the principal could justify his judgment, by putting such a low priority on the Reading Program at his school. I also asked, how is it possible for Mr. Clark to switch a teacher and/or funds to his liking, after in fact the school budget and position were written up and approved for this year. I feel someone should be held accountable for the loss of the reading specialist. However, Mr. Clark did not attend the School Board meeting that evening. Therefore, the Chairman of the School Board Carolyn Lichty and the Superintendent V. James Navitsky, said that the matter would be placed on the November 6, 1979 agenda and that at that time Mr. Clark would have to be present and answer question asked concerning the reading specialist position.

I feel Mr. Clark's "cop-out" will be, the new state mandated primary specialist, which will be funded by the state and serve only the kindergarten thru the third grade. The primary specialist will spend half of the time assisting in the class room, while the teacher is in the room and the remaining half of the time will be spent doing clerical, staffing, referals, etc. In addition to the primary specialist, Jensen Beach would be entitled to a reading specialist, it has become a matter of priorities.

Schools today can not stress too much reading, more and more students can not function on grade level, because they can not read.

If you question or support the value of a "Reading Specialist," attend the next School Board meeting on Tuesday, November 6th, at 7:00 p.m. in the Administrative Center, 50 Kindred Street, Stuart. If you can not attend the meeting, call the principal, superintendent and the school board members and express your feelings, before that meeting night.

Every child in Jensen Beach Elementary School should have the "Right to Read."

CONVERTING APARTMENTS TO CONDOMINIUMS

QUESTION: Is there a relationship between the rental value of an apartment and its value if it is sold as a condominium? Also, if there is such a rule, who sets the rule?

ANSWER: Across the country, more and more apartment buildings are being converted to condominium ownership. This benefits new individual unit owners as they are able to take advantage of interest and real estated tax deductions which they cannot enjoy as renters. As a result, more and more renters now want to purchase their apartments so that they may combine these tax savings with the appreciation that accrues to ownership but is lost in renting.

In the early years of condominium conversion, there were many rules of thumb which were applied to rental values to indicate a quick estimate of the eventual selling price of the rental unit as a condominium. That rule of thumb may have ranged from 88 to 140 times the economic monthly rent. It is important to note, however, that in the past year or two, as inflation has soared, the formal rules of thumb have been pretty much set on a shelf. We now find that there is less of a relationship between the rental value of the apartment and the eventual condominium sale price than there was several years ago.

The one analysis we might make with some degree of certainty is that, generally, the ratio between rent and sale price has been increasing dramatically and that condominium units which are reaching the market now are generally priced at rent multiples which are significally higher than in earlier years. This trend reflects the increasing desire of wage earners throughout the country to own their own home and to enjoy all the benefits that accrue to home ownership.

JUDGES AT WORK—The costume judging at the Jensen Beach Elementary school carnival was hard work as witness the serious faces on the panel There were so many good ones it was nip and tuck picking the best

NEW MINI-WAREHOUSE—The sprawling new complex on Savanna Road, the MGM Self Storage facility, will get its blessing on Friday at an open house honoring the builder, Miss Martha Moore. It boasts more than 500 spaces.

Jensen's 'beloved citizen' adds to J-B westward growth

Miss Martha Moore, who is her dozen years in Jensen Beach has been an "angel" for the Fire Department, the Jensen Area Samaritans and the Lions' sight-saving program, has now gone into the miniwarehouse business.

Miss Moore's new project is a handsome, sprawling complex of warehouse units located on Savanna Road. An open house marking the official opening will be given in her honor on Friday.

Hosts will be Hartman, Tilton and Wilson, Ins., and W. B. Tilton Real Estate.

The storage complex, MGM Self Storage, contains more than 500 units. It will be especially useful for families who move down here from the north and find they have an overflow of furniture or other possessions. Unfortunately, few Florida homes are built with attics or cellars, the usual repository for such treasured items. Hence, the mini-warehouse is a growingly useful commodity as more people move to our area.

Miss Moore says she has a few small business clients, too. But she expects to serve primarily private individuals with overflow problems.

For Miss Moore, the mini-ware house is her fifth business venture in the Treasure Coast area. Her first, a citrus grove in Vero Beach, exposed her to Jensen and its fame as a fishing mecca.

"And I love to fish," she said.

A native of Wilmington, Del., where her father was an executive with I. E. duPont de Nemours, Miss Moore moved to Fort Lauderdale in the '50s. When Fort Lauderdale became too crowded for her comfort, she shifted her home base to Pompano Beach.

"I had a Surfside Six houseboat," she recalls.

She had the big floating home moored at the Lighthouse Point Yacht basin. She'd been a "permanent resident" there for some time when the manager abruptly and not too politely insisted she move her craft.

She was so incensed by his attitude that she bought the basin so she could fire the manager.

The marina became her first business venture. She ran it successfully for two years.

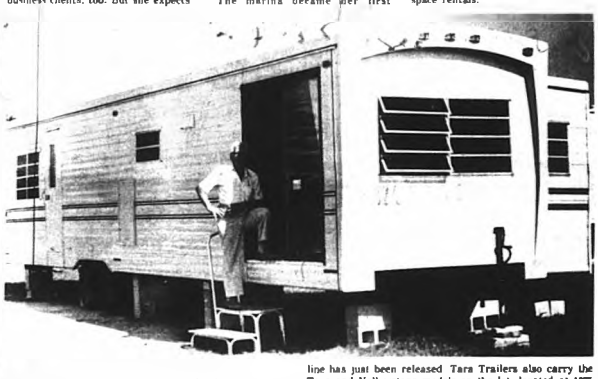
"Then I sold the marina — I was going fishing," she said. She chose Everglades City, a small fishing village in the west coast's 10,000 islands.

"But I was run out by a hurricane."

Then she bought the Vero orange grove, "but I wanted to build a restaurant." She purchased the liquor license for the Windjammer, on Hutchinson Island with that in mind. But it never reached the restaurant stage.

Her next Jensen venture was the Lord Lady, a dress shop on Commercial Street. Then the Boat House, the large blue marina and storage facility at the foot of Commercial Street, went up for sale. Miss Moore bought it, and ran it for a year. Again, she sold out "to go fishing."

At her new warehouse, she has an in-residence manager and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Sal Tortero, who occupy an apartment in the complex. They will be both "watchdogs" and agents for space rentals.



NEW LINE—Willard Auch, owner and sales manager of Tara Trailers, Inc., has announced the acquisition of the first model of the deluxe Royal International 38-35 park model trailer. The new addition to the Royal International line has just been released. Tara Trailers also carry the Tara and Yellowstone models on the lot, located at 1375 Commercial Street in Jensen Beach. The new trailer, according to Auch, "has the most beautiful cabinet work and interior decoration I have ever seen."

Naturalist Society cleans up beaches

Despite overcast weather conditions, 25 student and faculty members of the Florida Institute of Technology campus in Jensen participated in a recent beach clean-up project sponsored by the Naturalist Society.

Keith McCarron, president of the society, said the volunteers collected about 50 35 gallon trash bags of debris along beaches from the north Martin County line to Seminole Shores.

The clean-up was the first of three planned by the group during the 1979-80 school year.

Participants in the clean-up spent about three hours gathering trash, and the project was considered a success, even though rain spoiled activities planned for after the clean-up.

Chiropracter new at Carmel Center

Dr. Paul D. Van Riper, chiropractic physician, has announced the opening of his new office at Carmel Center on Commercial Street in Jensen Beach. Dr. Van Riper and his wife Nancy, a registered nurse, have recently moved here from Locust Valley, N.Y. They have two children.

Dr. Van Riper has been practicing chiropractic for ten years. He maintained an office in Glen Cove, N.Y., and was also a member of the faculty at the New York Chiropractic College where he served as Clinic Director. While at this post, Dr. Van Riper and his assistant directors were responsible for the supervision of the clinical education of the senior interns. Dr. Van Riper was also a member of the Admissions Committee at the college.

Dr. Van Riper was graduated from the Chiropractic Institute of New York in 1967. He completed post graduate studies in chiropractic orthopedics at the National College of Chiropractic in Lombard, Ill. He is a member of the American Chiropractic Association, the Florida Chiropractic Association, and is a Diplomate of the National Board of Chiropractic Examiners.

While in New York, the doctor was active in community and church affairs as a member of the Kiwanis Club of Glen Cove and the Knights of Columbus.

Some of the services to be offered at the office will include chiropractic manipulative therapy, physiological therapeutics, corrective exercise programs, and nutritional counseling, as well as complete diagnostic services, spinal analysis, postural analysis and scoliosis screening for children and adolescents. It is noted by Dr. Van Riper that chiropractic services are covered under medicare, workmen's compensation, and most private insurance policies.

The doctor will be seeing patients on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday. The telephone number is 334-2525.

Local men on I-95 Committee

Two men from Jensen Beach and three from Stuart have been named to the Citizen's Task Force, which will serve as a watchdog group in the planning and development of Interstate 95.

The Jensen men are A. A. "Buck" Henry and Robert Hall. The Stuart members of the 12-man team are John Darlson, Dick Geisinger Sr., and William Willis.

The 12 had an introductory session last Friday in Tequesta to acquaint themselves with each other and with the members of the State Department of Transportation with whom they will be working. Present for the session were DOT engineer Bill Fowler of Fort Lauderdale and State Secretary of Transportation William Rose.

The purpose of the committee, Darlson told The Mirror, will be to oversee the activity of DOT, to keep a hand on the pulse of acquisition of rights of way of the freeway through Martin County, and to serve as "ambassadors of good will" by giving talks on the project for area clubs and organizations.

Deadline for beginning the project is 1985, but Darlson says that hopes are high that it can get underway before that time. The route, Alternate 10-A, has been approved in Tallahassee and is now in the final stages in Washington.

One question the committee anticipates facing is the number of interchanges to serve the Martin County portion of the throughway. One was suggested in the original plan, but the County Commission has gone on record as needing two additional ones.

Others on the task force are Mrs. Alice Climas of Jupiter, Col. Frank Donahue of Palm Beach, Donald L. Kiselewski of Palm Beach Gardens, Richard G. Lepeska of Miami (of the South Florida Coordinating Council;) Tom Orr of Jupiter, Hal Stayman of West Palm Beach, and Bill Taylor of Jupiter.

The magazine has had growing popularity since it began publication in 1973. Many of its articles deal with people and social events in this area.

The new office is located at 1988 Ricou Blvd. It will be manned by Alley, his wife Karen as associate editor, and members of the business and editorial staffs.

The Alleys live here in Leilani Heights.

Lt. Rathgeber in NATO exercise

Marine 1st Lt. David G. rathgeber, son of Eugene R. and Mary L. Rathgeber of 1893 NE Lake Place, Jensen Beach, Fla., recently participated in the major NATO exercise "Display Determination."

He is an officer assigned to the 3rd Light Anti-Aircraft Missile Battalion, Marine Air Control Group 28, based at Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, N.C.

More than 11,000 U.S. sailors and marines joined air and naval forces from Portugal, Italy, Turkey and the United Kingdom for the three week exercise in the Mediterranean area.

Operation "Display Determination" was designed to evaluate NATO's capability to reinforce and resupply forces in Southern Europe. It is one of a series of annual operations, conducted each fall from Norway to Turkey, which provides unified and coordinated training of national and NATO forces within the Allied European Command.

A 1973 graduate of Martin County High School, Stuart, Fla., Rathgeber joined the Marine Corps in December 1975.

Samaritans calling

BY NELLIE D. COOK

Ambulance runs for the week Oct. 20 thru Oct. 27 totaled 22. Broken down there were 12 emergency, 3 transports, 3 cancelled, and 4 motor related.

Perhaps some get tired of hearing about Volunteers, for they have been in the headlines in our newspapers for months. However they are special people; for instance, the two young men who gave up their weekend to brighten up our squad room with two coats of pale green paint.

Then there are four others of our older members, perhaps I should say members of many years. The four spent many hours on Saturday digging and covering a holding tank for our building, another much needed job done.

The Pinelake Boys are still with the Volunteers who wash ambulances each Saturday. Seems there was a little misunderstanding when one month came up with five Saturdays. We are so grateful to all who are willing to help.

The Heaslips did their thing last week too. Miss Kathy King of Jensen Elementary School contacted them about a re-run of last year. On Tuesday, Vivian and Bob took a vehicle to the school and worked two sections, 8:45 a.m. and 10:55 a.m. Bob explained to the children the function of the Samaritans, then he and Vivian together showed them all the equipment, then demonstrated taking blood pressures, and used air splints on some of the students, while others looked on.

All had an opportunity to walk through the vehicle, and after a question and answer period the class was completed. It is my understanding that this demonstration will go toward credits in their Health Education.

As of November 1st, it is necessary for all drivers of Samaritan vehicles to have C.P.R. Those needing this instruction, please get in touch with Instructor Ray La Frey. A class will be arranged as soon as 8 to 10 persons are ready to take their training. For information call 334-7289.

It may interest you folks to know that we have one paramedic, and one driver, who come down one or more nights each week from Vero Beach to volunteer their time with the Samaritans.

Portrait photo club topic

The Martin County Photographic Society will conduct a meeting and photographic competition on Wednesday, November 7 in the Stokes Memorial Room of the Martin County Public Library at 7 p.m.

Under discussion will be the varying approaches to Portrait Photography. The basic lighting and posing techniques will be shown and some tips to simple lighting will be revealed.

For the competitor, a special subject competition will be held where each person may enter up to three slides or prints of pictures "High or Low." Any photograph that represents a subject of a "High or Low" natural perspective or that subject which is treated at a special angle of view which is high or low will be the primary interest.

As a tip for the new photographer, the pictures are judged on the basis of the subject matter, the quality of work, the composition of the over all subject, and the techniques used. All types and sizes of photos may be entered for competition.

The meeting and competition is free and open to the general public. For more information please call 283-2791.

Edison comes alive at J-B Elementary

The students at Jensen Beach Elementary School had a firsthand look into the life and accomplishments of Thomas Alva Edison, from whose inventive mind grew such fruits of modern living as the light bulb, the phonograph and the movies.

Last Friday was the official "birthday of the light bulb," and a huge transparent bulb had been donated for the occasion to be used in the school program. It and other originals — an old 78 rpm record player, and old Edison records were explained and played for fourth and fifth graders by students George Davin and Edwardo Figuerado.

Others taking part in the program were Todd Patten, who told of Edison's early life; Karen Daly, telling of the inventor's later life; Christopher Rizzolo, who detailed Edison's inventions, and Elaine Feinman, who outlined Edison's place in history.

A real treat for all the students, during the series of programs for all grade levels, were the Charlie Chaplin comedies, products of the silent film era.

Lou Rizzolo, vice-principal, coordinated the Edison Day project.

Fleet Blessing Committee to meet

The first meeting of the 1980 Blessing of the Fleet Committee will be held Nov. 6 at 8 p.m. in the clubroom of the Anchorline Yacht Club.

K.N. Krecke is this year's chairman, succeeding Lan Wear. He has invited representatives of all of the area Yacht Clubs, the Power Squadron, and the Coast Guard Auxiliary to participate in the planning of the event, the major spectacular of the year for boaters.

Krecke is commodore of the Saints and Sinners Yacht Club of Port St. Lucie. Plans will get underway for the Blessing of the Fleet itself and for the awards banquet following.

The event is held to promote safe boating along our rivers. Last year, Krecke said, a total of 301 passed before the review, and the net proceeds of $1,300 was turned over to the Coast Guard Auxiliary, Flotilla 59, and to the St. Lucie River Power Squadron for the promotion of operational and boat safety instruction, and for auxiliary rescue assistance.

Each session will be devoted to a separate area of the musical repertoire, and will be conducted by a faculty of the most musically competent instructors from Palm Beach, Martin and St. Lucie counties.

The series is sponsored by the Adult Education Department of Martin County Schools. Because space is limited, early registration is recommended. For further information, people may call Gerry Simon at 229-0645.

Search on for Fla. Seabees

The Seabee Veterans of Florida is instituting a search for Seabees, the U.S. Navy Construction Battalion which did such valiant advance work for the country in World War II.

According to James F. Sullivan, state secretary of the organization, 10,000 Seabees now live in Florida. The information is being sought in order to plan a state-wide reunion. It will help update present files and provide information needed in setting up a proposed reunion.

"We receive many inquiries from Seabees endeavoring to locate former friends," Sullivan says. "Such a file as that planned would enable us to assist not only former Seabees but also their widows.

All former Seabees are asked to contact Kenneth D. Gammon, State Commander, 1720 Dana Place, Lakeland, Fla., 33801, or Sullivan at 3801 18th Way East, Seven Springs, Fla. 33552.

Schools seeking volunteers

The Martin County Schools, aware of the rich human resources in the area, are looking for people with special talents, skills and cultural knowledge to enhance the school program.

"The Martin County area is rich with people who possess various skills, hobbies, experiences and special knowledge," Janet Rizzolo of the "Partners in Education" program said this week. "These many varied life experiences and knowledge can help enrich the learning processes and lives of young people by enriching their studies in the classroom, either on a one time or as needed basis."

School resource volunteers make a vital contribution to the education of the students, Mrs. Rizzolo said.

The school system is establishing a Partners in Education file, and those who register will be called into the classroom to share their experiences and knowledge with the class.

There is no age limit. Volunteers from 18 through 90 will be welcomed. Those wishing to become part of the resource program are invited to either call Janet Rizzolo at 287-8271, or to write Partners in Education, 500 E. Ocean Blvd., Stuart, Fla., 33494.

BEWARE! the "RUST MONSTER"

He works 24 hours a day

QUESTION

If rust can start anywhere. Including inside parts, then how can a body repairman detect all the rusted areas?

ANSWER

He can't! He doesn't have X-Ray vision, so it's impossible for him to detect rust that has started in hidden places. A body shop operator can not be held responsible for a rust condition which was undetectable at the time of a repair. Because of this, rust may appear at any time, even within days of when a vehicle was refinished.

Battle paces MI in 28-0 conquest of Central

LADY FOR THE HIT-Fort Pierce Central quarterback er Barriner appears determined to avoid the grasp of an determined Mustang from Merritt Island High School, ing the teams'--District 10-AAAA showdown in Fort ce last Friday. Barriner's fifth-ranked Cobras were declawed by the top-ranked Mustangs, 28-0, as the visitors clinched their sixth straight District 10 championship. In the latest poll, released yesterday (Tuesday), FP Central slipped to ninth, while MI remained number one.

It was billed as the most exciting game to be held in the state of Florida during the 1979 high school regular season--a football game to behold. A game that matched the two stingiest defenses this side of the NFL.

For most of three periods, it was that. But sometime near the end of the third quarter, Fort Pierce Central's vaunted "Gold Crush" defense wilted under a sea of turnovers by their offensive mates, and the Mustang ran loose forevermore.

It was difficult to pinpoint the exact time of collapse, but the chief culprit was no farther away than the group of visiting fans huddled near the Merritt Island dressing room.

For after a half-season war against injuries, Walter Battle, an all-state running back as a junior a year ago, picked the perfect night to emerge from the cob webbs, ripping through the FPC defense for 134 yards and scoring three touchdowns in the Mustangs' 28-0 victory.

"We've just got a good group of kids," said Gerald Odom, who has made a living out of turning out one group after another of "good kids" since he took over the Mustangs' program from Eddie Fealy.

"There are no superstars on this football team," he continued. "From one side of the line to the other, we are merely a well-balanced team."

Battle's longest gallop of the game, a 54-yard sprint up the middle, then down the left sideline, established an early lead for the Mustangs in what appeared to be a defensive struggle. The TD run and extra point kick by David Bell made it 7-0 with 7:03 remaining in the second quarter.

It stayed that way until MI gained possession of the ball with 4:28 to play in the third canto, when Battle reeled off consecutive gains of 11 and 12 yards, placing the pigskin at the FPC 32. A play later, Wickersham, who has done a magnificent job in replacing the injured Steve Childers, hit wide receiver Carl Armstrong for 16 yards and a first down at the Central 15. After a penalty and a fourth down plunge to the three by fullback Keith Edwards, Battle high-stepped into the end zone off an option play, and show had begun.

No sooner had the curtain fallen on Act I, than the cast was called back onstage, courtesy of a Stoney Barriner fumble at the FPC 30-yard line. After Battle exploded for eight yards, Wickersham hit Armstrong across the middle near the goal line, and the receiver, who beat defensive back Latoya Bellomy badly on the play, had an easy touchdown.

Suddenly, with just 11:22 remaining in the game, FPC was on the brink of extinction. Quarterback Peter Barriner, who could manage just 94 yards passing and five completions in 23 attempts, could do nothing but try again, and his first-play pass to Luther Sandifer was picked off by free safety Kevin Parrish at the Central 38.

Two minutes, 27 seconds and 16 Battle-yards" later, the game was over, as Battle scored his third touchdown on a four-yard burst. Bell's PAT made it 28-0.

"Walter (Battle) had just a super game. He suffered a hip pointer last week in the Cocoa game (a 34-21 win) and it was doubtful as to whether he'd even play. He just did it on sheer guts and determination."

Fort Pierce Central did have their chances, though they were few and far between. On the opening kickoff, Ronald Sessions stripped the ball from MI's Early Hackney, and the Cobras were where no team has tread too firmly, deep in Mustang territory at the 22.

But after moving to the five, the Cobra drive stalled when Barriner missed on two pass attempts, one of which was dropped by Victor Phillips in the end zone.

It wasn't until the Cobras took over at their own two late in the second quarter that they were able to launch another march. After consecutive runs of 12 and 10 yards by Ron Lee and Winston Franklin, Stoney Barriner teased a halfback option pass to Sandifer, who pulled it in at the MI 35. A quick 12-yarder from Pete Barriner to Phillips took the ball as far as the 23, but three attempts at the end zone failed as the first half closed.

Never in the second half, except for a last-second, meaningless drive, did the Cobras, cheered on by a crowd of over 8,000 fans, threaten.

"We just weren't able to block people," uttered Farinella. "Even on the good runs, it was just a case of a good effort by the running back."

Battle had plenty of those, and even found time to chat with some of the fans after the game. One man told him that he had never seen Merritt Island play before--that he had heard a lot about them, but never actually seen them play. He added that he thought their number one rating was only due to last year's state title, until the FPC game.

"What do you think now?" asked Battle.

"I think you're number one."

It would seem that way, sir.

hil Farinella, the Head Coach at t Pierce Central, had said before GAME that it would be the -and Merritt Island mentor ld Odom repeated it after THE ME. That is, after his Mustangs disposed of the Cobras, 28-0 and ched the District 10-AAAA mpionship for 1979.

They didn't adjust to what we were g on offense," reflected Odom, will lead his squad into the state offs for the sixth year in a row.

We wanted to make them coach e in the field," revealed the MI ter. "We were able to take quite a things away from them, but we them a few, too. They just didn't e advantage of them."

linebackers played a vital role in game, on both sides of the field. m claimed victory largely because linebackers were able to harass C quarterback Peter Barriner all nt long. Their defense confused us," said riner. "Their linebackers stunted ot differently than we were eeting. Some of our guys were ing their blocks, but somehow the backers were able to get past m.

We wanted to establish a running e, but we never did. We felt that if could do that, the passing game ld open up, but it seemed like rritt Island knew every move we e making."

Farinella realized his team's takes did a great deal of damage to Cobras' district hopes.

We did things that we hadn't done year. We hadn't turned the ball in our own territory all season, we did it twice Friday night."

erritt Island quickly converted turnovers--a fumble recovery by y Cabe and an interception by ty Kevin Parrish--into touch-s, clinching its win early in the th quarter.

If we win these last three games, might get a bowl game," smiled riner.

A PICTURE IS BETTER THAN A THOUSAND-words; especially in the case of Fort Pierce Central defensive back Latoya Bellomy. Bellomy's Cobras fell to number one-ranked Merritt Island, 28-0 at Lawnwood Complex last Friday night, breaking a string of four straight wins at home for the Cobras against the highly regarded Mustangs.

Professionals win two games

Rich Miller smacked four hits and teammates Dennis Miller and Rex Stark followed with three each Sunday night, as the Professional Drapery Service (Professionals) charged into first place in the Port St. Lucie Slo-Pitch softball league with an 18-2 shellacking of Gold Shield.

Gold Shield (now 6-4) entered Sunday's play with first place in their grasp, but when the Pro's whipped the Civitan Club, 17-9, then beat them, the leaders were dethroned.

Currently, after ten weeks of play (three have been washed out by heavy rainfall), the Professionals are 7-3, followed by the Florida Home Finders (7-4), Gold Shield (6-4), Foster Wright Construction (5-5), Citizen's Federal (4-6) and the Civitans (2-9).

In other action Sunday, the Civitans came to life, with John Conway blasting a first-inning grand slam home run, beating favored Foster Wright, 26-14, while the Home Finders had to play ten innings before edging Citizen's Federal, 16-13.

In the battle of the leaders, Gold Shield scored both its runs in the first inning, taking an early lead, but the Pro's came right back with five tallies in the bottom of the inning for a 5-2 lead.

The Professionals played brilliant defense, as did many teams on Sunday, turning two double plays. On one occasion, in the third inning, Dennis Miller robbed Gold Shield pitcher Ray Harless of at least a triple, perhaps a home run, when he made a backpeddling stab of Harless' long fly ball to left field.

Stark collected a triple, as well as a home run which highlighted the Pro's six-run sixth inning, making the score 14-2 and all but clinching the game.

The Professionals ripped 22 hits, while the losing Gold Shield squad had nine. Keith Akra was the winning pitcher.

All six PSL softball squads are back in action this weekend, with games beginning at 5:00 p.m.

HAPPY INDIANS–Michelle Bowdish, left, and Shannon Murphy were all smiles last week when they dressed as Seminole Indians at Jensen Beach Elementary School. The dress-up day capped a unit of study on early Florida history.

LISA MARTINEZ not only wore an Indian costume when she came to school last week, she also wore two big dimples. She and fellow fourth graders at Jensen Beach Elementary School have been studying early Florida history, and as a culmination to that unit of study, the kids dressed as Indians and feasted on Indian food.

United Way: person -to-person sharing

ING HANDS—Lon Wear, left, and Dick Harman shake hands on a promise elp Martin County meet its United Way goal of $145,000. Wear, former modore of the Anchorline Yacht Club and a retired insurance executive, is chairman for condominiums and mobile home parks. Harman, assistant inistrator for Martin Memorial Hospital, is general chairman for the county.

The United Way of Martin County, which provides funds for 12 agencies serving the needs of people both young and old throughout the area, is reaching approximately half of its annual campaign goal, according to general chairman Dick Harman, assistant administrator of Martin Memorial Hospital.

The goal this year is $145,000. Harman emphasizes that "better than 92 cents out of every dollar" go directly into the services, many of which are invaluable to people in the Jensen Rio Hutchinson Island area.

"Only 3.7 percent goes to administration," Harman said. "With the exception of a person to answer the phone and make referrals, it all goes into the agencies."

The agencies from which the Jensen area gets the most for its money are the Visiting Nurses Association, the Jensen Area Samaritans, the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and the United Services Organization.

According to Beth Simmons of the VNA, a large percentage of the nurses' home calls are made in Jensen Rio and to condominiums.

These trained nurses are kept busy visiting the homes of cancer and heart patients, and others in need of professional home care. The Samaritans, volunteer ambulance service, is invaluable to the Jensen-Hi-Rio and Sewall's Point sectors, providing efficient transportation to the hospital for victims of: accidents and all varieties of ailments. The group also receives generous financial aid from the community, but the United Way allocates extra funds when they are needed.

The Boy Scout and Girl Scout programs, in keeping with the United Way goals of character development and leadership training for the young, are among the main thrusts of UW support. And families with men in the U.S. armed forces frequently have their problems solved by the USO.

Other agencies receiving UW funding are the Children's Home Society, The Gertrude Walden Child Care Center where working mothers may leave their children, paying only what they can afford; The Maurawood Home for unwed mothers; the American Red Cross; the Society for Crippled Children and Adults; the Tri-County Rehabilitation Center, and the Association for Mental Health.

The City of Hope, a Denver children's hospital, is also included. Harman says, but only because the Florida Power of Light unions annually designate it as the specific use of their donations. Anyone making contributions to the United Way may earmark the money for some single agency or agencies, Harman noted, and the money will be put to that use.

The drive has been proceeding well, Harman says, but one of the volunteers, Lon Wear, has had a tough nut to crack. He is chairman for mobile home parks and condominiums, and almost without exception, the condos have refused hmentry, using the "no soliciting" rule as a barrier.

"I know that many of these people want to give their share," Wear told The Mirror. "As it is, some don't even know a fund drive is being conducted."

Nonetheless, Harman is confident that the goal will be reached.

"We're planning our victory dinner for Dec. 6," he said.

ARTIST AND FAMILY—Artist Roland Reinel, right, welcomes visitors and art lovers at Sunday's reception at Elliott Museum. With him, from left, are Mrs. Reinel, Museum Director Janet Hutchinson, and the Reinels' son Daniel. Eleven of the artist's inks and pastels, which have an international flavor, were sold during the reception. The Reinel show will be an attraction at the membership cocktail, from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. Friday. (Staff photo)

Big events coming at Elliott

Elliott Museum, one of the two major concerns of the Martin County Historical Society, will be the scene of a double spectacular on Friday, Nov. 9.

The affair is the annual membership cocktail party, open to all art lovers in the area. And the featured attraction is a new showing, the works of a prominent Swiss artist now living in the Palm City area.

The cocktail party's proceeds will be used for the construction of a boat, a replica of craft used in the era of the county's first white settlers. It has been designed and will be constructed by artist Pat Kenny, whose marine scapes have become famous both here and in his native Price Edward Island. Kenny's childhood was spent with boats and boat-builders, and he is an expert on boat-crafting.

The big drawing card for the party will be the newly hung show of the works of Roland Reinel, who has had exhibits in Europe, South America, and from the east to west in the United States.

Reinel, a native of Lausanne, studied in Italy, Switzerland and Canada. An ardent traveler, he has crossed both North and South America to draw material for his painting. He has also been chosen as illustrator for several books.

The cocktail party, always a highlight of the area's social season, will take place from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the museum.

It is open to all members and prospective members of the Historical Society.

Lucky little lady wins second bike

They call her Lucky Suzi.

And for good reason. In her short six years, Suzanne Frink, daughter of Ken and Darleene Frink of 2528 Letitia St., has won two bicycles, and seems to come out a winner in every contest or drawing that happens along.

Her latest coup was to win one of the big prizes in a national contest. Co-sponsored by Kellogg Corporation and Schwinn Bicycles, it called for a colored picture of a breakfast representing the slogan: "Stick Up for Breakfast."

Suzi entered, and last week she was informed she is the proud owner of a brand-new Schwinn bike. She and her father picked it up from Mac's Bike Shop in Spruce Plaza.

Being a winner is old-hat to Suzi, her father says. She won her first bike when she was two years old, in a MacDonald's drawing.

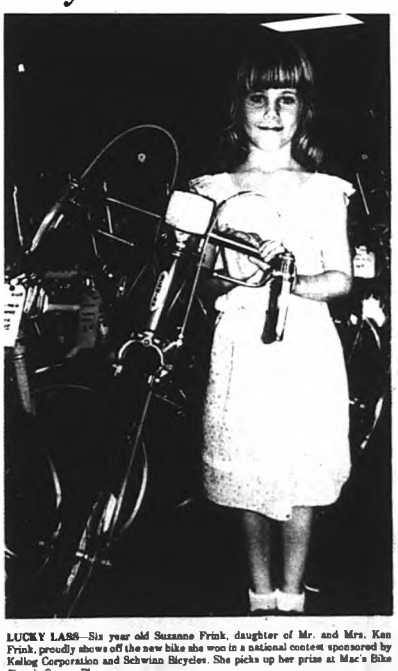
"And every time we go in there now, she wins something," Frink told The Mirror.

Suzi's luck runs out in all directions.

"Whenever I go to Jai Alai," daddy said, "I ask her for numbers. The one she picks always come in."

When she was four, Suzi was a winner in a contest sponsored by radio station WSTU, and as a result mother and daddy dined in style at the Sheraton.

A first grader at Jensen Beach Elementary School, Suzi doesn't seem to think her luck is anything special. She's just a nice, normal little American girl—who happens to have been born under a lucky star.



LUCKY LASS—Six year old Suzanne Frink, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Frink, proudly shows off the new bike she won in a national contest sponsored by Kellog Corporation and Schwinn Bicycles. She picks up her prize at Mac's Bike Shop in Spruce Plaza.

Rummage sale for MCHS scholarships

The Epsilon Zeta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi will hold a rummage sale from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 10 in the parking lot of the Stuart National Bank on East Ocean Boulevard in Stuart.

Lots of clothing items, books and other assorted items will be offered, and the sale is to benefit the Martin County High School Scholarship Fund.

OFFICIAL CUT-UP—County Commissioner Frank Wachs was present to cut yet another ribbon last week, at the official opening of the MGM mini-warehouses on Savanna Road. In center, with him, are Martha Moore, builder of the 500-unit facility, and Ransom Tilton, one of the hosts at the open house. Among the many attending were members of the Jensen and Rio fire departments and the Jensen Area Samaritans, for all of which Miss Moore has played "angel." W. B. Tilton Real Estate and Hartman, Tilton and Wilson gave the party for Miss Moore. (Staff photo)

Possum Long Week features canoe-a-thon, nature talks

A canoe-a-thon on the beautiful Loxahatchee River this Saturday will wrap up a week full of activities designed to draw attention to the Possum Long Nature Center of the Martin County Audubon Society.

Dale Jarrett, co-chairman of the canoeing event, said nearly a dozen entries have been received for Saturday's paddle down the river, and she says it's an excellent opportunity for persons to view the beauty of the river while getting in some healthy exercise.

Entrants in the canoe-a-thon are seeking sponsors to help raise funds for the Possum Long Center, and a prize will be awarded to the canoeist who brings in the most money for the center.

Co-chairing the event is Keith McCarron of the Naturalist Society at Florida Institute of Technology in Jensen Beach. He and a number of other members of the Naturalist Society will participate in the event, as well as help organize it.

Ms. Jarrett noted that the Loxahatchee is the southernmost river on the southeast coast that is still natural, and said a request to federal authorities has been made to get a "Wild and Scenic" status for the river.

The canoe-a-thon will begin around 8 a.m. Saturday at the boat ramp in Jonathan Dickinson State Park. A 12-mile and a six-mile course are set up for canoeists.

Though canoists will get a look at the beauty of the Loxahatchee, it's the Possum Long Center that's to be the center of attention.

The Audubon Society declared the week of Nov. 4-10 as Possum Long Week, and each day of the week special events at the center were planned.

Events on Thursday include a talk on herbs by Buzzy Lord at 10 a.m. and a discussion on the care of wildlife by Jean Henry at 1:30 p.m. Ms. Henry operates a wildlife hospital west of Stuart and is credited with saving numerous birds and animals. Dr. Edwin Menninger will make a presentation on flowering trees at 2:30 p.m.

On Friday, a presentation of mementos about Possum Long, titled "We Remember," will be given by Jim Hutchinson, Harold Johns, Howard McCormick, Ed Thayer, Mabel Witham, Jock Leighton and Ralph Hartman Jr.

The center will also be open for plant sales from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Thursday and Friday.

Named after E. W. Long, a Martin County teacher who used to "play possum" to detect mischievous students, the center is owned by the Martin County Audubon Society. It is located on Ribiscus Street a short distance southeast of the East Ocean Blvd.-Palm Beach Rd. intersection. Long was a teacher in Martin County for 20 years.

The center is a beautiful, semi-jungle parkland covering about five acres and containing a wide variety of plants and trees.

All funds raised during Possum Long Week are to go toward paying off the mortgage on the land.

Homes needed for elderly, retarded

With all the generosity of spirit rampant around us in the North Martin County area, one growingly acute need remains unfulfilled, according to Cindy Hayes, director of care of retarded and elderly adults in the Health and Rehabilitative Services program.

The need is for "foster parents," who open their homes to one or more people no longer able to function independently in homes of their own.

"In Martin County, we have no foster homes," Hayes told The Mirror. "As it is now, we have to refer them to either St. Lucie or Palm Beach Counties."

Miss Hayes, who heads a mixed adult service unit including the elderly and the slightly retarded, explained that the need is growing at the local level because the state is phasing out the Sunland facilities at Fort Myers, Orlando and Gainesville.

"The concept is good, but they don't have the funds to keep the operations going," she said.

The community-level care for the aged and the retarded has been sought for some years by the state mental health association. Institutionalism isolates and alienates the individual, while care at the community level tends to make the person in need of care relate better to the mainstream of a society with which he or she is familiar.

Thus far, however, few doors have been opened in Martin County to make the program functional. One woman, Mildred Howard, has five in her home, Miss Hayes said. The social worker feels the lack of foster homes is due entirely to the lack of information on the subject.

"The state pays the foster parent $226 per month per person," Miss Hayes said. "This is to cover food and clothing. Our office works on-going with them, and will supply necessary medical or physical needs."

Among the needy retardates, she cited the case of a young man whose mother recently died, leaving him with no one to provide the physical care he requires.

Miss Hayes emphasized that her office handles only the "higher level" retardates — those who can care for themselves to a limited degree, yet in need of supplemental home care. The severe cases are referred to state institutions.

Miss Hayes, who has been with Health and Rehabilitative services for nine years, receives her references and requests for placements from many sources, the county welfare office, the Red Cross and from individuals.

She hares space in the Multi-Services Center located at 821 E. Seventh Street in Stuart. Under the same roof are the food stamp office, aid to families with dependent children, adult services, and developmental services for the physically and mentally handicapped.

Frequently their jobs interrelate. Pamela Pickard Black and Susan Roll are the two adult social workers. Regina Donahue is the development service social worker dealing with retardates, the cerebral palsied, and autistic children and adults.

Alice Kerwin and elen Calabro work with reuniting families separated by financial or other disaster.

Some of the people she serves, Miss Hayes says, are capable of functioning in the community, and many are being trained into gainful employment at the Tri County Rehabilitation Center.

Anyone wishing further information about the program, or desiring to open his or her home to a dependent person may either call her at 287-8585 or see her at the Multi Service Center at 821 E. Seventh Street.

Fishing suffering in face of brisk winds

BY DONNIE WILKIE

"Area fishing became almost non-existent last week, not because the fish weren't swimming, but, according to area fishing expert Tom Stewart, "because the fishermen aren't fishing."

"Things have really been slow with all this wind," said Stewart Tuesday. "The only real action has been around the river, but the wind has been too strong for anything in the surf."

In fact, through the report, the Mirror could only brag of one catch in the surf.

On Saturday, Norton Euart and Dave Taylor hunted for hours for the — place along the beach suitable for fishing — and they found it. Because after their trip, Euart and Taylor had bagged 26 blues and two sand sharks. But Stewart says their method will be the only successful one until the wind stops blowing.

"These fellows found a clear spot in all the sea weed that's been blowing up onto shore. If anyone is going to have any luck at all," continued Stewart, "he'll have to hunt the beaches, like they did. These guys started at the Jensen Beach — their catch was at Rand's Pier!

Elsewhere on the fishing front, Charlie Arensi caught three snook, fishing in the river, and using trout lures with a two-rig. Roy Greenwald and Jack Prell landed four trout (up to four pounds), in the river, with a 7 m 18 mirrolure, and Ron Ellis grabbed eight snappers, in the river, using live shrimp.

Irv. Fisher got two blues, a six pound sheepshead, and ten mangrove snappers, in the river, using shrimp; Joe Apfelbeck got four drums, fishing off the Jensen Bridge — he used live shrimp; Bob Duncan, Charlie Kessler and Johnny Crawford pooled two snook, 15 snappers, six jacks, five sheepshead and a grouper, fishing together in the river, using live shrimp.

Darryll Patterson snapped up ten drums, from the Jensen Bridge, he was using live shrimp, while John Mastos and Jim Weil used a banana lure to shore a half-dozen trout (36 pounds). They were fishing in the Indian River.

Ed Wagner and Pat Patterson got 14 trout, in the river, using a gold Tony spoon; Brian Evans got a seven pound, 14-ounce trout, fishing in front of the Crossroads Motel in the Indian River, using live pinfish; and Rawson Lizars and Mark Dieffenbach snatched a 40 pound tarpon and 28 jacks, he was using Art Ryan poppers, in the river.

Weather wise, as previously mentioned, the winds shifted in a northerly movement, while temperatures slowly decreased.

BIG CATCH—Tom Doersam, from Ontario, shows off his catch Tuesday afternoon, after a morning fishing expedition in the Indian River netted this 12 and three-quarter pound fluke. It was a big one, all right, as the all-time Martin County record is just 14. He was using live shrimp.

VETERAN'S DAY – 1979
by
ALLEN F. BREWER

In 1918 I was Armistice Day,
The guns of war had ceased,
Through those tragic years the veterans
Had yearned for this welcome peace
Today we call it Veteran's Day
For those who served—and died,
In America's wars of yesterday
Them we salute with pride
The the wars of yesterday tested our strength-
Don't forget, that could disappear.
Unless we remember—"United We Stand"
As the veterans did in those years

Martin Memorial needs to expand

There is a certain hesitancy among those in hospital development business to expand facilities. However, across the nation there are hospitals doing just that with proper effect and with their operations in the black.

Martin Memorial Hospital is not a tax-supported institution. It is a non-profit hospital that has made ends meet and has expanded to meet the needs of the people of Martin County.

It is a hospital of which we all can be proud.

However, there is a crying need for hospital facilities in Port St. Lucie. The facility need not be a complete hospital. It can offer all the things that are necessary, with in-patient and out-patient care, a clinic and minor emergency care.

All major health care could still be performed at Martin Memorial.

The equipment necessary for a complete hospital operation is so eternally expensive, we do not believe that a complete hospital is that necessary for Port St. Lucie.

We appreciate the effort of the Port St. Lucie Health Planning Committee in trying to provide the necessary facilities for their residents. The recent endorsement of a hospital by the planning committee, the city council and the community in general seems to be in response to the lack of a commitment by Martin Memorial to repeated requests for such a service.

The offer of General Care Corporation, a profit oriented hospital operating group, is an honest one, but the cost could be lowered considerably if it were one made by a non-profit hospital.

There is so much that can be done.

It is the hope of The Mirror that the board of Martin Memorial Hospital gives serious attention to the possibility of a hospital facility in Port St. Lucie.

The need is there.

The nursing home expansion

The Florida Community Health Facilities Board in Tallahassee approved a 60-bed nursing home for Port St. Lucie. Before the building is started, there are 32 applications for patients.

The Port St. Lucie Health Planning Committee asked for 120 beds in the nursing home. Tallahassee cut the number in half, on the reason that Port St. Lucie couldn't support the greater number of beds.

It is obvious in this senior citizen-oriented area that there are many in need of such care. It is also obvious, if a financial balance sheet was drawn, that the area is affluent, with little or no poverty-level low-income families.

The growing number of seniors in the Martin-St. Lucie County area, all with a sound financial base, deserves better than minimal treatment by the state. By cutting the project in half, the state did not cut down the cost by half. Basic construction doesn't work that way.

It is true that the building will be built for expansion, but the way things are going, an application for that expansion should be made on the day the facility opens. It will be a terrible waste of money for the facility to operate marginally when it could open with the growth potential that surely is there.

What's in an ad?

More people read the 'ads' in a newspaper than the news, sounds a little funny? Well, it's true, according to national surveys.

I read an interesting thing by Walter C. Kurz of the Chicago Tribune that tells what an ad is to him. I like it and I think you will, too.

It's born in a far-off forest to the ringing cry of "Timber!" and before it dies, it demonstrates its usefulness to the tune of a ringing cash register.

TO THE BUSINESSMAN

To the businessman, a newspaper ad is the adrenalin that makes a tired sales curve spring to life and shakes a sleepy economy awake.

A newspaper ad is a strident cry of a discount store hawking its wares, or it is the soft whisper of a blue chip's institutional message.

A newspaper ad is a colossal 16-page introduction to a one hundred million dollar new car model, or it's a tiny two lines with news of a 10-year-old jalopy selling for $95.

A newspaper ad is a shout of hope. "Grand Opening" — or the end of a dream. "Going Out of Business Sale."

A newspaper ad is ten thousand people at a dollar-day sale or it is one person spending ten thousand dollars for a diamond bracelet.

A newspaper ad is a friendly "Hello" from the big bank downtown that says stop by any time, or a sharp reminder from the manufacturer that he has a great new produce you need right now.

TO THE NEWSPAPER READER

A newspaper ad is the sale that brings the housewife's budget in just under the wire.

A newspaper ad is that certain something special worth splurging on.

A newspaper ad is the warm security of discovering that dream home for your family or it's the bold challenge of a new job in a far off place.

A newspaper ad is down-to-earth product advice a mother can appreciate or it's a flight of fancy only a woman can understand.

A newspaper ad is pleasant escape to a vacation wonderland, or it is a practical hint to better meals in the hustle and bustle of everyday living.

A newspaper ad is a mother finding that beauty treatment she always wanted, or it's dad's selling those power tools he never used.

A newspaper ad is shopping in the comfort of our breakfast room, or braving the weather because that sale is too good to miss.

But a newspaper ad is more than that. It's faith, believability, knowledge from experience that the product is here in town today and wanting to do business. It is a call to action backed by a friend you can trust.

Computers still at it

I'm a faithful fan of Reader's Digest, but it hires the dumbest computers in the universe.

On several occasions, over the years, I've fallen for their "win $50,000" offers (I can always say no and still enter, but once in a while their come-on commodity is so tempting I can't refuse) and so far, their score of goofs by far outcounts their non-boobops.

And they've all been flubbed since the computer took over their communications.

In the past five years I've (a) sent for records and received a World Almanac; (b) ordered tapes and wound up with cassettes, and — most recently, given in to a book on animals and got back a dictionary.

I've tried to get the errors corrected, but the digital dummy that handles my account never gets the point.

I was particularly intrigued on the offered book about animals, because I have a granddaughter to whom all creatures are four-footed human beings, and I told myself THAT was the perfect answer for her Christmas present. Now I'll just have to look further, because I refuse to have another frustrating go-round with the R-2 D-2. I'd probably wind up by having it send me the author.

I adore the dictionary, of course, I should. I have been dog-earing and soiling the pages of one just — or almost — like it for the past 12 years. My Reader's Digest Encyclopedic Dictionary is an old friend and true. But I do not need two of them.

It is such a useful instrument, not only for spelling and determining refinements of meaning of words but for a lot of other things, because it is a lodestar for linguists. The back of it contains French-English, German-English, Spanish-English dictionaries; useful information on word origins, better usage, spelling, punctuation, pronunciation, and how to prepare a manuscript.

It also has several other specialized dictionaries — on space, medical terminologies, quotations, slang, and, most important of all, how to find out what you want to know. The last is the key to research and all good writing.

In glancing through my un-asked for dictionary, I find the two sections most changed by the years since I acquired my first one are in the space and slang references.

And, as much as the now-generation has added to and modified the slanguage, comparatively little of the R-D choice of words and definitions have changed, in these dozen years. True, a few have been added, like "pot" for marijuana and "starch" for an adulterated drug. Then there's "labonza," a Jackie Gleasonism for the pit of the stomach, and "keek," for a dress manufacturer who steals ideas from other designers. But who needs 'em? All the others from my original volume are enough to keep my satisfied indefinitely.

Of course, I could send the book back with an explanatory letter. But how do I know the missive would ever reach the digitals of a friendly, understanding computer? I would probably wind up getting back a how to book on the care and feeding of piranha, or what to do until the Coast Guard comes.

No, I've decided to keep it, quietly pay for it, and donate it to the Mirror library. Perhaps it will help the new and future reporters in knowing with a little more refinement of nuance what they're talking about.

I've been getting some lovely and heartwarming mail of late, but one I received last week, I must admit, caps them all. Not only for what it said, but because it came from the typewriter — and the heart — of my very first managing editor, Dick Smyser, now executive editor of The Oak ridger, in the Atomic City of Tennessee.

Dick, God bless him, devoted a whole editorial column to "Wishing Sally Well." In it, he tells of all my deeds and mis deeds, during my eight years under his enlightening but somewhat dictatorial tutelage — and even of an incident or two after.

One paragraph I particularly cherish: "For nearly a decade she presided at her own colossally messy but totally imaginative desk, doing not just women's and club news but several precedent-setting series of articles."

The state of my desk, I want it to be known to all neatniks, has been a topic for conversation (much of it not so gentle) of several editors along the way. But I want it to be known to my first mentor that I am true to tradition. My desk is like my mind. If something is in immediate view range, it gets taken care of. If it is tucked away neatly, it is forgotten.

And someone on the Associated Press wire service agrees with me. One of my favorite wire photos coming out of the machine to us when I was working for The News Tribune pictured a desk which could well have been mine.

It was captioned: "An empty desk is the sign of an empty mind."

Letter to the editor

To the editor:

Like many concerned citizens I have been following the news items re Salt II Treaty.

Every rational person, of course, wants peace and prosperity brought to all people and lands.

I was a student during World War I, and was impressed by President Wilson declaring we were fighting in a World War to save democracy, and it was a war to end wars. Other platitudes were popular and patriotic.

Whether the League of Nations, if this country participated in it, would accomplish these and other objectives and prevented another World War, will an enforcement?

Many concerned citizens should let their voices be heard and all facets thoroughly explored and debated.

It is too bad that it is coming up during a presidential election year, which will beget selfish political mileage to obscure the real truth and worth.

It has been suggested that a moral awakening like a return to the fundamental concepts of religion is the answer. As desirable and worthy such a project may be, it will have no effect upon the Russians and events in Iran and elsewhere demonstrate the problems.

The only answer I can think of is the phrase "Praise the Lord but keep your ammunition dry," hoping that some day the world will really mature and defeat the unworthy influences of human nature.

A Five-Star Award

In the beginning, there was Bake-A-Thon I.

Of course, we didn't put the Roman numeral I after the title because back then we never knew there would be a Bake-A-Thon II. (Just as WWI didn't get its number until WW II came along.)

There was never an official beginning or end to the first Bake-A-Thon, though its existence was pretty much restricted to the second half of 1975 and the first half of 1976. Somehow, a Bake-A-Thon was just born. And, without a ceremony to note its passing, it faded away.

But in its glory, a five-star, gold-medal, blue-ribbon award in an official Bake-A-Thon category of competition was a treasure to be honored. Betty Crocker would have been envious of award winners. Heads of state would have been jealous of the competition judges, had they been privileged enough to know of the Bake-A-Thon's existence.

As it happened, the three judges didn't need any consultation from presidents or kings or czars to aid them in making judgments and bestowing awards to culinary artists. The judges had their own sense of government, which might be loosely described as convenient democracy. It was democracy because majority ruled. And it was convenient because the judges could vote for their own entries.

A vote of two, even if one of the judges was voting for his own entry, was all that was needed to award a title in any category or division of the Bake-A-Thon. In fact, it only took two judges to creat new categories.

John Robertson and I, who lived at Seminole Shores, and Chris Nahm, who then lived down the street as House of Refuge Keeper, were the official judges. Needless to say, given the rules of our contest, we were constantly awarding each other Bake-AThon titles. For instance, John's special three-sauce recipe for hamburgers captured the Ground Beef Division in the Charcoal Grilled Category, and Chris owned the title for the Ground Beef Division in the Meatloaf Category.

In the Chicken Division, I held title in the Baked and Breaded Category for these neat little puff-balls of dough, stuffed with chicken, cream cheese, and an assortment of other secret ingredients. Meanwhile, John had the French Chicken Category sewed up for a Coq au Vin recipe he stole from his mother. And Chris won the Barbecued Chicken title after inviting friends and fellow judges over for dinner at 6 p.m. and serving it at midnight. We were ah hungry we would have given a title in the Old Shoe Category if Chris had served up Keds instead of chicken.

Robbie Bedell, another Seminole Shores resident, and former News Editor of The Mirror, held undisputed title to all categories in the Snook Division. He had the Snook Catching Category sewed up by virtue of hauling in several monsters. One snook, estimated at about 40 pounds, fed a record 28 people. But catching snook is not the only art Bedell mastered. He's hot when it comes to skinning them, and no one can touch him when it comes to the Frying Pan Category. He has that magic touch. He knows when the oil is just right, and every fillet comes out an even, golden brown on all sides. Delicious.

Of course, all three judges enjoy eating much more than cooking, so we were constantly trying to get outside entries in the Bake-A-Thon. Some say the whole idea of the Bake-A-Thon was just a cheap gimick to get fed well. We denied this, and happily that persistent rumor did not stop the parade of entries.

There were lasagnas galore, and salads and tacos and pies and vegetables. There were fish divisions with endless sub-categories. And one sweet young lady entered so many varieties of homemade breads that we unanimously voted her into the Bake-A-Thon Hall of Fame.

Another persistent charge made by envious outsiders against the Bake-A-Thon was that the integrity of the awards was questionable. Seems word got out that no entry was ever denied a five-star, gold-medal, blue-ribbon award. We admit that this is true. But how could we do otherwise? After all, it would be less than diplomatic to disappoint, or even insult, some entrant by bestowing a paltry second-place or honorable mention award. We figured if we could be creative enough to come up with a new category or division title, the entrant was deserving enough to win it.

Bake-A-Thon I died when Chris and John and I, all at about the same time, moved out of town. We eventually migrated back to the island to enjoy the last months of Seminole Shores before Mobil Oil bought up our paradise and mowed down all the old buildings there. During the final months at The Shores, we revived our good deal and called it Bake-A-Thon II. Like the first one, it lured us many a fine meal.

But those delightful days of life at The Shores are over and the small community of residents there has been scattered from Brooksville to Sebastian to Jupiter. We would be hard-pressed to get a quorum of judges together for a taste test anymore. As a result, Bake-A-Thon II has pretty much become a thing of the past.

However, as the only original judge still residing in the area, if you've got a delicious meal you'd like to have sampled, just give me a call. I'm sure I can come up with some sort of special award for you.

FINANCING IN A TIGHT MONEY MARKET

QUESTION: During periods when mortgage money dries up and is generally not available, where do the pros look in order to finance their real estate investments.

ANSWER: In times of tight money, professional investors will first check to see if the existing first mortgage is assumable. If it is, and if there is no alienation clause giving the lender the ability to call the loan, that mortgage will generally be used to help finance the purchase.

If the existing financing is not assumable, the professional investor will often approach the holder of that mortgage and attempt to renegotiate the terms. Perhaps the investor will ask for an increase in the amount of the loan, or negotiate an extension of the term. In periods of escalating interest costs he will almost always be prepared to pay a higher rate.

After checking to see whether the existing financing can be assumed or renegotiated, the investor will generally discuss purchase money financing to be provided by the seller of the property. This financing is not an actual exchange of cash but is evidenced by a promissory note from the purchaser to the seller, and is normally secured by a junior mortgage. It should be noted that the purchase money mortgage could also be a first mortgage if there is no other first mortgage financing available.

Quite frequently, sellers will assist in the financing of a property when they learn that it may be to their tax advantage to create an installment sale, and they will spread the reporting of their gain from the sale of the property over two or more years.

NRC eyes local nuke plant emergency plan

Should an emergency develop at the nuclear power plant on Hutchinson Island, Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) officials are hopeful they can avoid communications problems which developed during the Three Mile Island accident.

An Emergency Planning Task Force of the NRC is in the process of visiting every nuclear reactor site in the nation to evaluate methods of upgrading the site's emergency planning. On Monday, the task force toured the St. Lucie 1 plant. On Tuesday through Thursday, the task force is meeting with Florida Power and Light Company officials as well as state and local emergency personnel to review emergency plans.

The meetings are being conducted from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Holiday Inn in Jensen Beach, and an hour for public comment, from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 7, has been scheduled. Those not able to make comments then can submit them in writing to James R. Miller, acting assistant director for site and safeguards, Office of Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Washington, D.C.

During talks Tuesday, Jack Roe of the NRC task force commented that one goal of the NRC in the wake of Three Mile Island is to shift much of the communications network out of the reactor control room to a local Emergency Operations Center (EOC). He explained that personnel in the reactor control room should be limited to a small number and that their function should to be operate the plant and to provide all necessary technical information to a technical support center.

Roe said at Three Mile Island members of the press were getting information from "four different groups giving four different pieces of information" which were often contradictory. He said that should an emergency happen here, there should be one location where members of the press can go to get accurate information.

Whether the central information to the press, the discussions on Tuesday also includes plans for issuing warnings to the public and for evacuation.

J B kids rewarded for window painting

The children of Jensen Beach Elementary School, unlike those of years ago, were not chastised for painting on windows on Halloween — they got prizes for doing just that.

The store window painting project was originated by the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce, who thought up the idea as a means of keeping spook night vandalism to a minimum.

Mary Miller, a member of the Chamber, last week went to the school and awarded the prizes to the most imaginative young artists.

Mrs. Miller said the youngsters were judged in age groups, with neatness, originality and creativity as the criteria. Most Jensen merchants cooperated fully in the project, she said.

Winners were:

Kindergarten and first grade: first, Matt Shearer and Jeff Gehring, Best Buy Drugs; second, Matthew Pollnow and Holly Aumack, Turtle Crossing;

Second and third grades: first, Brad Jones and Ronald Demers, Jensen Meat Market; second, Kevin Wissel, Lamplighter;

Fourth and fifth grades: first, Rhonda Rhodes and Susie O'Keefe, Joyce's Apparel; second, Michelle Aumack, Wicked Wahini.

Christmas tree lighting at Monterey Plaza Nov. 23

The traditional "Lighting of the Christmas Tree" will be celebrated Friday, November 23, promptly at 7 p.m. under the arches of Stuart's Monterey Plaza.

The ceremony will be held around the twinkling Norfolk Pine tree in the main concourse.

The public is invited to participate in the gala festivities and enjoy the free program which features outstanding area talent. The Joy Gould Dance Troupe will perform "Dance of the Dolls." Costumed as colorful international dolls, the troupe incorporates ballet and dance in their musical revue. The main concourse will ring as the Sailfish Chapter of the Sweet Adelines heralds the spirit of the season in carols.

The celebration is complete with Santa in his house. Santa's house was especially constructed for his visit to the Plaza, by children from the Murray Middle School art class, under the direction of Tom Prestopnik, Art Instructor. From the rocking chair in his living room, Santa will greet everyone, hear the young children's requests for Christmas and distribute free candy. For interested parents, the Merchants' Association has arranged for a photographer to take pictures, at a nominal fee, of children visiting Santa. Letters to Santa may be deposited in his mailbox located near his house at the Monterey Plaza that night or any time before Christmas eve.

Shoplifting seminar is offered

Florida merchants will lose over $300 million to shoplifting this year at a cost of $220 to every Florida shopper over 16 years old.

Florida Retail Federation calls it the state's number one dollar loss crime and has proclaimed November "anti-shoplifting month." In 1978 the loss to shoplifting amounted to $292,490,474, nearly twice the loss from robbery, breaking and entering and auto theft combined.

To combat the problem locally, the Stuart-Martin County Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a business seminar on shoplifting. Lt. Mervin Waldron of the Stuart Police Department will be the guest speaker.

The seminar is Thursday, Nov. 8 at 7:45 a.m. at the Holiday Inn downtown.

Waldron will discuss structural design within a store, such as the counter displays and locations and the managerial policy with regard to labeling and searching packages. A representative from the State Attorney's Office will discuss procedures for apprehension and prosecution.

"The ultimate objective of the merchant is to make a profit and to do that, he must sell lower than the competition to attract customers," the lieutenant said. "However, the merchant must increase his prices as shoplifting affects business."

Waldron has urged business owners to bring managers and employees to the seminar because they are the ones who spot the shoplifters and need to know the proper procedures. "Employees are a big help in prevention," he said.

The detective lieutenant said Christmas is the biggest season for shoplifting, particularly for the professional shoplifter.

Waldron has conducted surveillance teams on several local stores. The Stuart Police Dept. offers seminars with individual businesses as well.

The shoplifting seminar is the second of 10 business seminars sponsored by the Chamber.

Hometown boy makes good

"Hometown boy makes good," is an old expression meaning that a local person left the comforts and familiarity of home to achieve something particularly noteworthy.

While the expression has grown trite with overuse, it happens to be especially appropriate in describing IRCC graduate Bill Meissner.

Meissner is a Stuart native who learned his audio-visual wizardry while attending Indian River Community College in Ft. Pierce. He was a work study student in audio-visual techniques from 1976-79.

Following some formal education combined with a good deal of individual experimentation with the college's A-V equipment, Meissner began coordinating slide presentations at IRCC, which won 2nd place at the state competition in Tampa.

"We were trying to make the students and area residents aware of the club's activities through the use of the college's A-V equipment," commented Meissner.

In that respect they succeeded, for the following year, Meissner's "Stairway to Success" theme took 1st place in the Phi Beta Lambda state competition at Orlando. By using four slide projectors simultaneously, he was able to creat a "stairway" effect that highlighted the show, and marked his first attempt at multi-projector coordination.

Shortley after that Meissner was asked to produce slide shows for local businesses and organizations. Outstanding among these were the Ft. Pierce-Port St. Lucie Chamber of Commerce presentation, and a 45 minute "tour of Disney World", which he designed for the Cedar Point Condominums.

It was in June 1978, however, that Meissner got his first "Big break." Utilizing four slide projectors and three screens, Meissner coordinated the presentation of "the Better Weekly Newspaper Contest" for the Florida Press Association. The show, which used the theme from "Rocky", was considered such a success that FPA executives invited the 20 year-old back to do the following year's show, that being the commemoration of the Florida Press Association's 100th anniversary.

Charles Brumback, president of the Orlando Sentinel Star newspaper, viewed the 100th anniversary presentation and asked Meissner if he would be interested in working on the joint convention of the Florida Press Association and the National Newspaper Association.

Meissner agreed, and took on the job of overseeing the production of multi-media presentation for the convention. This latest effort was staged October 17-20 in Orlando.

"It is interesting that their A-V department is only two years old," remarked Meissner, "in that short time they have acquired a nationwide reputation for turning out high quality production."

Meissner traced the history of Florida and Florida newspapers in his presentation, beginning with an introduction by Hugh B. McCallum, FPA's founder. A man was brought in to portray McCallum, and to address the screens behind him.

In order to coordinate a project such as this, Meissner used 15 slide projectors on a 28 foot screen. Besides researching the script and producing most of the photography, he also traveled around the state interviewing the FPA executives who were to speak from the screen.

"I had to time the projectors so that there was never any blank screen," explained Meissner, "it almost looks like animation."

Meissner mentioned that most people think of "home slide shows" when they first hear of his work. This, however, is not the case.

"To see a wide screen show with multiple projectors, is like going to your first cinema movie after watching television all your life," he commented.

Among the technical complications he faced in producing the show, were the overlapping sound disturbances picked up by the highly sensitive recording equipment.

"If the person you're interviewing is tapping on the desk," said Meissner, "it will sound like a bass drum on tape." He explained that this is alleviated by using noise limiters and filters.

In addition to the technical difficulties, Meissner noted that there is a constant consideration to "reach your audience."

"If you aim to hit at the personal interests of people, you make them feel good," Meissner said, "people tend to enjoy it and still take in the message."

The message that audiences have taken in from all of Bill Meissner's shows is that he is a 21 year old who knows his business. This young professional left home with a truckload of talent to peddle, and returned with a following that is rarely acquired at any age.

Ocean Breeze

BY ERNIE CURWEN
334-4158

Time to improve patience

Now is the time for Ocean Breezers to improve their patience as it looks as though they are going to need it next winter for here is what happened recently.

An OBPer had to go to SuperMart one rainy day last week for a forgotten item. It seemed as though it took 5 minutes to get into the ladian River Dr. traffic pattern (probably only a min. or so) for as soon as one side was clear of traffic, a line would start on the other. But, finally they did get to the parking lot in a deluge and wanted to park as close to door as possible. They noted an empty space and headed for it only to find hidden away there was a mini-car, then seeing another space in next row they head for it, only to be beaten out at last minute by another car, swinging in from highway. So, we better get our patience in good working order, as it will be worse before it gets better.

However, regardless of these minor irritations and a little too much wetness, the dreadful northern weather drove another big batch of winter residents to the park. Sixty-six to be exact, making the season total 296, and they were:

Devereux and Margret Cunning ham, Fred and Louise Kalb, Robert and Violet Hagaman, Rose Shriner, Willis and Clara Finger, Charles and Ann Krow, Hartley and Betty Wallwark, Ruth O'Rourke, Clyde and Esther LeMessurier, Frank and Rose Miller, Ken and Edith Raymond:

Anne Buck, Donald and Doris Clark, George Miller, Roy and Gladys Donaldson, Tom and Dorothy Elliott, Randy and Mary Kitchen, John and Pauline Vanderberg, William and Norma Irish, Eugene and Eleanor Lewis, Morgan and Mary West, Edward and Rhoda Pettit, Malcom and Irene Widley; Milton and Mary Fullerton, Jack and Wayne Forsyth, Ruth Miller, Joe and Jane Stahler, Nora Stage, Dorothy Pitman, Mildred Beck, Bill and Grace Weaver, Ken Herron, Irene Finch, Haze, Carlson, Evelyn Wallquist, Myron Schumann, Louis and Crystal Tucker.

Less we forget, as some did last month, FREE Blood Pressure Checks and Nutrition Counselling, Friday, Nov. 16, at Langford Field. (See AARP item, this week on why it is so necessary to watch our Blood Pressure.)

RAMBLING AROUND

Al and Millie Klvana, 16 SW 10th St. have been OBPers since 1966, but go back to Holbrook, L.I. for 5 months each year to be near their large family. Their son Aldrich, Jr. who is following his dad's footsteps, being Battalion Chief of NYC Fire Dept., drove them down this year. He is to retire in a few years and Al senior could not help but mention how things have changed since he retired. Al had an 84 hour week and cooked the meals for the station on a budget of 25¢ a meal and Al said firemen eat plenty.

Merle and Lillian Bender, 8 NE 10th St. They used to stay way out on LilBit Lane point and must have had a premonition that David was scomin', as they moved inland last year. They spend 6 months in Harrisburg, Pa. with family; son a doctor of internal medicine; a nurse daughter and the other daughter an AMP. also there are some grandchildren, so they do enjoy their northern stay, but when there is snow in the air, like on Oct. 14, they know it's time to head south and that is what they did.

Roy and Nina Zigelhofer, 4 Pine Ln. had visitors the last week: Roy's brother, wife, and daughter Cathy from Massilon, Ohio. They had two weeks of fishing and sightseeing, even though Cathy had a broken wrist. Cathy is studing for her B.A. in Nursing at Rutgers in N.J.

George and Kathlene Wyatt of Bermuda had a good summer in the park with a week cruise to the Islands in May, then remarked that they were glad the Northampton picnics were back in full swing.

Seven or eight years ago all the folks from Northhampton, Mass. in this area decided they should get together regularly, so around 21 to 23 of them have a picnic on the Stuart Causeway, about other Friday, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. They start off with a happy hour' and snacks, before they bring out the brown bags of goodies. The OBPers are Wyatts, Ridgwells, Newmans, Laura Burlingame and Betty Warren (with Bea Tourville and Bernie Tarbell sometimes) and ex-OBPer Arlene Ballencourt. Others come from Spanish Lakes, Tropical Acres and Fort Pierce, to chat and discuss recent letters and telephone calls from back home.

Hugh and Kit Garside, 8 Key Lime are back after spending 6 months in Battle Creek, Mich. where they had a "fun summer" shuffling and square dancing. They have 2 sons and 8 grandchildren to enjoy, along with raising 250 roses over 7 feet tall and attending picnic of their old Rose Assoc. friends.

However, as Hugh is an ol' time railroader, so they took a rail trip to Moosenee, way up there in Hudson Bay, where the population is 95 percent Indian and 90 percent speak only the Cree language. Hugh is a V.P. of the Camera Club, so he did take some pictures to show next January.

Babe and Katherine Newman, 3 Key Lime spend 6 months in Northampton as a rule, but this year they took a 2 week jaunt over to Portugal and Spain in April, with a son and daughter-in-law. Babe and Katherine were most impressed with their stay in Albuferia in the Algrave district on the southern coast of Portugal. They lived in an apartment, so had to shop in native markets and found that they were expected to bring their own bags. They had a ball and will gladly tell how they did I.

We're not grouchy, sick, or ugly

The MCCA (Martin County Council on Aging) meeting, Thur. Nov. 1, took up a number of items of interest to local seniors. Leta Elliazna, pres. called the group of 25 to order at 1:30 sharp. Then Russ Conser, Exec. Dir. on sick leave reported that although he was doing fine, he could not in the foreseeable future return to full duties and will have to resign, effective Jan. 1980. The group showed appreciation for his work with plenty of applause.

Leta then explained that the Board had authorized a lot of expanded activities and by the nature of their funding, the more they do the more front money is needed, so the Council is going to have a fund drive to raise $40,000.00 by sending out 15,000 letters. All were asked to help in this effort to make it even more successful than last year. Also, Leta asked for donations of can goods and package food items to help fill this year's Thanksgiving baskets. They hope to better last year's 36.

Treasure Coast Senior Services is living up to its new name by having parties and informative programs on Nutrition and Energy.

There was a gala Halloween Party Wed. Oct. 31, with hall trimmed by Site Mgr. Dorris Walker and willing helpers. Many were in weird and funny costumes, so the awarding of prizes was difficult. Also, there was dancing to the music of: Connie Bretsch, piano; Allen Bretsch, drums. Dale Kimiller, guitar; Pat Taylor, harmonica; and Elliott Arluck (Pres. Dir.), sax. The seniors had such a good time they want to do it every month.

The talk on Nutrition pointed out that there were four main food groups. Meat group: beef, chicken, eggs, fish, navy beans and peanut butter (2 or more servings daily). Milk group: milks, cheese, ice cream, and cottage cheese. Cereals and breads: corn bread, oatmeal cookies, etc. Finally, the Fruits and Vegetables. The value of each group was explained, but basically, all four groups must be eaten to remain healthy and happy.

The Energy booklet was jam packed with usefull information and eye openers. It pointed out, that USA with 6 percent of the population, uses 33 percent of the world's energy, in this manner: 31 percent industry; 11 percent commercial; 26 percent residential; 27 percent transportation (cars). Also, it warned us that all domestic oil would be gone by 2010 and the natural gas sooner. Too much info to be listed here, but the booklets will be supplied on request. Finally, it stressed, holding to 55 mph will save you 20 percent on your gasoline (making the cost equal to 79.9¢).

Of course, the seniors were talking last week and it went like this. One senior said, "Remember, Art Linkletter's kids called us grumpy, now last Monday night on NBC News, it was reported that young folks thought of oldsters as grouchy, sick and ugly."

Before he could finish a 75 year old 'gal' piped up, "That's not that case at all, they should have seen us in bright fancy clothes, laughing and kicking up our heels at the Halloween party, we sure were not sick, ugly and grouchy, they don't know what they are talking about."

"Well, that is just the point," the first senior replied, "we know that most of us seniors, at least when we get together, are a happy lively bunch, but evidently that is not the way we appear to the young folks, and I guess we better do something to improve our image."

Then a third senior had this to add, "You know, that is no doubt about the way we appear to them, for one thing we are forever talking about our aches and pains and darned if we are not always complaining about inflation, health costs, traffic, misdeed of youngsters and as one ages one has to take added pains to improve a fading appearance. Maybe, if we made an effort to improve our image, young folks will like us better and be more sympathetic to our problems."

"Along that idea," pipes up another senior, "here is something to consider, let's think positive more often. Not always griping. Take the doctors, I know the charges bother us no end, but let's talk about so and so, who last year was next door to death and now is lovely, happy and back in the main stream of senior activities. We all know of these cases, where doctors have used latest techniques, fantastic equipment and miracle drugs to perform wonders. Things like that we should talk about, to help change our grumpy outlook. It is worth a thought, hum?"

CHAPTER ACTIVITIES

The 'Health Movie' at the AARP, picnic, Thur. Nov. 1, was a humdinger and Dr. Dunnison answered dozens of questions. The 22 ARPers learned that High Blood Pressure (Hypertension) affects 24 million Americans, most of them over 55. It is a dangerous, silent killer, leading to stroke, heart disease and kidney failure. Overweight and high-sodium (salt) diet are to be avoided. Here's a switch, it affects women more than men and blacks more than whites.

High blood pressure is dangerous, if uncontrolled (and it can be very easily controlled) as it can cause strokes and heart attacks, especially if combined with high blood cholesterol, cigarette smoking, overweight and diabetes. So, you should keep an eye on your pressure by having it checked as required (clinic at Langford, third Fri. each month).

What is considered high blood pressure is often asked. In folks 60 to 70 a systolic pressure of 150-155 may not be a cuase for concern, but should be watched, but when the diastolic pressure remains higher than 90-95, the diagnosis is high blood pressure. It was further pointed out that there are no obvious symptoms of high blood pressure, that is why it is called the silent killer, the only way to know is to have it checked.

The heart attack which concerned most our aged group, as there are more than 640,000 deaths from this cause every year, was the subject of many of the questions. The answers will not be given, as incomplete statements might lead to "misunderstandings, but everybody should know the danger signals.

Uncomfortable pressure, fullness, squeezing or pain in the center of the chest lasting two minutes or more.

The pain may spread to shoulders, neck or arms. And severe pain, dizziness, sweating, nausea or shortness of breath may also occur.

Sharp stabbing twinges of pain are not general signals of heart attack.

Next month Dec. 6, there will be a movie on Diabetes at 9:30 a.m. Langford Field, and all seniors are invited to attend.

The Chapter bulletin was prepared for mailing, at 10:30 after the movie and question period. The larger than usual (10) crowd got the 600 or so copies folded, stuffed, sealed and addressed in fast order and were ready for their brown bag lunches by 12:15. There was a lot of chit-chat (Seniors talking, you know) and it was announced that the Board meeting would again be at the Salem Inn, although other arrangements will have to be made in the near future.

Betty Taylor, Asst Editor 'got-out' the bulletin by herself this month as editor Boyd Smith was on a vacation in New Jersey. Betty is to be congratulated and a fine, smooth job. The bulletin, included a plea by Pres. "CMac" MacIntyre to have the 700 members get involved. He pointed out that to get a slate of 13 officers and directors the nominating committee had to spend hours of arm twisting and finally had to rely mostly on the over worked standbys. It has been pointed out that the chapter isn't run by the same old 'click' by choice, just nobody else will give the few hours necessary. "CMac" says one of these days the members will wake up to find they have no chapter, as no one will make the effort to run it. Let "CMac" know you are willing to work.

Lovely party for Rubecks

A lovely party for Fred & Diane Rubeck (Newlyweds) was held on Sat., Nov. 3, for their 2nd month anniversary. The party was hosted by Dr. & Mrs. George Hardie & Mr. & Mrs. Eugene Naimo. It was attended by 80 guests from Venture Three and Holiday Out. Guests of honor were the bride's parents Mr. & Mrs. Harry Snyder and the groom's aunt Edith Johns. A money tree and other gifts were presented by Venture 3, and a painted card by Mrs. Eileen Hunter and an envelope gift from H.Out. Entertainment started with Mrs. I. Hamm playing the Rubeck's favorite love song, "You Light Up My Life" and several other selections on the organ. Then Mr. Geo. Bares, organist, Mr. Jack Torregrosso, trumpeteer, teased the dancing feet of many. The old time singing was excellent. Refreshments were served closing an enjoyable evening.

Our Pavilion Church opened Sunday with Rev. Clark Thompson officiating. The attendance was 48. Martha Lewis was lay leader, Dot Brink, organist. New ushers this year are Les Ullmann, Jim Lewis, and Bob Holden.

The first meeting of the Son So Club was held on Thursday, Nov. 1 at the Rec. Hall with new leader, Marie Gramstorff. Mary Sumner & Marie supplied the refreshments. Mary made a big hit with her homemade coffee cake. It was delicious. (Diet? What Diet?) Marion Holden acted as secretary and made a list of people who attended -- there were 16, a good showing for the time of year. Marion also accepted the job of handling the refreshment committees for future meetings. It was decided to donate a crocheted afghan to Holiday Out for their February Craft Show. This afghan made of granny squares would be crocheted by various members. It will be a real challenge, but Lil McConnell graciously accepted it, whereupon Catty Ullmann and Millie Pisz promptly offered their assistance. Lena Black, Social Director, reminded the members of the Christmas Craft Table. Each person was requested to donate at least one article.

On Friday Nov. 2 the first games of bingo, for the 1979-80 season, were held. Approximately 50 persons were there, in spite of the inclement weather. All enjoyed the calling of numbers by Bob Black. Coverall was won by Eunice Covitz. Bingo games are held every Friday eve at 8:00 p.m. Frank Pisz will be your cordial host this year.

Eight of our "Boys" volunteered to paint the outside of the office. The laughter that came forth sounded more like fun than work.

The new sound system is a big improvement at the Rec Hall. Exercise with Sophia Holler started Monday Oct. 29 -- 9:00 to 10:00 a.m.

Bob & Gert Long hosted a lovely weekend for their son Ronny, wife Susan, and children Danny, Tim & David. They had a tree cutting job to do on Sat. Refreshments were in order after completing the palm tree work on Sun. Bob did some of his famous bar-be-cueing of chicken. It could be smelled for blocks. Bob and Gert Long and Bob and Rita Royal are starting a week's vacation here in the Park.

George & Florence Poor arrived in H.Out on Wed. Eve. from California. George's sister Ruth Arbo invited them for dinner on Thursday Eve.

Frank & Millie Pisz had a delightful six days in Naples, Fla. They enjoyed seeing the growth of Naples & a two hour long parade, celebrating Swamp Buggy races. The races are unique as they are the only ones in the world. Special cars are built with very large wheels. A great amount of time and money is spent in building them. A moat is in which the race is run is built around a small island. Two deep holes serve as hazards. Three cars race and sometime get only as far as the first hole. Al & Peg Ray joined the Pisz a few days later.

Jean and Ralph Taylor went south for a few days to the Keys. It is an annual trip which they enjoy every year.

Samaritans Calling

BY NELLIE COOK

A total of 89 runs were made during the week of Oct. 27-Nov 3 by the Jensen Area Samaritans, volunteer ambulance group.

Looking back to ten years ago, I see there was a record of 76 runs made for that period in the year 1969. This says that the Samaritans have been busy, and our service is used. In fact, what would happen if the Samaritans went on strike for one week?

A new helper for cleaning days (every Saturday), has joined with our other willing workers. The lady is Mrs. Dorothy Nevins. So happy to have you, Dorothy.

A young man, Carl Hutchcraft of White City, is currently working on Sundays, and will shortly be a Certified Driver. Carl intends to go on for his Emergency Medical technician. Welcome to you, Carl.

Another new member is M. Cassel of Pine Lake Village. Good to have you aboard.

Two other new members are Dale Boger, Jensen and Scott Lang, also of Jensen. Congratulations, Dale and Scott. We welcome and need you all.

Three EMTs are at present getting their certification at North County Technical College on Seabrook Drive in Tequesta. They all speak very highly of their new instructor, Miss Marilynn Storch. District 10 volleyball situation leaves everyone confused

Note: This article was written before the district championships were played. As it developed, Martin County, in the eyes of most observers, was outplayed by Merritt Island, the team that played FP Central in the final.

BY DONNIE WILKIE

Last week, the 1979 District 10-AAAA volleyball tournament was played at Vero Beach High School. While the four teams from the Brevard-Indian River County, area knew for weeks who they would be playing, it seems that the two Southern teams, Martin County and Fort Pierce Central, the favorites in the tournament, were not informed of who their first round opponents would be until days before the event.

No one seems to know why.

In fact, the only clear-as-day fact in the entire situation is that the District 10 tournament was played last week in Vero Beach!

Martin County even claims that it was never officially notified until last Tuesday, one day before they were to take the court against Satellite. Or was it Fort Pierce Central?

The problem was created on Wednesday, October 3, when a meeting was scheduled among the District 10 schools, for the purpose of determining the pairings for the 1979 championship tournament. According to Dan Thweet, the man in charge of the pairings for the event, "only one school had a representative at the meeting. Four schools sent letters declaring their intent to play in the districts."

Martin County's, sent by Athletic Director Clayton McKinney, stated that "we will be unable to attend the district meeting on October 3 in Vero Beach. Please accept this letter as a declaration of our intent to play in the tournament."

Out of that meeting" came the news that displeased both FP Central Head Coach Julia Nixon and MCHS mentor Sherrie Robins.

Martin County (who finished the season at 11-5) would have to meet FP Central (the conference champions at (13-1) in the first round!

"It's almost as if they're trying to get rid of one of us right away," said an enraged Robins. "I don't think it's fair at all, and I'm sure that she (Nixon) agrees with me."

None of the four teams in the district with the Tigers and Cobras had records that even approached theirs. Merritt Island rates as the strongest team in the Cape Coast Conference, at 6-4.

Nixon sent a message through The Mirror last week, two days before the tournament, to Robins, informing her that the two powerhouse squads would not be playing in the first round -- that the pairings had been changed at a second meeting.

According to Thweet, "there was no second meeting."

Nixon, though, was partially correct. By Tuesday, one day prior to the first district game, it was learned that Martin County would be paired against Satellite, and that Central, seeded second in the tourney, would meet the winner in the semi-finals. It wasn't particularly good news, but at least it was better than their original impression.

"I was under the impression that the seedings would be determined by the teams' record against AAAA competition," said Thweet last Wednesday. "They used to do that in football. But I found out differently."

Football Festival set for Langford

The first annual Jensen Beach Youth Football Festival will be held at Langford Park on Sunday, November 18, it was announced last week.

In addition to three football games, the first of which will begin at 1pm, Festival Chairman Bill Pecci has lined up various entertainment, refreshments, and prizes for the anticipated crowd of over 1,500.

Pecci is hoping that the "family image" of Langford Park will attract a large turnout.

"Langford Park has picnic areas, play areas for the youngsters, tennis courts and ball fields, as well as unlimited parking. I'm hoping that entire families will come out for the whole day."

The Jensen Beach Sharks, the local Lower Division "B" team (100-pound limit) will take the field at 1pm, facing the Southwest Saints of Fort Lauderdale. All three Jensen Beach opponents are from that area, and they are all nicknamed the Saints. The Sharks are coached by Mike White.

That contest will be followed by a matchup of Lower Division "A" teams (120-pound limit), as the Jensen Beach Barracudas, 2-5 on the season, square off against the Saints' Lower Division entry. Frank Fitzpatick's squad, missing its starting quarterback, William Massey, was shut out in its final Martin County Junior Football League game last Saturday night, 24-0, by the Indiantown Thunderbirds.

The final game pits the Saints of FL Southwest against the Jensen Beach Razorbacks, winless in seven MCJFL outings, but nevertheless, with their potent passing attack, a respectable football team. Herb Seal's Jensenites concluded their season against the regular season league co-champions, the Indiantown Firebirds, last weekend, losing 33-0.

In between the football games, country singer Cliff Buckach will sing his novelty single "Confusion Corner," based on the infamous Stuart intersection; Parties Unlimited, provided by Taylor Rentals, will feature rock and disco music. There will be a Chinese Auction, and prizes will be given away, including a $450 King Size Sleep package, furnished by the Sleep Scene.

Pecci noted that Langford Park has been unavailable to the junior football teams for much of the 1979 season in explaining the reason for setting up the Festival.

"We've only had the one home game (two weeks ago, against Port Salerno), and this will be a supplemental project. But we are calling it the first annual and we hope to make it an annual affair."

DEFENSIVE DISCUSSION--Jensen Beach Upper Division Head Coach Herb Seal and Captain Richard Cady discuss defensive strategy in a recent Martin County Junior Football League game. Saints blast Stuart

A five touchdown performance by Curtis Wilson, including a 68-yard kickoff return, highlighted Port St. Lucie's 48-12 trouncing of Stuart at Sportsman's Park Saturday night, in both teams' regular season finale.

Wilson netted 168 yards rushing for the winners, while Jerry Roberts, usually the Saints' leading gainer, added 98.

"Stuart played some good ball, but we just executed everything perfectly," said Jim Evans, the Saint Head Coach. "What can you say about a 48-13 win? Everyone played well."

Each back compliments the other," said Evans of the Roberts-Wilson connection. "Neither one is a hot dog. They're just both good team players."

Evans must now prepare his squad for the title tilt against the Port Salerno Panthers, who the Saints trounced 26-0 in their only meeting of 1979.

"The Port Salerno Panthers left a lasting impression on the Port St. Lucie Saints," he answered. "We beat them bad, but that man (Johnny Dotson) has done one super coaching job. They only have about 14 kids out there playing, but he's taught them to hit hard. They are not a dirty football team, though. They just play a solid game of football."

Evans thinks the key in the game will be defensing the Panthers' Cleveland Brooks, who has enjoyed a banner year for the Port Salerno squad as a running back.

"He's their franchise," Evans commented. "But we're ready for him."

"The Port St. Lucie Saints are ready for their first-ever Martin County Junior Football League championship," he glowed.

Port Salerno closed out its 5-2 campaign with a 27-0 shutout of Palm City.

Firebirds end Razorbacks' winless year

BY DONNIE WILKIE

Cleveland Gary's three touchdowns and 133 yards rushing propelled the Indiantown Firebirds' Upper Division football team to a 33-0 pounding of the Jensen Beach Razorbacks Saturday night in Indiantown.

The lopsided loss gave the Razorbacks a final regular season record of 0-7, while the powerful Firebirds were 6-1. Only a 26-7 loss to Port St. Lucie two weeks ago marked Indiantown's outstanding season, but since the Firebirds were outscored in their two meetings with the Saints, they will be in the bleachers, not on the field, when the championship games are played this weekend.

Bob Souza, the feisty Firebird coach, is openly mad about the way his team was excluded from the post-season event, and even hinted that he may have run up the score against Jensen Beach to prove his point.

"Until they change that stupid rule about points, I'm going to pile them up (points)," he said after his team plastered the Razorbacks. "We never have before, but we will now. Usually, when we get two touchdowns ahead, we clear the bench, but not from now on."

Jensen Beach Head Coach Herb Seal, who was severely disappointed after his team, a pre-season favorite in its division, failed to win a game, was quite angry over the situation.

"When the score got to be 26-0, we let all the kids that hadn't played much during the year get in there," he explained. "But all they had out there were the first-string players."

Souza, though, claimed that only his backfield played the entire night, with 13-year-olds Gary and quarterback Bobo McIntyre each indicating that they would not be back next year.

"I had the second strong defense playing, and the first-string defense was playing on the offensive line. We had 135 yards in penalties and three touchdowns called back because of our offensive linemen."

Indeed, Indiantown gained as much, if not more, yardage on plays that were nullified by penalties than Jensen Beach did during the entire game.

"All he can see in the guys running with the ball, but we had a whole different offensive line blocking for them," defended Souza.

Before the night was over, Gary had scored on runs of 24 and 36 yards, and caught a 21-yard scoring pass from McIntyre. Teammates Clarence Gadson (a 15-yard pass from McIntyre(and Sylvester Shanks (a 25-yard run) added the other scores.

"They were a heck of a lot bigger than we were," said Souza, who was puzzled over Jensen Beach's record. Port St. Lucie coach, Jim Evans, and Port Salerno's, Johnny Dotson, have each expressed the same feelings throughout the season. They are the two that will face each other in this weekend's championship game.

Seal is equally bewildered.

"I don't know what the problem is. This team's a much better team than their record indicates. It's the same thing I've been saying all year long. We'll just have to try to win the bowl game (the Razorbacks' game in the Youth Football Festival at Langford Park November 18)."

..No one has challenged Merritt Island's number one spot - yet.

MI tries to spoil Tigers' second straight winning season

BY DONNIE WILKIE

It will be the trip that Martin County fans were looking forward to when the prep football season began, but whether they still are as anxious about the 5-2 MCHS squad facing the undefeated and number one-ranked Merritt Island Mustangs is in some doubt.

Fred Chase's Tigers have made a remarkable comeback since opening the season with two losses in their first three games, and later taking it on the chin from arch-rival Fort Pierce Central.

"When you consider our high expectations when the season started," said Chase, "it is quite remarkable that the kids have done as well as they have. Teams like Satellite and Eau Gallie had high hopes when the season started, but they lost a few and are 3-4 and 1-6. We've come back."

It's not difficult to pinpoint the Tigers' strength through the last three games, all victories. Against Forest Hill, Eau Gallie and Palm Beach Gardens (albeit, not the state's strongest AAAA powers), the Martin County defense has allowed only one touchdown.

The other two scores have come on a kickoff return by Eau Gallie, and an interception return by Palm Beach Gardens' Nate Williams in Martin County's 14-7 win last Friday night.

The Tigers assumed control of the game, after benefitting from PBG quarterback Kyle Vanderwende's first-half knee injury, in the third period, when, after taking advantage of a six-yard punt by Vanderwende's kicking replacement, David Person, they marched into the end zone from the Gardens 48-yard line.

L.C. Mitchell, who scored both of Martin County's touchdowns, capped the eleven-play march with 6:39 remaining in the canto with a three-yard dive. Cliff Beakes' extra point kick made it 7-0.

Later in the third quarter, Mitchell broke through the initial wave of Gardens' defenders, then outran the rest en route to a 32-yard score. Beakes' conversion put Gardens, often fielding their fourth-string quarterback due to the tidal wave of injuries, in a hole at 14-0.

The Gators (3-7 overall and 2-3 in the meaningless Suncoast East) never did establish an offense, thanks partly to the growingly-effective Tiger defense and also to their own ineptness. Mike Williams, the home team's leading rusher, could only account for 31 yards, and the Gators could only muster 135.

Then again, Martin County, except for a third-quarter outburst which saw them post their 14 points and over 130 yards in total offense, was offensively unimpressive, as well.

"I was not entirely pleased with our performance," Chase warned. "I think we all realize that we'll have to play a better game against Merritt Island, unless we want to get blown away."

Indeed, the Mustangs have forced many coaches and players alike to head for cover long before the kickoff throughout the years, and the mere thought of facing the Mustangs, riding high on the crest of a 23-game winning streak, the longest in the state in any classification, sends chills up the spines of most of the MCHS faithful.

"If we can control the ball offensively--and not make costly turnovers--and then if we can stop them defensively, and keep them from sustaining a drive, we've got a chance," said a hopeful Chase, who with a win could post his second successive winning season at Martin County with a game to spare.

But doing all of the above will be difficult, to say the least.

The Mustangs (8-0) have two outstanding quarterbacks in Steve Childers and Jeff Wickersham, but have only needed one outstanding running back, as Walter Battle, picking up steam throughout the year after recovering from a hip pointer.

Battle's 134 yards two weeks ago against previously unbeaten Fort Pierce Central practically fattened the Cobras single-handedly, as fullback Keith Edwards has excelled in his role as a blocker for one Battle-yard after another.

It will be Merritt Island's first meeting with the Tigers since the shuffling of district schools, which sent the locsters and Fort Pierce Central into District 10-AAAA, as well as the jaws of the Mustangs.

The Tigers conclude their season with a November 16, Homecoming date in Stuart with Twin Lakes.

Cheerleading, title games this Saturday night at Palm City

BY DONNIE WILKIE

The Martin County Junior Football League will hold its championship games this Saturday night at Palm City Field, it was announced late Monday night.

In addition to the regular Lower and Upper Division championship tilts, there will be a cheerleading championship among the area's junior football league towns, the fifth such competition held.

Jensen Beach has always fared well in the cheerleading competition, but for this year, anyway, the football playing will be done by the "other guys."

In the Lower title game at 6:30pm, Port Salerno (4-3) faces overwhelmingly favored Stuart (7-0), while the Upper Division contest will follow, with Port St. Lucie (6-1) risking its mighty reputation against scrappy Port Salerno, led by Head Coach Johnny Dotson and all-purpose back Cleveland Brooks.

"We'll win by 20 points," bragged Dotson Monday night, though his team, on the basis of a 28-0 loss to the Saints earlier in the season, have to be rated as the underdogs.

The exact time of the cheerleading competition was not available at press time. But in years past, the showdown has been held either at halftime of the respective games, between games, or before either game. It was possible at press time that the cheerleading competition would, in fact, be held before either game, at 5 pm.

There will be an admission charge, with proceeds helping to defray the cost of preparing the field and staging the game. There will also be a concession stand, with plenty of food and drinks.

The league's representatives agreed Monday night to play at Palm City due to its neutral status in the championship situation.

RINALDI RETURN—Sewall's Point junior tennis star Kathy Rinaldi returns a shot from Miami's Pilar Vasquez in last Saturday's exhibition match between the two at the Wightman Cup Championship in West Palm Beach. Rinaldi lost in an eight game set, 5-3, but the United States Cup team swept Great Britain, 7-0, to regain the trophy they lost last year. (Photo by Donnie Wilkie)

Rinaldi beaten in Wightman exhibition

Perhaps unnerved by the large crowd on hand for the 51st Wightman Cup competition between the United States and Great Britain, Sewall's Point tennis prodigy Kathy Rinaldi dropped an eight-game, exhibition singles set Saturday to Miami's Pilar Vasquez.

The 12-year-old Rinaldi made numerous unforced errors; quite unlike her performance in August at the same Wellington facilities in West Palm Beach, where she won the National 12-under championship to become the first junior to win all four major titles in a single season.

Meanwhile, Vasquez, 16, started slowly, then used her advantage in age and strength to outmuscle the younger, baseline-oriented Rinaldi.

It was Rinaldi's first test against nationally-ranked competition in the older age brackets, though she played and won several tournaments, some as high as the 18-year-old level, during the summer.

Rinaldi served notice of her nervous state on the first point of the match, when she sailed a backhand, her first of the night, at least ten feet over the baseline. In that first game, a shaky start, as Rinaldi fought back, quickly breaking her serve to even the set. All seemed to be going well for the Jensenite when she calmly whipped a crosscourt forehand past the lunging Vasquez, then won the third game when the teenager netted a backhand.

Vasquez, though, escaped from 15-30 in the fourth game, and began a string which saw her take four games in a row, for a 5-2 lead.

In just the three games won by Vasquez to break the players' 2-2 tie, Rinaldi stroked four forehands deep (one backhand, as well), netted two forehands and also netted a backhand, committing eight unforced errors.

Rinaldi came back to take the eighth game, but the time limit, established due to rains that had already delayed her over five hours and set the entire Wightman schedule back, expired, leaving her on the short end of the 5-3 tally.

The "Grand Slam Girl" spent the weekend at Wellington, watching as the United States plastered Great Britain 7-0 in the Cup competition. Only a year ago, in London, the British had stunned the Americans, winning the final doubles match for a 4-3 victory.

But led by a pair of singles victories from both Chris Evert-Lloyd and Tracy Austin, doubles triumphs by Ann Kiyomura-Austin and Evert-Rosie Casals, as well as a thrilling, three set win by Kathy Jordon over England's Ann Hobbs, the home team left no doubt in the minds of the almost 9,000 fans during the weekend as to their supremacy.

Rinaldi will be forced to play in the 14-under division this year, as she will soon turn 13. Her schedule is not yet definite, but it does appear certain that she will play in the Orange Bowl tournament in Miami this winter.

BREATHTAKING SILHOUETTE—If anything can lure the northerner to our shores, it is the sheer breathtaking beauty of palms against the sky, an ever-changing, ever-lovely backdrop to the drama of the trees. The whipped-cream froth of this particular incipient thunderhead seems to have posed itself for the camera specifically to outline the delicacy of the lacy fronds.

Deadline nears for applications

Bernard Layne, Miami District Director for the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA), said today that the deadline for victims of Hurricane David to file applications for SBA physical disaster loans is approaching.

Anyone who lives or owns property in Martin, St. Lucie, Indian River, Brevard and adjacent counties, and suffered losses as a result of Hurricane David, must apply for assistance by November 13, 1979," Layne said.

These loans may be used to repair or replace damaged or destroyed homes, personal property, businesses, churches, or charitable institutions. The loans are available to qualified applicants only to the extent that the damage exceeds the applicant's insurance coverage.

Victims seeking economic injury loans have until June 13, 1980, to file their applications.

The SBA is still maintaining a temporary disaster office at the American Red Cross, 2506 17th Avenue, Vero Beach, telephone numbers 562-2549 and 567-0734.

SBA disaster loan

Applications and information also may be obtained from the SBA Disaster Branch Office, located at Room 603, 700 Twiggs Street, Tampa, Florida 33602. The telephone number is (813) 228 2978.

$8.99 * A $200 in Dated Register Tapes Per Watch

Genuine SWISS WATCHES

* Turn in $200 in Dated Register Tapes and purchase any one of 12 beautifully styled Swiss Watches.

What adult, teen or tot wouldn't be thrilled with a genuine Swiss watch for Christmas or Chanukah? Impressive? Yes. Expensive? No. Thanks to Winn Dixie's exciting Dated Register Tape Offer. For less than half the regular price, you can have your choice of 12 prized watches designed and constructed by Duntus, Europe's largest selling watchmaker. In addition to their outstanding beauty, Duntus watches boast such quality features as their regular retail price of $18.99, they're remarkable values. But at only $8.99, they're downright irresistible!

Plus applicable state and local taxes. Offer starts Thursday, Nov. 8th 1979 and expires Saturday, Jan. 5, 1980.

Here is how this spectacular offer works:

The next time you shop Winn Dixie, get a tape saver envelope at the Courtesy Desk or checkout counter. After you've accumulated $200 in Dated Register Tapes, turn them in at your local Winn Dixie store and purchase any one of the 12 Duntus watches for only $8.99.

Nothing could be easier, and no gift more appreciated, even if the gift is for you, from you.

All 12 watches are currently on display in all Winn Dixie stores. Look them over to select your favorites. And start collecting your tapes today.

That's a friendly tip from your friends at Winn Dixie.

- "Lady Golfer U.S.A." Marilynn Smith L.P.G.A. is representing Mid-Rivers on tour.
Kelly Childs, P.G.A. is our resident golf professional and available to all area club members for lessons.
- The course is truly "Donald Ross." Marilyn claims it is better than his own Tequesta and may be close to his idol Ross's Seminole. Come play it!
- Greens fee $10.00 at this time. E-Z Go carts $10.00.
- The clubhouse is finished and open for sandwich luncheon. Bar in full swing! Come see the beautiful terrace view outstanding!
- Public is invited to play ... you are invited to inspect Mid-Rivers.

- If you are a golfer and want to live on your own course with private roads, complete seclusion, security guards and be part of another storybook single resident community, visit Mid-Rivers now.
- Our first 200 foot yacht club dock is built. The north fork of the St. Lucie River is ½ mile easterly.
- You are still buying from the owner-developer. Prices are amazingly low compared to comparable property. Comparable? There is no other community with the attributes of Mid-Rivers from here to Key West.

Clubhouse and sales office open 9 to 5 daily. Golf course open at 8 a.m. daily.

Legend . . .

- Steeped in history, the "Sailfish Capital of the World" is known nationally for its miles and miles of beautiful rivers, bays and estuaries.
- Mid-Rivers is limited to 340 equity memberships and only 299 one acre single family homesites.
- Picture Mid-Rivers ... 500 acres ... beautifully landscaped ... bordered on the North by 2 miles of bass fishing Canal C-23 frontage ... championship 18 hole contoured golf course ... all six miles of private roads are blacktopped and finished ... on site DER nature park ... and the residents own it all.
- Mid-Rivers, under the ownership-control of Charles P. Martyn, has reached fruition. Martyn also developed the Jupiter Inlet Beach Colony, the Village of Tequesta, the Yacht and Country Club of Stuart and many other fine residential communities in Florida and New England.
- In just two years the project has been completed ... More than 25 homes finished or under construction by owners ... many more ready to start ... fewer than ¼ of the acre homesites left for sale.

COMMISSIONER AIRS VIEWS —St. Lucie County Commissioner George Price get a welcoming handshake from Robert Mayer, president of the Indian River Drive Freeholders Association, prior to the commission's talk last week, on matters of concern to the residents of IRD

Drive's low profile will be kept, Price tells Freeholders

The Indian River Freeholders' Association got some good news and some bad news from St. Lucie County Commission Chairman George Price at a meeting last week.

The county commission will do nothing to stop the construction of a condominium complex due to be built on the drive south of Edenlawn. At a recent SLC commission meeting Price was the only one of the five commissioners voting against the condo "because I felt it was not maintaining the integrity of the drive."

However, the 68 unit complex will be limited to two stories.

"I feel it is a good plan, as presented," he told the Drive homeowners attending the meeting.

The land, he explained, was a "sleeper" in the county zoning. Located immediately north of the Martin County line, it was determined to have been zoned for business and hotels, a fact few people were aware of until the issue came up. Hence it gave the commission little reason for opposition.

But another tract on the Drive, near "Dead Man's Curve," is now saved from condo development. The parcel, purchased by General Development, was originally planned for high-density development. At the most recent hearing at which the property was considered, Port St. Lucie agreed to keep it to low density, according to former association president John Mack. He urged a full representation of Drive owners at the next hearing of the comprehensive land plan.

Price, who was introduced by Association President Robert Mayer, was questioned about the maintenance of the Drive in the lower "no man's land" section just north of Martin County. Residents indicated they were impatient about getting the strips siding the narrow winding road and the trees trimmed back.

Price told them that much of the work had been delayed by the aftermath of Hurricane David, but said he would make every effort to bring in a machine to do the work at the earliest possible time.

The commissioner was also questioned about the status of a hospital which had been planned at the intersection of Walton Road and U.S. 1. Price explained that the commission had no control over the decision about such a hospital.

Persons or firms wanting to construct a hospital, he explained, must first obtain a certificate of need from the Area Health Planning Council, and this in turn must go to Tallahassee. He advised the Drive residents to get in touch with the people in Port St. Lucie who have been pushing for such a facility.

One resident also complained about speeders on the Drive during the morning and afternoon rush hours, asking Price to pressure the sheriff into better patrolling of the area. Price advised them to call 911 or the sheriff himself to place the complaints, since the commission has only budgetary control over the sheriff's department.

Price was also asked to use some of the county revenue sharing funds to make improvements to the IRD clubhouse, which is owned by the county. The building, an old depot which is a reliquary of the pineapple heydays along the ridge, is structurally sound, but the lighting and rest room facilities are antiquated. Price agreed to have the county maintenance department make an inspection to determine what must be done.

Of cats, dogs and funnels

If you want weather, we've got it. Over the weekend, it was July in November. This week, ever since Monday, it's been the Great Flood.

Ask any resident of any given area, and you'll get a different answer about the rainfall. But a woman in Ocean Breeze Park, whose hobby is meteorology, says her rain gauge measured seven and a quarter inches from Monday afternoon to Tuesday morning, and it was still coming down. And the south Florida forecast calls for a continuation of the cats-and-dogs monsoon at least through tonight and possibly Thursday.

As the front moved in, early Monday afternoon, a funnel cloud was seen by several area residents in the area of the Roosevelt Bridge, over the St. Lucie River. The twister didn't touch down, however, and no damage resulted.

The main complaint comes from motorists and residents throughout the area of flooding, the inevitable result of heavy rains. Indian River Drive turned into a river in several places during the heaviest part of the electrical storm Monday night, and many residents in the section north of Commercial Street and Sunview have been plagued by deep water over their streets, which are slow to drain in every major rainstorm.

The blinding rain caused a spate of minor accidents both Monday and Tuesday, according to a spokesman for the sheriff's department, but none involved injuries.

By Tuesday afternoon, with rains still falling, flooding was heavy in many areas. One of the hardest hit areas was along Hyline Drive in Jensen where water not only flooded a large portion of the street, but also crept into several homes.

Jim Weisbecker of Hyline had a yard full of water, but said it was just below his door. However, he pointed to the homes of Harold Eiden and Eugene Swan and said water was several inches deep inside their homes.

Weisbecker said he and a neighbor had county commissioner Frank Wachs and the county engineer out to inspect a pond behind just north of Hyline a couple of weeks ago. "It was getting high and we asked if they could pump the water into the Savannas, but they went away and we never saw them again," he commented, adding that it was an overflow from the pond that was flooding the street and homes.

A pond off Linda Drive, just north of Sunview Road overflowed, covering a large portion of both roads. And, motorists trying to take the detour from Commercial Street to Savanna Road found Lake Street, next to First National's Jensen Beach branch, impassable. A bank employee quipped, "At least they named it right."

A circuitous route through parking lots had to be used to get around the lake on Lake Street.

Traffic coming into or leaving Leilani Heights was impeded due to flooding of a large portion of the road in the area of the elementary school crossing and throughout the area. It was a common sight to see stalled vehicles stranded along the roadways.

FLOODING was prevalent in many areas of Jensen Beach Tuesday afternoon in the wake of torrential rains that began Monday and were still falling off and on on Tuesday. Ponds and creeks and drainage ditches, saturated by an unusually wet Autumn, overflowed quickly when the rain fell. The menace to traffic above is by the school crossing at the entrance to Leilani heights. (Photo by Bob Fryer)

Campbell is elected JB Chamber president

Richard E. Campbell, editor and publisher of the Jensen Beach and Port St. Lucie Mirror newspapers, was elected president of the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce Monday night.

A torrential downpour fell on Jensen Beach just prior to the Chamber's meeting, and when it was time to start it, only six of the chamber's directors were present. Seven are required for a quorum, but a motion by director Dr. Stan Wampler to waive the quorum requirement, due to the inclement weather, was unanimously approved.

The motion was not needed, however, as director Dave Lamb arrived just in time for the voting.

Campbell headed a list of officers and directors which the chamber's nominating committee recommended to the directors.

Only one change to that list was made from the floor during the meeting. A two year director's post, which had been recommended for Ron Teal, went to Fred Meeker.

Nominating committee chairman Dr. Wampler explained that Teal was resigning, and thus should not be considered for a new term. He suggested that the post remain vacant until a representative from the Jensen Beach campus of Florida Institute of Technology could be picked. However, Joan Batsch nominated Meeker for the position, and when the voting took place, Meeker was included on the slate which was approved.

In addition to Campbell, other officers elected Monday were: Fred Netters, vice president; Gene Greenwood, treasurer; and Dr. Wampler, secretary.

In addition to Meeker's election to a two year term as director, William Keel III and Barbara Torow won two year directorships.

Those elected for one year terms as director are Ted McCluskey, Richard Zurich, Jane Peterson, Art Hansen, and Marg Paris.

Installation of the new officers and directors is slated for next month's annual dinner-meeting.

In other action, a motion by Dr. Wampler to raise the yearly membership dues from $50 to $60 was tabled.

An open house for the general membership of the chamber was planned for after the meeting, and refreshments were prepared. However, the weather was blamed for a poor turn-out.

Dr. Carter named Med. Society head

Dr. Fred S. Carter of Jensen Beach was introduced as the new president of the Martin County Medical Society, at a meeting held Nov. 8 at the Yacht and Country Club in Stuart.

Dr. Carter succeeds Dr. Robert Pare', the outgoing president. Other new officers are: Dr. John W. Eckersley, Stuart dermatologist, president-elect; Dr. David M. MacMillan, Stuart neurosurgeon, secretary-treasurer.

The 1980 delegates to the Florida Medical Association will be Dr. Carter, Dr. James A. Gray, and Dr. William Myers, state representative. Alternates are Dr. Guy Hopper, Dr. Fred Krauskopf and Dr. Richard Penick.

Wives of society members were entertained at the annual meeting dinner.

Town of Sewall's Point won't budge on zoning laws

Last week a heated discussion took place in the Sewall's Point Town Hall over the issue of a misplaced air conditioning pad outside the home of Trudy Kennedy Neese.

According to town commissioner John Guenther, the pad was to be placed in front of the house. Instead, it has been installed on the side, a move that encroaches on the 15 foot set-back. According to town zoning regulations, the set back area must be kept clear of any structures.

Attorny John Fennemen, representing Mrs. Neese, questioned the validity of the ordinance, and asked what logic there was in saying that you couldn't extend an air conditioning pad on setbacks when paved driveways were allowed. He contended that since the property couldn't be seen from the road, it didn't impair with the health and safety of the public. Commissioner Robert Russell retaliated by saying that a similar problem had occured on Emarita, for which a varience was not issued, and that, 'you're saying we should have different rules for different areas of the city.' Again, Fenneman contended that the parcel in question was over 400 feet deep and tested the law to move from a small subdivision like Emarita to this huge parcel.

Commissioner Guenther said, 'Mrs. Neese believes in discipline and adherence to the rules in the real estate industry, as Bob DeSantis found out. However, with town regulations, it seems to be different.'

Commissioner Earl Crawford turned to town attorny James Knight and asked what the best case of action would be. Knight said the town could file for either a misdemeaner violation or go the civil injuction route, requiring the air conditioner to be moved.

Commissioner Clinton Towl stated that he thought the present side pad location was more esthetically attractive. Commissioner Guenther sharply replied that since Towl was a personal friend of theirs, he should disqualify himself in this matter. Towl denied the statement by saying that the Neeses are no more friends of mine than anyone else.

After considerable debate, commissioners told attorny Fennemen that the pad was installed in violation of the building regulations and that legal action would follow if it is not removed.

Also brought before the commission was the proposal to turn the vacant west end of Harbor Bay Plaza into an interior market. The intent would be to partition six shopping spaces into 'high class delacatessen and flower shops,' among others. Commissioner Guenther stated that he saw nothing in the proposed plan contrary to code requirements.

Still a problem to Sewall's Point is the flooding near India Lucie East. Several members of Bessemer Securities; developers of the subdivision; were in attendance in the hopes of alleviating some of the problems Commissioner Russell said, 'it's a very serious problem and we have to do something about it.' Commissioners agreed however, that no one had any concrete solutions as of yet. Proposals have been made to utilize drainage easements or possibly raise the road. However, after discussion, further study into the problem was recommended.

In case you were planning to attend the Jensen Beach PTA meeting Thursday night, Nov. 15, don't.

NEW OFFICERS and Directors for the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce were elected Monday night. Foul weather kept many folks at home, but the new officers and directors who were present are, from the left: William Keele III, director; Jane Peterson, director; Fred Meeker, director; Ted McCluskey, director; Dr. Stanley Wampler, secretary; Art Hansen, director; Dave Lamb, past director, and Jon Chicky, past president. Not in attendance for a photo are: Richard Campbell, president; Fred Nettere, vice president; Gene Greenwood, treasurer; Barbara Torow, director; Richard Zurich, director; and Marg Paris, director.

Work begins on Sailfish Point water, sewer plant

Construction of the Sailfish Point Water and Wastewater Treatment Plant on Hutchinson Island is well underway announced Fred A. Greene, President of Gee & Jenson Engineers Architects Planners, Inc. of West Palm Beach.

Gee & Jenson is responsible for the design of the $1,730,000 facility and will oversee construction, first phase of which is planned for completion August 1980.

Instead of trying to hide the water and wastewater treatment plant from view, Gee & Jenson architects designed the plant as a showcase with the facility complementing the architecture of surrounding buildings.

The Sailfish Point Treatment Plant is located in the north portion of this luxurious residential development," said Greene. "Design of the treatment plant required special architectural considerations so that the facility will blend with the local area and enhance the community."

The Sailfish Point plant will initially treat 150,000 gallons of drinking water per day with a projected treatment capacity of 750,000 gallons per day. The facility will use a process called reverse osmosis which eliminates salt to convert well water into pure drinking water. The wastewater and sewage treatment capacity of the plant is 175,000 gallons a day with an ultimate projection of 250,000 gallons per day. The plant will serve the residential community of 2,500 at Sailfish Point on Hutchinson Island.

J.B. postmaster offers tips for speedy Christmas mail

Jensen Beach Postmaster A. J. Kovar is reminding customers that for the best service this Christmas season they should use ZIP Codes, please their return address in the upper left corner of the envelope, and use proper postage.

"By following these suggestions," Postmaster Kovar says, "Customers will be assured good mail service this holiday season." It is important, the Jensen Beach Postmaster says, that families "double check" envelopes and cards to be certain that proper postage is affixed. Envelopes without postage will be returned to senders, if possible, or delayed by postage due procedures.

When the return address is placed on envelopes bearing holiday greetings, it also helps remind friends of one's current address. And, if the family to whom a holiday message is sent moved more than a year ago, it cannot be forwarded. With a return address, Postmaster Kovar says, such letters are returned to the sender with a notation that the following "order" has expired.

Kovar noted that he will soon beef up the department to handle the increased volume of mail that always comes during the Christmas season. "We will have sufficient people to manage the volume," he said.

St. Lucie; and James Nixon, Jensen Beach.

Elected as a director to complete an unexpired term and to serve two years was Harold Shirey of Nettles Island. James Turbyne of Ft. St. Lucie was elected as a director for one year to serve an unexpired term.

Special music at the annual meeting was given by Dean Peterson of Ft. St. Lucie. Speaker was attorney Evans Crary. Others participating were William McCollough, Chairman of the Church Board and Chairman of the meeting; Robert Brien, Chairman of the Property Committee; Frank Chadwick, Chairman of the Budget Committee; Harry Mertz, Chairman of the Fiance Committee; Paul Goodell, Vice Chairman of the Official Board. About 200 attended the meeting.

A salute to Nick

This is by way of being a happy birthday to Nicholas.

Of course, right now, it isn't a very happy birthday, because his baby for which the wishes are being extended is still a shambles, initially left in ruins by Hurricane David and kept that way by long-distance and ineptly bungling insurance people.

But baby will get well again and begin thriving, despite all. I know, because I have that kind of faith in Nick Midelis. The Hilltop House will rise again to all its former glory.

It took the kind words of a very nice and discerning lady at the Elliott Museum membership cocktail party to remind me that this was the anniversary month for Nick's Hilltop, high on a hill north of Fort Pierce. She'd been in Michigan and had missed Hurricane David. We were discussing nice places to dine out she told me. "We always love going to the Hilltop."

It fell my sad lot to inform her she wouldn't be dining there for some time to come, because of the utterly venomous chaos wrought on the beautiful restaurant by David, and his accompanying tornadoes. And I had to add that, because of the molasses slow insurance processing, it will be some time to come before Nick will be able to open the doors and the kitchens to the public again.

The whole debacle saddens me particularly because I have known and loved Nick Midelis and his family for many years since the original Hilltop, a charming hostelry which sprawled down the side of the hill was still in existence and the late Papa Midelis was undisputed maestro of prime rib in the area.

It was a family institution as well as a culinary tradition. But Nick was the only one of the kids remaining true to the heritage. When the old Hilltop burned, in the mid-Sixties, it was Nick who set out, taking jobs as maitre de and manager of exclusive northern clubs, with the goal of amassing enough money to come back home to rebuild a Hilltop of which his father would be proud.

It took several years and a giant mountain of determination, but he finally made it. In November of 1971, the beautiful new Hilltop opened up, and was filled to overflowing with people who had known and respected Nick's ultra-perfectionism, both as host and as master chef.

Since its reopening, until the debacle of David, the Hilltop House has had a steady and loyal clientele, winter and summer. And Nick, generous to a fault, has amassed loyal friends and followers.

Even among some who have been hired and fired in his kitchens. Nick, with Greek volatility, never allowed for anything short of perfection among his employes. The customer must always be pleased and go away happy. That's why, so often, you'd go to the Hilltop and never see the host. He'd be in the kitchen doing the work of some chef he'd had to fire for falling short of the work.

Since the Hilltop was temporarily done in by the storm, Dick has been a captain without a ship. Bureaucracy and red tape are tough enemies, especially for a compulsive man of actions. And, rotten as it seems, he is finding himself being taken advantage of and exploited by some of the very dear ones he has helped so much in the past. That's the most unkindest cut of all.

But knowing our Nick, he'll triumph over this battle, too, just as he has in the past.

So, damn the torpedoes. Here's a toast to your baby's eighth birthday, Nick, and to the joy we'll all share when you open its doors again on your never flagging spirit of hospitality.

Thanksgiving, for most of us Americans, is synonymous with big family gatherings and the groaning board. It gets harder and harder to remember that the first Thanksgiving was an occasion to say thanks to God for sheer survival, and gratitude to the Indians for not killing off these intruders en masse.

Over the years, since I was a bride, there have always been the proffered thanks. But the size of the feast was often a moot point — especially after World War II, when price ceilings were lifted and the cost of food began to soar to unconscionable heights. It was in one of those years that I penned a poem that just recently disgorged itself from my morass at home, and which fits just as well today as it did in that yesteryear. It was

MUTINY OF THE BOUNTY

We're going to gorge come Thanks giving—
We're giving our gullets a treat.
We can't afford turkey.
But hamburg or jerky
Or tripe are decidedly meat.

Our board will be groaning Thanks giving—
In awe we will eye the array.
The gravy and mush
Get a holiday rush.
Let the side dishes fall where they may.

We'll stuff us with stuffing Thanks giving—
Put the spuds in a holiday mood
The fare may be starchy—
But whatthehell Archy—
It's food, little brother, it's food.

United Way benefits all

The United Way of Martin County Inc. should be no stranger to any of us. The aggregate, which gives either total or partial support to 12 separate agencies in the county, is our way of having in the American ideal of "love and help thy neighbor."

We of the Jensen-Rio-Sewall's Point area should be particularly aware of the need for such sharing. While there are many wealthy people who tell themselves 'it never did anything for me,' they are faulty in their thinking. More than one out of four people in the county benefit from one or more of the services, and the money all goes to essentials. If it weren't for the United Way, your county taxes could be considerably higher.

Yet, surprisingly enough, though the annual campaign has been underway for sometime, there are many totally unaware of the appeal for funds, although they or their neighbors have benefitted from the services. These are residents of condominiums, here on Hutchinson Island and elsewhere throughout the county. The 'no soliciting' rule has prevented the word from filtering through to them.

During Hurricane David, the Red Cross, one of the agencies played an important role in setting up and manning emergency shelters, where hundreds of island condo residents were fed and kept safe during the storm. Scores of others are served regularly by the Visiting Nurses Association, another UW agency, and lives of many condo dwellers have been saved by the quick and efficient response of the Samaritans, volunteer ambulance service, which also gets UW funding.

In an attempt to reach these people, Lon Wear, chairman for condos and mobile home parks, has made hundreds of telephone calls and has gone out to make personal call on condo managers and association presidents to appeal for a bending of the rules in this mutual benefit cause. The results of his efforts have been disappointing, to say the least. In some cases, he has met with outright insults.

We think it's high time such isolationism be broken down by those in authority in those high-density dwelling complexes. We are sure the condo owners, if properly informed, would be more than willing to give their share, and to support the services which are theirs for the asking.

Bike paths are needed

Though nobody can say so for sure, it just may be that the death of a bicyclist in Rio last week could have been avioded, if only there had been a bike path for him to ride on.

Details of the accident are sketchy, and lawmen have still not even identified the victim. But what is known is that a man about 35 years old was riding a bicycle north on SR 707 in Rio when a motorist struck the bike from the rear. The cyclist was dead on arrival at Martin Memorial Hospital.

The accident occured early Wednesday morning at the intersection of SR 707 and Ixora Street, just across the road from the Lil General Store.

A recently built bike path begins at the Lil General and runs north a short distance.

We don't know for sure whether the man would have used the bike path if he had been able to get that far before he was hit. He may not have. But we can't rule out the possibility that he may have been getting ready to cut across the road to get on the path when his life ended.

The question of what the cyclist's intentions were is one we can never know. However, we can be pretty certain that the man would still be alive today if there had been a bike path for him to ride on and if he had choosen to ride on it.

Jensen Beach, Rio, Sewall's Point, Hutchinson Island and Port St Lucie all have a limited number of bike paths. All of them need plenty more.

Governmental officials seem to be aware of the need for bike paths, and in each community cited above, there are plans for more paths to be built.

Of course, bike paths are not the only item governmental officials are expected to take care of, and if you ask any one of them, they'll tell you the demand for services far outstrips the cash available to provide the services.

So, it all boils down to a matter of priority.

Perhaps the priority of bike paths has been set too low.

But if that's the case, let's not place the blame for inadequate bike paths solely at the feet of our governmental officials.

The squeeky wheel gets the grease, and it just may be that there hasn't been enough demand for bike paths placed on our elected officials by the citizens of our communities.

There is no way to bring back the life of the unknown bike rider who died last week in Rio.

But if enough people speak out and let our elected officials know we really want the paths, and, if necessary, would be willing to pay more taxes for them, we may have our paths in time to save the life of another bicyclist.

Where do we begin?

Every morning, the sun rises in a blaze of reds and yellows, and every shade between, forcing rays of warm light through the ocean layer of clouds that lie between the coast of South Florida and the Bahamas.

The sight is one that renews an innermost peace with the world, a peace that enables the mind to begin its bright journey to the end-of-day exhaustion.

On the ocean beaches at Hutchinson Island, small sandpipers chase the slight foam of the surf that deftly lies momentarily on the rolling wave-swept sand, each dash of the piper, a moving painting of beauty that holds still in the mind, replaced immediately by more beauty in a different scene, much the same as the continuously changing landscapes of the sunrise.

Pelicans glide at waterlevel, their wings seemingly resting on an ocean they never touch, a frightening glide as though it was forever, until suddenly, as if to destroy the impossibility of their glide in the intruder's eye, they crash into the rolling surf, seeking succulent breakfast from the sea.

The hundred silver backs of sand fleas, exposed momentarily by the receding sweep of tide, glisten long enough to tempt the sandpiper again, and the probing flashes of bills into the sand makes the cycle of nature extend and the sand fleas barrow deeper into the drift of sand, following the tide up and down every changing beach.

Seagulls dogfight as schools of something swim by in the early morning light. In scattered confusion, swooping, slamming and dashing over and into the ocean, the gulls fight for food.

Then, like aristocrats walking through a receiving line, the great pelicans, their gullets drawn in, their wings locked in glide formation, move across the scene in a line, glide a mile to the south, flap their strong wings again to maintain speed, and then use the currents of the southeasterly ocean breeze to hold themselves and their formations aloft for another mile.

The sun moves over the clouds, proving them not to be the black, forboding looking structures as before. The clouds are discovered to be white, as the purity of sunshine makes them so in the changing sky color.

And as that sun moves over the clouds in the ocean edge of the world, it reaches out in glittering streamers of diamond light, with brilliance that squints the eyes of the morning intruder.

In that magic moment of day birth, even the sand sparkles as beads of dew catch the light rays of world consuming sun.

The quiet suddenly stops, and the winds pick up, as the silent surf on sand peaks first quietly, then more loudly, with white bubbles of anxious impatience.

The sandpipers dart more quickly, and the seagulls and pelicans quietly move to the west, seeking the still silent river behind the island.

It's morning on the beaches of Hutchinson Island.

Behold the computer!

Imagine what would happen if computers ever got so smart that they began communicating with each other as a massive brain, then took over the world from us humans.

As everyone who has battled a computer over a department store or utility company bill can testify, there are signs that the pesky little devils may already be ganging up on us.

Right now though, we still have the upper hand in most cases. If a computer gets too stubborn, we can pull the plug and junk it, or feed it a transistor to make it well. But our days may be numbered, according to a theory Robert Jastrow presents in an issue of Natural History magazine.

He traces the growth and development of the human brain from ape man to the present and notes that in the last 100,000 years the size of the human brain has not grown at all. And, while Jastrow says the organization of man's brain may have improved since his brain ceased to grow in size, he notes the amount of information you can cram into it will eventually be limited by its size.

But behold the computer!

The first generation of them, made with vacuum tubes, came into existence in the 1950's. By now, Jastrow says, they've gone through seven generations of amazing refinement and they seem to have an unlimited capacity to continue evolving into intelligent devices. Some of the experimental jobs already have the capacity of an entire computer on a single chip of metal about a quarter of an inch wide. And it may not be long before one cell in a computer memory bank will have the ability to both remember and reason.

Today, Jastrow speculated it would take a machine nearly the size of the Empire State Building, using half the electrical output of the Grand Coulee Dam, to produce a computer that would be a clumsy imitation of a human brain. But if man continues to refine the abilities of computers and reduce their size at the rate we have been doing in the short span since 1950, we should have a desk size computer with the memory capacity and some of the thinking power of humans by 1997.

Jastrow figures it is inevitable that we will build ones with minds resembling highly trained PhDs during the early years of the 21st Century, out of necessity to cope with the complexities of the world then.

Jastrow concludes his article by quoting a leader in artificial intelligence research from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who believes we will ultimately create a machine with "the general intelligence of an average human being ... the machine will begin to educate itself ... in a few months it will be at genius level ... a few months after that its power may be incalculable."

After that, the MIT researcher quips, "If we are lucky, they might decide to keep us as pets."

It's a fascinating theory, and it's scary because it all sounds so plausible.

Personally, I hope it never happens, even if that means thwarting what Jastrow calls "the evolution of intelligence."

I'd rather see us simple minded humans remain in charge of the world, even with all our frailties and illogical quirks and unpredictable emotions.

It's not that I don't see any use for computers. We'd be lost in our complex world without them. But they have no soul. They're incapable of love. Or hate. They have no knowledge of good and evil.

And, it's those things, not intelligence or efficiency in reasoning power, that gives us humans our worth.

Now it may be argued that we live in a world with a greater abundance of evil and hate than of love or goodness. But it's our world.

The choice of performing an act of goodness or evil still lies within us. And so long as we humans retain that choice, even if we make the wrong one too often, we possess a value no computer will ever have.

Murphy honors top salesmen at party

Realtor Hoyt C. Murphy held true to tradition on Saturday, by honoring his top salesmen at a combination annual meeting and cocktail party Saturday at the Pelican Yacht Club in Fort Pierce.

Murphy, a veteran of the area, started out 31 years ago as a one man office. Over the years, the organization has grown to one of the largest of its kind in the state with its principal offices in Fort Pierce, Vero Beach, and Port St. Lucie.

The former Tennesseean has been active at the local and national levels. One of approximately 350 accredited Farm and Land Brokers, he has had dealings in both the United States and other countries in this hemisphere. He is a past president of the Fort Pierce-St. Lucie County Chamber of Commerce, and a member of the Rotary and the Elks Club.

CONGRATULATIONS—Michael Brown, president of the First Federal Savings and Loan of Fort Pierce, congratulates Hoyt C. Murphy for the successful year the firm has enjoyed in the past 12 months. Brown was among the several special guests at the annual cocktail party of the Realty firm.

Catholic Daughters select new officers

A new slate of officers were elected recently when the Port St. Lucie Chapter 2176 of the Catholic Daughters of America conducted a meeting.

Members happily welcomed their newly appointed spiritual director, Father John Ryan of St. Helen's parrish in Vero Beach.

The new slate of officers include: Julie Silpeta, first regent; Lucy Manzi, second regent; Helen Skinner, treasurer, Jane Capiello, recording secretary, Bernice Hallihan, monitor; and Olga Poliwka, financial secretary.

Many plans were made for the Fall season, and the group will have a bake sale every third week after church services.

On Saturday, Nov. 17, a yard sale is planned from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Silpeta, 450 N.E. Rio Mar Blvd. in Port St. Lucie.

Mrs. Cappiello recently coordinated the sale of Christmas items with a percentage of the revenue to go to a children's charity.

Real Estate Investing by Paul G. Zinter Realtor GRI

DEALER OR INVESTOR

QUESTION: Even though I don't sell real estate full-time, I do have my license and will occasionally act as a broker in the sale of a house. In addition, I have purchased several small investment properties—two single-family houses which I rent out, and three small apartment buildings. Last year, I sold one of my apartment buildings at a good profit and reported it as a capital gain. Now someone has indicated to me that I cannot take a capital gain because I am a "real estate dealer." First, what does this mean, and second, am I considered a real estate dealer even though almost all of my income comes from my job as an engineer?

ANSWER. An investor in real estate is entitled to report his gain from the sale of a real estate investment as a capital gain, and if he holds the property for a sufficient period of time, he will benefit from the long-term, capital-gains tax breaks by reporting only 40% of the gain. On the other hand, a real estate dealer is one who purchases property with a plan for resale at a profit. The dealer must report his gain as ordinary income and pay the correspondingly higher taxes as a result of the sale.

The fact that you are a part-time real estate broker (or full-time real estate broker, for that matter) does not in and of itself make you a real estate dealer. And the question of whether you are a dealer or an investor has nothing to do with your primary or secondary business. It does, however, refer to your original intent when you purchased the property. If your intent was to purchase the property for immediate resale, then you would be a dealer. However, it appears that you purchased the property for investment. The fact that you sell an occasional property for a profit does not necessarily make you a dealer.

It should be noted that you may be a dealer in one transaction and an investor in another, and the government looks to several items in determining your status. These items include the frequency of sales in which you engage, your sources of income other than real estate sales, and the general stance you take within the business community. The overriding factor, however, is your intent at the time of the acquisition of the property.

Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 334-0747, or stop by:

A Memorial to 'Archie the Greatest'

BY CLYDE E. REDINGER

Because I survived and our archives didn't, I was asked to write about Ocean Breeze's early history of shuffleboard. This vignette is a tribute to that epitome of consistent winners, none other than the one and only "Archie the Magnificent," Faille, who died just five years ago today — Nov 3.

A group photo, published many years ago in The Mirror, will bring nostalgia to present readers. Here you will find the outstanding players of the fifties.

In those days dedicated players all but lived on the courts — and some even died there.

When pennant winning became a habit, we dispensed with our crystal ball.

Archie was the most colorful player in either league. Always a winner and a gentleman, he was a credit to his team and to Ocean Breeze. Oldtimers recall his superb showmanship and exuberance in victory, as he waved his cue high and proclaimed "I'm the Greatest!" It was all in fun but, all had to agree it was not brag, because he could back it up.

He loved to be razzed and heckled and could shed insults and ridicule like a duck sheds water. Holding grudges, repeating gossip, telling off-color stories or criticizing others had no part of his makeup.

Archie never discussed his past, but from a reliable source I learned he was born in Boston in 1900, the tenth in an impoverished family of eleven. Hard work became his lot and his slight stature belied his muscles of steel, developed by horsing pianos and refrigerators to walk-up apartments. But his business thrived. Yankee thrift and frugality eventually triumphed, enabling him to purchase an apartment building which assured an adequate income. His inner drive insisted he perform every task better than anybody else could do it.

Somewhere along the way he learned to dance and soon became an Arthur Murray instructor. Then Gracie entered his life as a devoted wife and skillful dancing partner.

On a motorcycle, with a sidecar, they came to winter in Florida. Their outfit lifted eyebrows, but when they returned the following winter in an obsolete hearse, well, that was hilarious. But no shrewd Yankee could pass up such a bargain — an expensive vehicle, almost new, for $150!

All this was history when we came. Now, comfortably situated in a duplex mobile home, they were driving a fine Cadillac and Archie had become the Beau Brummel of the shuffleboard courts.

Already he possessed dozens of trophies, and horrified fellow players by consigning all, less than FIRST PLACE, to the dump. Henceforth he spurned playing in consolation, saying it was no honor to be "best of the worst."

He taught a beginner's class and methodically worked it all out on a blackboard before demonstrating on the courts. His pupils became our best players.

His success was largely due to sublime confidence in himself and to positive thinking. This reassured his less-confident partner and when the going got rough he would chuckle and say, "Dont worry! You know and they know, we are better than they are." And they were.

During thirteen years they were unbeaten in the Indian River League, until the final meet of the thirteenth year — and that was due to his partner's mistake. It was a great injustice that this "Guinness record" was ignored, but he never complained.

Did ANY team in ANY league, ever come within a mile of such a record?

Archie Faille is now a legend. Our team continues to excel, though, without the glamor and zip it once boasted. It plods stodgily along like a once beautiful clipper ship that has lost its figurehead. Shuffling, for us oldtimers, just isn't as much fun as it used to be (but for that matter, is anything else?) Definitely, though, Ocean Breeze needs another Archie!

Visiting Nurses help the needy and alone

An elderly woman sits alone in her Jensen tiny apartment, watching television to help her forget the nagging pains of the cancer in her intestine.

Another, living in a mobile home, lies in her bed recovering from a heart attack, her life brightened by the frequent kindness of neighbors. And yet another, minus a foot lost to diabetes, reads the paper from which she occasionally quotes to the part-time helper who comes in to do her chores.

All have one bright spot in their restrictive routines — the arrival of the visiting nurse.

The Visiting Nurses Association, one of the agencies of the United Way, provides these shut-in invalids with the assurance of professional treatment on a regular basis as long as it is needed, a service which would cost countless thousands in a convalescent home. And the service is paid for only by those who can afford to pay.

"We serve first, and ask questions afterward," a spokesman for the agency told The Mirror.

The Martin County Visiting Nurses' Association, a private, non-profit organization, gets regular funding from the United Way, goal of which for this year is $145,500. A large percentage of the older patients receiving treatment have their bills paid through Medicare-Medicaid, and some who use the service of the nurses are well-to-do enough to foot their own bills.

But there are also many who can't afford such treatment. They receive their services free of charge. That's where the United Way money becomes essential.

"If it weren't for United Way support," a spokesman said, "these people would be charges of the county."

Which, necessarily, would mean more taxes.

The local VNA office, located on the circle in downtown Stuart, is headquarters for three nurses serving Stuart, one for Indiantown, and two therapists. Patricia Crow is executive director, and Elizabeth Simmons is director of nurses.

There are many ways people can obtain the nursing service, the spokesman said. They may be brought to the attention of the VNA by family or friends, or referral by a doctor.

They don't have to have been in the hospital to get the service," the spokesman said, "but they do have to have the recommendation from a physician."

Smithfield Shopping Center in Stuart will open soon.

Smithfield stores on verge of opening

A whole passel of stores, including a Winn Dixie and an Eckerd Drugs, are on the verge of opening at the Smithfield Shopping Center on East Ocean Boulevard in Stuart.

"We had figured on getting C.O.s (certificates of occupancy) by (Thursday) Nov. 15," commented Dianne Miller of Peter Smith and Associates," but it may take a few days longer with all the rain we've had."

Smith and Associates is developing the 130,000 square foot shopping center, and the prediction of obtaining C.O.s was made by Ms Miller on Tuesday afternoon.

On Monday, before the rains came, the manager of the new Eckerds, Gary Safewright, said he was shooting for opening on Thursday. So, whenever the C.O.s come through from the City of Stuart, Eckerds will be ready to open.

A spokesman for Winn Dixie said on Monday that he did not think the store would be opening this week, but that it may well open next week.

In addition to those stores, there are a number of others which Ms Miller said will be ready to open either as soon as C.O.s are obtained, or very shortly thereafter. They include: International Bakery, Hungry Artist, Cimmarron Jean Shop, Queen's Jewelers, The Beauty Hut, The Tape Deck, Neptune Casuals, Jane Morris Sportswear, The Florida Rag Shop, The Card Korner, Yvonnie's Sportswear, Barrell and Box, Fox Audio, Eastern Oasis, Fabriking, and Toy King.

Additionally, Ms. Miller listed these stores as ones which should be opening within the next months: B Geez's Restaurant, Yakitori #1 (Japanese steakhouse), Mrs. Murphy's Donuts, Cork and Keg Emporium, Famous Brand Shoes, The Town Shop, Natural Eats, Carvel Ice Cream, Commercial Laundry, a triple Cobb theatre, and a First Federal Savings and Loan of Lake Worth branch.

A Kenney's restaurant will open on an out-parcel separate from the budding containing the other stores.

"We're extremely pleased with the people we have had to work with to get this center opened, and we should be full by Christmas. We only have two bays left to lease at this point," commented Ms Miller.

Eckerd's celebrates 1000 & 1 stores

Stewart Turley, Jack Eckerd Corp. chairman and president, today announced that the Eckerd Drug chain is opening 22 stores during the week, bringing the company's total stores to 1,000 & 1.

That total includes a new Eckerds store at the Smithfield Shopping Center in Stuart. It was due to open on Thursday, Nov. 15, but may be slightly delayed in opening due to heavy rains (see related story on Smithfield Center).

Beginning today, Turley said the 1,000 & 1 event will be celebrated for a month in all Eckerd Drug stores throughout the chain's 15 state marketing area. Drawings will offer customers and employees thousands of dollars in cash and free prizes. In addition, a series of month-long sales – the greatest in the company's 27 year history – will be advertised in newspapers and on television, and will feature unusually low prices on many items of merchandise throughout the holiday season.

"We are proud to have reached this milestone," Turley said, "and the give-aways we are offering to our customers and employees are our way of saying thanks for making 1,000 & 1 stores possible."

All customers are invited to register for prizes. Entry blanks will be available in each store and no purchase is required.

Six prizes will be awarded in each store of the chain: A food processor, a coffeemaker, a pocket camera, a hair dryer, a fishing outfit, and a sonic jewelry cleaner. Drawings for these prizes will be held Saturday, Dec 15, at 8 p.m., in each store. Winners need not be present.

The names of the six winners in each store will be entered in a grand prize drawing to be held Wednesday, Dec. 19, at 3 p.m. at the home office in Clearwater.

The grand prize will be 1,000 & 1 different items from Eckerd Drugs or $20,000 in cash. Second grand prize will be "Hit and Here" Chevrolet Citation automobiles; third grand prize, a Datsun B-210 automobile; fourth grand prize, a Boston Whaler boat, including motor and trailer; fifth grand prize, a Sony Betamax video recorder and color TV set.

The big event of the 1,000 & 1 celebration for employees of the drug chain will be drawings for cash prizes totaling approximately $20,000. In order to increase the chances of winning, there will be a drawing in each of the 13 geographic units of the company. First prize in each unit will be $1,001; second prize $250; third prize $150; and fourth prize $100.

A Builder with a difference

The Mirror was invited to lunch at Indian River Point last week, and found in progress a luncheon with a difference.

The guests were not done up in formal outfits. Indeed, some of them sported hard-hats and generous bespatterings of paint. They comprised the crew of workmen who had arrived at work at 7 that morning to get at the hard labor of construction.

These were the men who are building the elegant homes of Indian River Point, and were now being plied with delicious thin-sliced ham, beef and turkey, all the trimmings plus mouth-watering desserts.

Their hostess Ursula Brockmann, designer and wife of developer Fred Brockmann, was tending to their needs with all the solicitiousness of royalty in a European salon.

"These are our family," Mrs. Brockmann told the visiting newgatherers. "They do everything for us, so we like to do everything we can for them to make them happy."

So much so, in fact, that the Brockmanns have turned the downstairs living quarters of their new two-story home over to the labor crew for coffee breaks, and they have full use of the kitchen and dining areas.

When Fred and Ursula Brockmann came to this country, they brought with them their continental hospitality, and they take personal interest in all the people working for them on their deluxe project on the Jensen Causeway.

And they are an interesting group of people, from the top down. Richard Elrod, the contractor, for example, is a former writer and has had articles published in national magazines. He's been in the building trade for 35 years, and finds in it a camaraderie rare among other groups of working people.

Two of the construction men, David and Shryl Wilson, are ordained ministers in the Church of Christ, and another is an accomplished musician. The Brockmanns, both respecters of talent in their fellow man, have a deep respect for their crew's personal and professional abilities.

Brockmann, a mild-mannered, pleasant man with an aura of international assurance, is used to dealing with business people at all levels. An attorney, before coming to the United States he was in charge of buying and selling complete factories all over the world.

"We've been everywhere but in Australia," he told the Mirror.

Of one of his trips to Moscow, he said "there are only two things good in Russia — the Bolshoi Ballet and the caviar and vodka."

He tells with amusement of their difficulty in placing an order in a Moscow restaurant. •

"We ordered the cavier, and thought it would be good to have with it a hard-boiled egg," he said in his soft German accent. "The hard-boiled egg — it didn't come with the cavier, it didn't come with the dinner, it didn't come with the dessert — it came with the bill."

The egg went into Ursula's fur coat pocket, to be eaten the next night with caviar, before the opera.

Ursula, an artist, is having a hey-day with the design and interior decor of the Indian River Point luxury homes, 13 out of the 55 units of which have already been built. Ursula's designs and other art work are known in Paris, Rose and New York.

But she's leaving plenty of leeway for the buyer's individual taste.

"We're building for immediate occupancy," she said. "They can either buy completely furnished or, if they buy in advance, they may have their own choice of color and materials."

Those who decide to become Indian River Pointers will find the community swimming pool and the tennis courts all ready for them. Many of the residences also have individual patio pools as well.

Several local business people are opting for Indian River Point homes as their permanent residences. Perhaps they are as in love with the concept as Ursual herself.

"It's like going to work, and coming home every day to vacation," she said, sweeping her slender hand toward the ever present view of the Indian River.

MOMENT OF LEISURE—Ursula Brockmann, designer and wife of developer Fred Brockmann of Indian River Point, right, shares a moment of luncheon conversation with secretary and gal Friday Marilyn Skoffington, right, and one of the employes working on the causeway development. The building team has been "adopted" as family by the Brockmanns.

DELICIOUS SPREAD—Everyone, including contractor Dick Ellrod, gorged on the lunch prepared last week for the workers on the deluxe development Indian River Point. The gourmet feast was prepared by Mrs. Brockmann, wife of developer Fred Brockmann, who is putting up luxury ready-to-occupy homes on the causeway.

FUN FOR LABORERS—The workmen on the Indian River Point luxury home development project shared on excellent lunch with their bosses last week. One group chose the walled patio for dining, as did bulldog Muffy. The developer, Fred Brockmann, is seated in center.

She was a latecomer to the service, becoming active only after her family was grown. The Kochs have three sons and a daughter, and 15 grandchildren.

One son was killed in action in Vietnam.

When Marge got involved, "she figured if you can't fight 'em, jine 'em," Koch smiled. "It was a defensive move."

The USCG Auxiliary serves the dual purpose of aid for boaters at sea or in the rivers, and education.

The flotilla conducts regular classes through the year for boaters, to teach them the refinements of boating, the proper rules of the road, and informs them on the requirements of equipment necessary for safety which all boats should have aboard.

The courses comprise 13 lessons over a period of 15 weeks, and Koch recommends them for all would-be boaters.

"Anyone thinking of buying a boat should take the course," Koch advised, "preferrably before they purchase it."

Members of the flotilla giving the classes are always kept abreast of the latest regulations out of Washington, where the boating standards and regulations are set.

"We also have regular in-house training sessions, so that all members are kept current on any changes," Koch said.

The CG Flotilla 59, established in the '40s, has a record of being one of the most active units along the southeast Florida coast. Its membership, which now numbers 60, is on the alert the clock around for trouble calls from boats in distress. Its two short wave stations are on the alert for any type of marine distress, and messages are relayed to one or more of the 15 available craft standing ready to go out with help.

Two of its members, Vernon Chason and Eugene Hull, have received the CG Plaque of Honor, for "Saving life at the risk of their own."

In addition to the classes, the flotilla also is available at all times to examine boats, to give their owners advice on any shortcomings which need correcting to make them safe.

"It's not an inspection, in that we don't turn in reports on them," Ed Benedict, another member of the flotilla said.

One of the problems making such work for the local flotilla is the inlet, which in past years has taken several lives and wrecked numerous boats.

They're happy that the government has at last sprung with the funding for permanent improvement to the ocean rivers connector, but they aren't anticipating that it is going to solve all the problems for boaters.

"With the improvement, there'll be more volume of boat traffic," Koch said. "A stabilized inlet is no guarantee that it won't be a rough inlet. And it's amazing the number of people who don't know about the channel."

Koch's background attests to his skills and leadership ability in the field of navigation. While still in Merrick, where he joined officially with Flotilla 13 9 in 1963, he served successively as instructor and vessel courtesy examiner, flotilla training officer, vice commander and commander.

After his transfer to Flotilla 59, he has been public education officer, commander, captain of the division including Riviera Beach, Jupiter, North Palm Beach, Delray Beach, Belle Glade, Fort Pierce, Vero and Stuart.

In 1978, he qualified as Auxiliary Specialist, passing examinations in seamanship, navigation, communications, search and rescue, weather and administration.

He reminds boaters that the next course in boating safety will begin Jan. 15, and "no one should put a boat in the water without it."

PREVIEW OF HISTORY—Elliott Museum Director Janet Hutchinson, left, and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Philbrick greet party goers at the door of the museum for the annual membership cocktail party, and stand ready to explain the historic boat replica for which funds from the party will be used. Philbrick, president of the Martin County Historical Society, initiated the concept of the annual cocktail party 12 years ago.
